
"The doorman opened the door and helped us out," said Leda. "Then Mr. McKibben took my arm and we went up the steps."

"Oh, he took your arm, did he? Was he tight?"

"He'd been drinking a lot, but he knew what he was doing. He could walk straight enough."

"I suppose you know what everybody thought when they saw him taking you in like that?"

"Of course. But I was thinking of my brother."

"All right," said the detective. "Go ahead."

"He kept tight hold of my arm and led me right across the lobby to the elevator."

"Did you try to get away?"

"No, I didn't try to get away."

"And then?"

"And then the elevator took us up to the sixth floor."

"And so you went on in with him?"

"I didn't go in with him . ."

"That's baloney, any way you cut it," Duffy broke in.

"That's what I did," Leda said. "He still had hold of my arm when we got to his door, and said, 'You are coming in, baby. I feel lonesome tonight.' And I said, 'I don't care how lonesome you are. Let me go. I'm going home.' And, he said, 'No, you're not!' and started to get out his keys. I jerked away from him and ran up a flight of steps right across the hall from his door."

"Quite dramatic!" Duffy commented. "You certainly have a wonderful memory for conversation—what he said and you said. All right. You ran up the stairs and McKibben after you. How far did he chase you?"

"He didn't chase me at all. He started after me and then gave it up, turned back and I heard his door close."

"He must have been terribly tight to let you get away like that. And then," Duffy added grimly, "I suppose you came right home like a good little girl."

"No," Leda said. "I didn't. I started to and then it occurred to me that Frank might come back there and try to get in and that I'd better wait a while. So I sat down on the stairs where I could see the door, and in a minute it opened again and Mr. McKibben came out. He had a letter in his hand. I was afraid he would see me, so I ran back up the stairs and waited till I heard him come back and close the door. Then I decided that I might as well go home. I looked at my watch. It was ten minutes after two. And I was just starting down the hall to the elevator when I heard a shot."

"Where from?"

"From Mr. McKibben's apartment."

"How did you know it was a shot?"

"It couldn't have been anything else."

"Was it very loud?"

"No, but I heard it."

"What did you do then?"

"I ran to the door, pushed the bell and kept on pushing."

"Why did you do that?"

"I thought it was Frank, my brother."

"Who had fired the shot?"

"Yes, I suppose so. Anyway, I wanted to be sure, and I rang and rang, and finally the door opened and Frank came out."

"With his gun in his hand?"

"No. I didn't see any gun. He just came out and closed the door after him and went over and sat down on the stairs. He was shaking. He couldn't walk."

"He had a right to shake," said Duffy. "He had just killed a man."

"No, he hadn't. He said somebody else had done it. He couldn't have lied to me—not then."

"Oh, couldn't he?" grunted Duffy. "How long were you there?"

"Not long. As soon as he got over it a little, we walked down the stairs to the lobby and came away."

"Anybody see you?"

"I don't think so. We didn't meet anybody on the stairs and there was no one in the lobby."

"And then you came home?" Lieut. Duffy asked Leda Terry.

"Yes."

Duffy laughed. "Just like that, eh? Well, all I can say is that those are wonderful stories. They fit together like cabinet work. I'll bet you stayed up all the rest of the night polishing them up."

"Look here, officer," he began.

"Sit down," said Duffy sternly, and the boy sat down abruptly. "Now there's some questions I want to ask you; in the first place where's the gun?"

"In the drawer of the desk there where father always kept it."

"There are three empty shells," he remarked.

"That makes two. Who fired the third one?"

"How do I know?" the boy retorted. "I didn't. It might have been fired a long time ago."

Gripsholm on Way Toward Lisbon

New York, Feb. 16—(AP)— The exchange Liner Gripsholm pointed its bow across the Atlantic again today, this time toward Lisbon where more than 1,000 Axis war internees will be exchanged for a similar group of Americans, including wounded and sick soldiers held prisoner by the Nazis.

The Swedish ship, carrying enemy diplomats, German nationals and prisoners of war, sailed out of New York Harbor yesterday, assured of a safe passage by all belligerents. It is expected to dock in the Portuguese port about Feb. 24.

In announcing the ship's departure last night, the United States State Department in Washington revealed for the first time that American sick and wounded would be among those being repatriated.

The Gripsholm will carry Red Cross relief supplies and mail for Prisoners of War and civilian internees on both crossings.

Kiwanis Club Donates Centre For Farm Courses

Using the slogan "Every farm machine is a fighting machine and must be in fighting trim when it goes into action in 1944," the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, in cooperation with the Ontario Department of Agriculture, will sponsor Farm Machinery courses lasting two days at the Kiwanis Centre, Dundas Street East, Belleville, on February 23rd and 24th.

The purpose behind these courses is to instruct farmers in the correct and most efficient means of keeping their equipment in first class working condition. The instructors on the courses who will be present at each session will be Mr. Harold A. Porter, Jarvis, R.R. No. 1 who operates a good farm in Haldimand County, Mr. Harry Morrow, Stirling, who also operates a good farm near Stirling, and Lynn Fair, agricultural representative. These men are successful and practical farmers, they have a wide experience with the care and maintenance of farm machinery. They have some very useful and practical information to impart to the farmers who attend the courses. The courses will be conducted by Mr. H. L. Fair, Agricultural Representative of the Province for Hastings County.

Commencing with the 2nd of Februrary, these courses have been conducted at Cannifton, Melrose, Wallbridge, Harold, Tweed, Ivanhoe, Eldorado, Marmora, Bancroft and Maynooth, where they were sponsored by the township councils.

The farmers of Hastings and Prince Edward County are invited to attend these lectures which commence on February 23rd. Luncheon will be served by the Kiwanis Club on both days.

Films Shown.

The members at their weekly luncheon were favored by viewing a film sponsored by the Anacanda American Brass Company and shown by E. J. Beattie, their sales promotion manager, which depicted the many uses that copper is put to in waging war. The film was particularly well photographed and all marvelled at the workmanship needed to prepare the implements of war. Another film on sport highlights was most interesting and another showed the highlights of the war during the past year. Mr. Beattie was introduced by Taylor Franklin and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Harold Seldon.

President Jack McVeigh presided at the luncheon with Charlie Bishop as sergeant-at-arms and Harold Carruthers as song leader. Leo B. Riggs presided at the piano. A letter was read from J. E. Shortt of the "Y" thanking the members and the Kiwanis Queens for their provision of entertainment of the troops at the 'open house' held on Sunday. Archie Harris and his committee was especially thanked for their work in this regard. Jack White, chairman of the agriculture committee, introduced Lynn Fair, agricultural representative for Hastings County, who spoke on the course mentioned above to take place next week.

Collections will continue, however, on a voluntary bases with retail druggists turning the tubes over to wholesalers.

Japs Gloomy Over Reverses

Chungking, Feb. 16 —(AP)— Japanese students are digging slit trenches against air raids in all large cities, the rationing of food and wine has been tightened and arrests for "dangerous thoughts" are increasing in Japan, a Chinese graduate of the Imperial University of Tokyo said today on his arrival in Chungking.

GERMANS STRIKE ALL-OUT ON BRIDGEHEAD

Allied Lines Hold Grimly in Face Of Heavy Pressure

Attack Launched After Intensive Artillery Action; Planes Used Freely

SECOND BIG ATTACK

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press War Correspondent

Naples, Feb. 17 (AP)—A fierce battle has broken the lull on the beachhead south of Rome with the Germans launching heavy attacks in the northern sector, but all evidence today indicated the Allied forces were holding against continuing enemy thrusts.

An announcement from Allied headquarters said the Germans struck early yesterday morning after intensive artillery preparation. Both sides threw tanks into the heavy fighting.

British and American troops were said to be grimly holding to their positions in the face of tremendous pressure.

It was the second all-out German attempt to smash the Allied beachhead. The enemy was said to be throwing his full force of infantry, tanks and artillery into the struggle which was hourly increasing in violence.

Attackers Shot Down.

Enemy aircraft swung into the battle in unusual force, some 130 sorties attacking objectives in the battle zone. But the Allied air forces met the air attack blow for blow, shooting down nine of the attackers and blasting targets in the fighting area.

The beachhead fighting was heavier than in strategic Cassino where American forces still were bitterly contesting the Nazi stranglehold house by house. R.A.F. and Australian Kittyhawks again bombed the ruins of the Monte Cassino Monastery. American planes hit German positions elsewhere on Abbey Hill.

Allied Air Offensive On 15 Rail Lines.

In a day of extensive and wide-ranging air activity, Allied bombers and fighters flew approximatey 1,200 sorties. The enemy railway yards in Rome were hit for the second consecutive day and heavy and medium bombers attacked communications at many points north of the Italian capital. Four Allied planes were lost.

After the long and concentrated German artillery barrage yesterday, enemy shock troops struck in the first phases of the new beachhead attack with tanks in support. The Allied armor immediately went into action against them.

Enemy Attack Aprilia Area.

The enemy beachhead attack came in the Carroceto (Aprilia) area, 10 miles due north of the Port of Anzio. Much of the previous heavy fighting has taken place in that sector and various vantage points there have changed hands several times. Carroceto itself was in German hands at latest report.

The Germans opened the new offensive after apparently recovering from losses suffered in the first major effort to drive Anglo-American troops into the sea, but during the lull the Allies also had built up new strength and were ready for and expecting the assault.

In a statement released yesterday, General Sir Harold Alexander, commander-in-chief of Allied forces in Italy, said the Allies were winning the second round of the bridgehead battle and ultimately would smash their way to Rome without assistance from the Cassino front.

"There is absolutely no Dunkirk here—there's no basis for pessimistic rubbish," he told his troops three days ago.

On the main 5th Army front Allied artillery laid many shells during the day along German traffic on highway 6 leading out of Cassino and two miles westward Allied troops engaged the enemy in a sharp clash on Albaneta ridge.

Germans Hold Out In Pillboxes.

While the Monte Cassino monastery has been reduced to ruins the Germans are holding out in a network of strong pillboxes around it and this has apparently prevented groups of troops from occupying the crest of Abbey Hill.

In Cassino itself the fighting was less intense than on previous days. Toward the coast in the Garigliano area a British patrol cleared the enemy from a house, killing five, several miles north of Suia.

On the British 8th Army front patrols were active, including those sent out by newly-arrived Polish troops. Canadian artillery fire caused a large explosion and fire near Francavilla. An Indian formation dispersed an enemy party of sixty forming up near Orsogna.

The air attack on Rome, directed against the Tiburtina and Ostiense railroad yards, cascaded high explosives into clusters of freight cars, majority of which were loaded with supplies to feed the German offensive on the beachhead.

CAPITAL GOODS TO BRITAIN UNDER LEND-LEASE ENDS

Decide to Keep Lend-Lease Exports Geared to Military Needs

NO CHANGE TO RUSSIA

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP) — Virtual elimination of capital goods shipments to Britain under lend-lease is understood to have been agreed upon by British and American supply officials here. The decision is one of numerous adjustments being made to keep lend-lease exports closely geared to military needs.

For several months the quantity of machinery going to Britain has been decreasing steadily, largely because British plants now have about all they need except for occasional replacements.

The approaching climax of the war in Europe has accentuated the policy of limiting all lend-lease supplies to those needed primarily for war purposes. Lend-lease officials apparently are determined not to leave themselves open to congressional criticism that they have supplied other countries equipment having more use in the post-war period than during the war.

In View With President.

This is understood to be in keeping with a view President Roosevelt has expressed to some of his aides that there must be a clean break between expenditures under lend-lease and those designed to help other nations reconstruct their industries once the war is won. Beginning on the day of victory or as soon afterward as possible lend-lease shipments will stop and capital goods exports will be made on either a cash or credit basis.

Efforts already are being made to return exports to regular commercial channels where possible. One result is that textiles, drugs and chemicals for the Middle East are no longer handled by the lend-lease administration. This change back to normal business methods was made possible by the improved shipping situation.

Similar returns to commercial operations are planned for other items and other regions as rapidly as war conditions permit.

So far as could be learned there have been no major changes in lend-lease shipments to Russia except that the proportion of railway equipment has increased considerably in recent weeks. The Russians urgently need track materials and rolling stock to replace that stolen by the Germans in their retreat back into Poland and the Balkans.

New Drug, Promizole, May Aid Tubercular Patients Says Clinic

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor.)

New York, Feb. 17. (AP)—A new drug for tuberculosis, called promizole, is reported in the proceedings of the Mayo clinic.

It is in use both in guinea pig experiments, where it is extremely effective, and in human treatment where its value is not expected to be known for some years.

The importance of promizole lies in the fact that it is the third of similar new products to be introduced for tuberculosis in three years, all of the same chemical family, and that this last member of the trio is much less toxic for human beings than the previous two.

Promizole is a distant relative of the sulfa drugs, but is really a sulfone, a somewhat different chemical family. Its potency depends on a benzene ring rather than on sulfas. The two predecessor drugs, also sulfones, are promin and diasone. A strong suggestion was made recently that the latter is the long-sought cure for tuberculosis.

Actually all three have cured guinea pig tuberculosis. But human beings with tuberculosis react much differently than guinea pigs and the animal experiments do not mean as much as in some other maladies where they are sure indicators of an important human remedy.

The Mayos have had the same good results on guinea pigs with the new promizole that they got with promin and diasone. The clinic also has used the new remedy on 56 human tuberculosis cases.

Since human beings who recover from tuberculosis may get well without medicines, the Mayo physicians think it will require years before there can be certainty about the effectiveness of the new remedy.

FEWER ENTRANTS FOR TRAINING IN R.C.A.F. FORESEEN

Power Announces That Objective Calling for Air Superiority Now Achieved

CLOSE SOME SCHOOLS

Ottawa, Feb. 17 —(CP)— Air Minister Power said yesterday in the Commons that under long-term war plans there will be "certain reductions" in the number of entrants to aircrew training in Canada and a "gradual" closing of a number of training units and schools.

Skilled personnel in the training organization in Canada will be used to reinforce and enlarge operational units as they become available.

The Minister's statement covered discussions he has held with Rt. Hon. Harold Balfour, United Kingdom Undersecretary for Air.

It covers the following points:-

1. Basic agreements between the United Kingdom and Canadian governments on air training and associated matters have been modified and amended where necessary, "and certain understandings have been reached which confer on us (Canada) a larger measure of responsibility for our own personnel."

2. A joint R.C.A.F.-R.A.F. committee will be established in London to discuss remobilization and pre-demolization training. Canadians, whether in the R.C.A.F. or R.A.F., should have the same opportunities with regard to priorities in demobilization, repatriation and rehabilitation, the minister said.

3. It has been agreed that Canadian Nationals in the R.A.F. who joined that service prior to and early in the war may apply for transfer to the R.C.A.F. Certain Canadian-born women not normally domociled in the United Kingdom who joined the women's auxiliary of the R.A.F. also will be eligible for transfer.

4. The objective of the first three years of the British Commonwealth air training plan—to create a training organization on which could be built fighting air forces equal to those of the enemy—has been reached "and we have increasing air superiority over the enemy in every theatre of war."

5. Personnel necessary to fill squadrons, units and formations planned for the front line already are in the pipeline feeding the air forces of the United Kingdom, the Commonwealth and the Allies serving under the strategic direction and tactical command of the R.A.F.; and at the present time we have the capital and the necessary immediate replacements."

Frustrate Nazi Bombers' Attempts on Convoy

London, Feb. 17 —(CP)— Two attempts by German bombers to attack an Allied convoy in the North Atlantic yesterday were repulsed by carrier-based Grumman Wildcat fighters and escorting Beaufighters of the Coastal Command, the Admiralty and Air Ministry revealed today.

BRITISH TRUCKS AFLAME FROM GERMAN BOMBING

Flames rage from British trucks which were hit by German aircraft raiding the Nettuno sector. However, latest reports from Allied Headquarters in Algiers say the situation south of Rome is "generally satisfactory."

Thinks Reds Will Continue The Chase Through Germany Until Nazis Yell for Mercy

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Observers in London, taking a rosy view of the amazing way the Red armies are ravaging the German war front, are speculating on the possibility of the Russians completely clearing their territory of the invaders during the five remaining weeks of winter.

That certainly is super-optimism, but it must be admitted that it's within the range of extreme possibility—if. The "if" would be a collapse of the Nazi front, either resulting in debacle or quick withdrawal to, say, the Brest-Litvosk-Carpathian line through Poland, which might be Hitler's last stand before falling back to the German frontier.

Whole Nazi Front in Ukraine Shaking.

The whole Nazi front in the Ukraine is shivering like an autumn leaf, and the northern flank, in the Leningrad zone, is in jeopardy. Should Finland suddenly make peace terms with Russia, thereby uncovering the German wing on the Baltic, almost anything could happen. Red airmen again bombed Helsinki, the capital, Wednesday night—just as a reminder that there's no time like the present.

The purpose of this article is not to dilate on this highly speculative contingency of wholesale German retreat, but to consider what happens when the Nazis do make their big withdrawal, as they surely must. Daily one hears the query:—

Reds Will Continue Till Nazis Cry for Mercy.

Will the Russians keep on driving right into Germany, no matter whether the Anglo-American invasion has reached Hitler's western border? Supposing (and this is asked in sepulchral voice) the Red army is first in the Reich?

It would be interesting to know whence comes the odd notion that the Russians are bound to withhold the coup de grace from Hitler until the western Allies are on the ground, or that the latter will hold their hands if they happen to be first in the field. The idea is absurd.

Of course the Red forces will continue the chase until the Nazis yell for mercy. Indeed ,the Germans will be lucky if they're able to make themselves heard.

Human nature being what it is, it's likely that neither the Russians nor the Anglo-American allies would be happy to arrive in Berlin last. All the Big Three would like to be present to keep an eye on developments—political, for instance.

However, the war will go forward hell-bent, irrespective of these undercurrents of human nature.

Presumably the Moscow and Teheran conferences of the big three discussed all the possibilities which could sprout from the war's end and planned accordingly. The Moscow pact pledged unity in war and in peace, and the United Nations will have to place their trust in that.

Russian Punishment For Nazis.

One of Russia's early interests surely will rest in the punishment of Nazis guilty of atrocities in Soviet territory, and there is a terrific black-list of names prepared. The Allies agreed on retribution and that it should be carried out in the territory where the crime was committed.

Time will tell whether the Russians will seize all guilty Germans possible immediately, and rush them off to Russia to pay the penalty. It's difficult to imagine London or Washington weeping over such procedure.

Demand Nazis Repair Damage in Russia.

We also know through a lecture by Professor Eugene Varga in Moscow that the Soviet intends to demand that several million enemy workmen be compelled to go to Russia to repair some of the awful damage wrought by the Germans. The Soviet doesn't want money; it wants sweat and brawn to do rebuilding.

It's interesting to note in this connection the Russians will have a host of German prisoners at the end of the conflict, and it seems possible that Moscow will ask the other Allies to agree that these men remain in the Soviet for work.

Says Papal Villa Cannot Be Considered As Military Target

Washington, Feb. 17 (AP).—The Apostolic Delegate to the United States, the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, today stated on behalf of the Vatican, that the Papal Villa at Castelgandolfo, Italy, could not be considered a military target.

The delegate issued this statement:

"His Eminence, Cardinal Maglione, Secretary of State of his Holliness, Pope Pius XII, has instructed me to state that the recent report appearing in the press and credited to the Allied high command, to the effect that the actual territory of the Papal villa at Castelgandolfo is 'saturated with Germans and therefore subject to bombing', is not true.

"His Eminence declares that no German soldier has been admitted within the borders of the neutral Pontificial Villa and that no German military whatsoever are within it at present."

Largest Appropriation in History Needed for Year 1945

GOES TO CONGRESS

Washington, Feb. 17. (AP) — President Roosevelt today asked the largest appropriation in history for the United States Navy—$30,789,000,000 for the 1945 fiscal year.

The outlay, subject to Congressional approval, would compare with $27,435,037,198 appropriated for the 1944 fiscal year and $23,808,852,547 for the preceding year.

The tentative 1945 estimate for the war program of the war department is $18,001,451,840, compared with a 1944 appropriation of $59,036,297,571.

The tentative estimate for the War Department would be supplemented by the reappropriation of approximately $34,300,000,000 previously approved.

Will Discloses Enterprising Woman Made $1,000,000 Dream Come True

Oakville, Ont., Feb. 17 (CP).—A will filed for probate in nearby Milton told impersonally today how a woman's $1,000,000 dream came true.

Behind disclosure of the $1,038,000 estate left by Mrs. Mary F. Martin at her death here last Dec. 24 is the glitter of gold which lured her from a farm birthplace in Goshen, Ind., to Canada's mining country, where she built the fortune on a $200 "stake" borrowed on some jewelry from a sister, Mrs. D. J. Cashman.

Among the beneficiaries of Mrs. Martin's dream of mining riches are Ben R. Violette of South Bend, Ind., nephew of Mrs. Martin and a military policeman in London, and Geo. Harsh of East St. Louis, Ill. It is estimated each will inherit $200,000—but Violette, who is 26, will not receive his share for four years. The will specifies that Violette receive the money when he is 30.

As pieced together by the Toronto Globe and Mail here, at Milton, and in a telephone call to Mrs. Cashman at her Indiana home, this is the story:

Mrs. Martin, fired by stories of the Yukon and other gold discoveries, worked for a time as demonstrator with a Chicago diamond firm, visiting many parts of the United States and Ottawa. After a trip to Europe, she went to Ottawa in 1906 and then to Haileybury, Ont. where she worked as a stenographer making out affidavits for prospectors.

From Haileybury she went to Swastika, also in Northern Ontario, and opened her own offices. In 1907 she returned to Ottawa to finance a drive to wrest fortune from the earth the hard way. Back in the north, her stake was money borrowed on the security of some diamond rings she had given Mrs. Cashman to keep. In Kirkland Lake she met and later married Ernest Martin, prospector and partner of the late Sir Harry Oakes, multi-millionaire who was slain at Nassau, Bahamas, last June.

"They were a good pair and worked well and hard together," said Mrs. Cashman. "They faced handicaps and bitter cold and won out in the end." The Martins were divorced about seven years ago, after alternating between Northern Ontario and the farm in Goshen.

Mrs. Martin returned to Canada after the divorce and bought a home in Oakville, but Mrs. Cashman told the Globe and Mail, "She never retired from active business."

Mrs. Cashman, who is one of the beneficiaries, listed some of Mrs. Martin's investments as the Wright-Hargreaves and Kerr Addison mines. There was also the old Goodfish Lake mine now the Miles-Martin in which "she and Mr. Martin worked the property themselves with pick and shovel in all kinds of weather to make it produce."

Other beneficiaries were not given by Mrs. Cashman.

A story Mrs. Martin once wrote of her experiences in the Haileybury-Cobalt area in the early days of the famous silver rush differed somewhat from Mrs. Cashman's. Mrs. Martin wrote that she once read of a stenographer who made $50,000 in a Colorado mining camp making out affidavits for prospectors.

Mrs. Martin's first job in Haileybury was in a law office where she made out an average of 60 to 65 affidavits daily at $2.50 each for a month.

"When I asked for a raise in pay that wasn't granted I painted a shingle of my own and opened my own office," she wrote. "My office desk was a store box and the rest of the furniture consisted of more store boxes. Did I make the $50,000? Well, believe it or not, I made it right there."

Blow Up Railway And Road Bridges South From Luga

Other Prong of Red Drive Captures Town of Samolva On Lake Peipus

MANY PRISONERS TAKEN

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Feb. 17 —(AP)— The Red army met increased resistance as it drove upon the great communications hub of Pskov from two directions today, but northwest of the city, where Lake Peipus joins Lake Pskov, Soviet troops who captured the town of Samolva developed a new threat to the Pskov-Riga trunk railway.

Samolva is on the eastern shore of the Lake Peipus Narrows, which are less than a mile wide in some places. Any push across here, followed by a drive to the south, would land the Russians along the railway and highway leading to Riga. All told, it would mean a march of only 25 miles.

This newest threat to Pskov is the most dangerous confronting the city, anchor of the German defence system in that area.

Germans Counter-Attack.

The army newspaper Red Star said the Germans were counter-attacking violently south and southeast of Gdov in the Lake Peipus region, where the Russians are 30 miles from Pskov.

On the twin drive south and southwest from Luga, where the Russian troops swept up 30 towns and villages during the past 24 hours, the Red army met hard going as it pressed down both sides of the Leningrad-Pskov railway and road bridges in the sector and were building tree barricades across the trunk highway, which runs in a southwesterly direction between Luga and Pskov.

The Russians, however, are using tactics which the Germans seemingly are unable to meet—going off the highway to cut around fortified villages and then seizing German communications in the rear.

In the Dnieper bend the Red Army subdued Field Marshal Fritz von Mannstein's heavy tank thrusts north of Zhenigordka yesterday and recaptured two important towns, Yablonovka and Taraschcha, respectively 10 and 22 miles southwest of Belya Tserkov.

Defeated here, Von Mannstein launched new counter-blows to the southwest of Zhenigordka seeking to penetrate Russian lines and relieve remnants of the encircled 10 German divisions near Korsum, but dispatches reported the attacks were repulsed and the toll of Nazi tanks neared 100.

The trapped Nazis were making desperate efforts to get out of the narrowing pocket with their remaining tanks. All such attempts so far have been repulsed by Soviet artillery and mortar fire, while hundreds of enemy troops have been cut down by machine-guns.

Thousands of prisoners have been taken, dispatches said.

A dispatch from the Cherkasy sector to the newspaper Pravda said the condition of the roads, which forced the Russians to carry all ammunition, food and supplies to their advanced units, had prevented extermination of the 10 trapped German divisions before this.

On the most southern reaches of the Dnieper river Red army forces are massed on the river's eastern bank for an attack on Kherson.

U. S. Lieutenant In Captured Post Traps 80 Huns

With the 5th Army at Cassino, Feb. 17 (AP). — German after German would walk up to the door, click his heels and inquire: "Ist der Herr Hauptmann da?"

Koerner and three other Americans were sitting in a captured German commando post on the edge of Cairo, north of Cassino, the German captain who was supposed to be in command was dead.

Koerner isn't sure how many Germans fell into his trap that day but he thinks it was about 80.

Helsinki Raided By Russian Planes, Stockholm Reports

Stockholm, Feb. 17 (CP).—Waves of Russian planes attacked Helsinki last night for the second time in 11 days, spreading damage through much of Finland's capital as unconfirmed rumors persisted that the Finns are dickering with Moscow for peace terms.

Russian air raiders also struck at Aabo on Finland's southeast coast, causing three alarms, but details were not immediately available.

Four hundred Russian bombers made the Helsinki raid last night, Aftonbladet's Helsinki correspondent reported.

Although the attacking force was twice as large as on the previous raid of Feb. 6, damage was less, he said. Twelve persons were reported killed, but the figure on casualties was likely to rise.

International at a Glance

ITALY—Germans open new attack on Allied beachhead south of Rome; severe fighting continues in Cassino's streets; two Polish divisions reinforce Allies; dive-bombers attack Rome railway yards.

RUSSIA—Red forces penetrate to within 30 miles of Pskov against mounting resistance; Helsinki heavily attacked by Russian bombers; 2,500 "tired Nazi infantry" killed in narrowing trap near Cherkasy.

PACIFIC—Allied airmen hit Kavieng, New Ireland and Ponape in the Carolines; British and Indian troops fight off Japanese encircling moves in Mayu Mountains of southwest Burma.

VICHY SAYS PAASIKIVI ON WAY TO MOSCOW

London, Feb. 17 (AP).—A Vichy radio broadcast last night said Juho Kusti Paasikivi, former Finnish minister to Russia, had departed for Moscow after staying several days in Stockholm, presumably to discuss peace possibilities.

NO MORE WARNING FOR ALL NIGHT PARKING

Motor vehicle owners who persist in parking their vehicles on city streets and thereby impeding the progress of the city snow plow operating over local streets at night found police stickers on their vehicles this morning with instructions to report to the police station. On Tuesday night something like 27 motor owners were warned about the same practice when they reported to police headquarters yesterday morning. However, today those found in violation of the city all night parking bylaw were assessed one dollar and let off with a warning. "There'll be no more warnings regarding this practice of parking on city streets all night," assured police officials later in the day.

O.M.L. HAD GOOD YEAR STATES OFFICIAL

In a letter addressed to Mr. H. O. Trusdale, president of the Belleville Motor Club, from Mr. John A. Tory, chairman of the Membership Committee, Toronto, in which it is disclosed that the Ontario Motor League has had a very prosperous year. The membership of the League has more than held its own, said Mr. Tory in his letter, and it is as large as in any year in its history. Mr. Tory said that he looked upon the Motor League as one of the finest organizations in Canada, and has every reason to believe that it will be even more valuable in the months and years that lie ahead.

STORMS STIMULATE SALES OF SHOVELS

This sudden descent of winter with its accompanying foot or more of snow has created a boom in snow shovel sales in the city, it is reported by at least one hardware merchant. During the early part of the week city householders and motorists stormed stores in such numbers seeking shovels that all on show had been quickly cleaned out, necessitating breaking out the stores in the basement.

"For some reason or other purchasers seemed to favor the wide bladed shovels," commented the hardware clerk. "But I suppose they did work pretty well on the hardwood floor of the store; when they get into a bank of snow they will find the difference."

D. H. Brown Heads Garage Operators' Assoc. for 1944

Donald H. Brown, garage operator on Dundas St., was elected president of the Hastings and Prince Edward branch of the Garage Operators' Association when members of that organization met in their annual meeting Wednesday evening at the Y.M.C.A. The meeting was well represented by operators of the trade in the district being present from north to Bannockburn, from Picton and Trenton.

Mr. Brown succeeds William Davies as president of the local branch of the Garage Operators and, according to organization procedure, Mr. Davies automatically becomes vice-president. Directors elected at the meeting included Harry Moorman, J. J. Trudeau, Don Brown, Cliff Baragar, Errol Greenleaf, Bill Hopkins, Foxboro; Albert Grindrod, Picton; Ken Vivian, Shannonville; Charles Derry, Madoc; Felix Lesage, Tweed; Fred Wright, Brighton; Claude Graham, Trenton; Cecil Baker, Stirling and Basil Vandusen, Marlbank. Mac Hill was re-appointed as secretary-treasurer.

Owing to the late arrival at the meeting of President Davies, Mr. J. J. Trudeau acted as chairman and introduced the guests to the members. President Davies, upon taking over, reviewed the year's activities and Mr. Trudeau presented the organization's financial statement. On motion of Harry Moorman, members voted to donate $20 to the current campaign to provide comforts for the corvette to be named "Belleville."

Guest speaker of the evening was Mr. J. Reid, manager, of the Garage Operators' provincial organization. Mr. Reid spoke briefly on membership, stressing that members receive the greatest value from any organization by giving. He indicated that a motion to make mechanics' certificates compulsory will soon be coming before the Ontario House and he saw no reason why the bill would not be passed.

In closing, Mr. Reid referred briefly to the progress being made toward national organization, indicating the Maritime Provinces had shown themselves as very receptive to the idea. Dependability and man's word is the hallmark of character, he said. Dependability is one of the greatest of human assets.

Representatives of the Ford Motor Company were on hand with film strip slides on engine tune-up, carburation and ignition, which received strict attention from the members and from several motor mechanics, students from the Belleville Collegiate, who were present at the meeting.

Veterans Send 'Fags' Overseas

With one shipment being sent to far off Ceylon to LAC. J. E. Samain, eighty other individual shipments of 300 cigarettes were sent to Belleville and district boys serving in all theatres of war through the Army and Navy Veterans, Unit 201 Fag Fund this week, according to the announcements of Secretary James Lazenby. This semi-monthly shipment added 24,400 more smokes to the rapidly growing list of cigarettes sent overseas through the local Vets' Fag Fund.

With regularity, Secretary Lazenby receives replies from district lads overseas, thanking the Vets for their thoughtfulness in sending fags to the troops and in each case urging the continuance of such practice. "Next to news from home, cigarettes are the great morale builders," they all assure.

The list of 81 district lads sent 300 cigarettes each through the Vets' Fag Fund this week included: M. S. Kimmerly, N. A. Gerow, M. W. Brooks, R. S. Ashley, Walter Rodgers, A. W. Rump, H. R. # HMCS Belleville May Be 'Adopted' As Well As Sponsored Plan Now Considered by Fund Committee

It was learned today that suggestions have been made to the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Committee asking them to "adopt" the "BELLEVILLE" as well as "sponsor" it, as was the original plan. This further development will be brought up for thorough discussion at the meeting of the committee this afternoon. Members of the committee already feel that even the additionl amount, from $6,000 to $7,000 total, required to also adopt Belleville's fighting ship will be over-subscribed by public spirited and patriotic citizens.

Since the opening of the campaign on February 2nd, the sponsoring has been discussed in every phase, the equipment and furnishings to be placed aboard, the types of clothing to be supplied, and all other factors which enter into the sponsoring of a naval vessel. In the minds of those who made the suggestion of "adopting" the ship, sponsoring the "BELLEVILLE" and equipping it to perfection would seem like only a half-finished job; the ship would take to the sea lanes and would eventually be adopted by some other town or city and the original effort put forth by the City of Belleville and her citizens would be obliterated under the continuing flow of comforts and necessities to the men who would comprise the ship's company. Further details will be forthcoming following the meeting of the committee today.

Continuing in the same manner as on previous days, citizens, organizations an others in the city are sending in their contributions to the fund, showing a substantial increase with each release from the committee treasurer's office. Today's donations are as follows:

Boxing Bouts Staged at I.T.S.

That the manly art of self-defence is gaining favor with members of the R.C.A.F. training station personnel is being well demonstrated by the number of boxing bouts that are being staged at stations in the immediate Belleville district. First it was the Trenton stations which took to boxing in a big way, then along came Mountain View with No. 5 I.T.S. being the latest added to the list.

Wednesday evening saw the first boxing bout to be staged at No. 5 I.T.S. and from the interest taken by station officers and personnel in the initial endeavor, future bouts will not lack because of the lack of spectators. Last night's bouts between No. 1 and No. 2 Squadrons were organized by Sgt. Walling under the general direction of PO. Cuttrice and were staged through the kind permission of Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, commanding officer. The station C. O. presented the crests to the winning boxers following the bouts.

Bouts were as follows:

148—AC2 Martineau decisioned AC2 Pearson.

160—AC2 Baizan decisioned AC2 Charters.

148—AC2 Adams decisioned AC2 Young.

148—AC2 Benest vs. AC2 Cloutier, draw.

Referee for the bouts was the station P. T. instructor Cpl. Hart, while the judges were Squadron Leader Fortune, Flt. Lt. Archer and Sgt. J. Samain. Timer was PO. Cuttrice. Length of the bouts were three one and one half minute rounds with the complete card being run off in an hour and a half.

Station officials are very enthusiastic about the bouts as was indicated by the fact that about 75 percent of the officers attended the initial card. Bouts will be held every second week, it was stated, with entrants from headquarters squadron to be included in the next card.

Richard Stapley Home in Thurlow Twp. Is Burned

Believed to have started from a defective chimney in the upstairs attic, fire Wednesday evening, completely destroyed the Richard Stapley residence in Stoney Lonesome, together with a considerable portion of the household furniture.

The father and mother were away at the time the fire started around nine o'clock, only their small son and his uncle being in the house. When neighbors noticed the fire the roof of the two-storey frame dwelling was all ablaze and efforts were concentrated on saving the downstairs furniture.

The Belleville Fire Department was called to the scene of the blaze but lack of water prevented successful fighting of the flames. The house is well outside the city limits and no water pressure was available, while wells in the immediate vicinity were either dry or not containing sufficient water to be of any use. Absence of any wind possibly saved other dwellings from falling prey to the flames but watchers were considerably aided through the fact of rooftops being covered with snow.

According to Fire Chief William Lynch practically all the furniture in the downstairs of the home was saved from the flames as neighbors quickly gathered to render what assistance was possible. Also some of the upstairs furniture was saved, it was reported, but much of the family's personal belongings and bedroom furniture was burned.

There are two children in the Stapley family, the small boy who was at home when the fire broke out, and a baby, now a patient in the Belleville General Hospital. It was not learned whether there was insurance carried on the residence and household contents.

Picton and District

Special Program Put on by Regt.

Picton, Feb. 17. The strength of "C" Company, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, R.F., was increased by several recruits following a special program at the Armouries, Tuesday night. Following drill and instruction in bayonet practice, sports were conducted. Two sound films were shown by members of the Royal Air Force. Coffee, weiners and buns were served members and guests under the direction of C.Q.M.S. Frank Starr. The holding of this special evening arose out of a suggestion by Lt.-Col. A. V. Yates, V.D., that the strength of the local company could be built up through receiving volunteers as recruits, in the minimum age groups.

Will Donate 25% Of Net Proceeds To Corvette Fund

On authority from Lt.-Col. B. C. Donnan, Officer Commanding, The Argyll Light Infantry (T), the chairman of the finance committee, Major B. C. Sisler, announced that 25% of the net profits derived from the Armouries Carnival to be held in the Belleville Armouries early in March, will be donated to the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Fund. Prior to this announcement the net profits were to be turned over to the Regimental Funds to be used for entertainment and purchase of sports equipment, but the consideration of this purposed contribution was considered in order and in accordance with what is being done by the civilian population of the city. With this donation, Lt.-Col. Donnan wishes the "BELLEVILLE" good luck and success.

Nearly 60,000 Involved In Record Berlin Raid

London, February 17. (CP)—Nearly 60,000 men were involved in the tremendous task of carrying out Tuesday night's R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. raid on Berlin, history's greatest aerial assault.

One station commander said approximately fifty men were working on the ground for every bomber that got into the air.

It took 4,000 men about five hours to load the bombs.

Some 7,000 flying personnel were briefed for the raid.

The planes used well over 1,000,000 gallons of gasoline, many thousand gallons of oil and a great volume of fluid for their hydraulic undercarriages, de-icing systems and various pumps.

Among the advance chores were the preparation of 7,000 flying suits and the loading of 750,000 rounds of machine gun ammunition.

Britain Gigantic Airfield

A cable from London describes the enormous effort expended by Britain in providing airfields for the ever mounting attack upon Germany.

While Berlin still burns from the R.A.F.'s latest blow, few people are aware of the colossal effort in enabling bombers to be marshalled from forty to fifty airfields for a single attack. This effort is illustrated by the following facts, partly included in a London Times story.

The R.A.F.'s average airfield is two by two-and-a-half square miles in area, surrounded by a five-mile long perimeter track fifty feet wide. Inside there are three runways, one 2,000 yards, two 1,400 yards, all 50 yards wide. Larger airfields have four runways three thousand yards by one thousand yards. The total area of the runways and perimeter tracks of British airfields are nearly one hundred and sixty million square yards, equivalent to nine thousand miles of road thirty feet wide. The total area of all British airfields is 250,000 acres, equivalent to 196 airfields of average type described, although size variations mean that the actual number is far larger. The average airfield costs one million pounds stirling to two million pounds. The total cost to date is six hundred and fifteen million pounds, of which four hundred and ninety-seven million pounds were spent on R.A.F. airfields, the rest being lend-lease to the United States.

To construct these airfields has cost Britain a vast effort. Runway concrete averages nine inches thick. This required thirty million tons of materials for all airfields, partly supplied from bomb-rubble. London alone supplied one-and-a-quarter millions of tons of hard core for this purpose. For six of over one hundred airfields built for the United States A.A.F., the material used would fill a lorry convoy 22,000 miles long. Vehicles hauling the material covered over 25,000,000 miles, equivalent to 1,000 times around the world. In addition, airfield buildings, including one million accommodation huts, used up 18,000,000 cubic feet of wood, one million tons of steel and cast iron The six U. S. airfields mentioned required over 2,000 buildings. British factories contributed 336,000 miles of cables, nearly 7,000 electrical transformers and so forth.

This gives an impression of the colossal effort by which the people of Britain have turned their island into one vast airfield. This is to be compared with the effort in the war of 1914-1918 which produced seven airfields as against three hundred and one airfields.

After this war Britain will have an immense civil air fleet which will operate from this airfield island.

Invention, Science Help

A new collapsible tube containing shaving cream or toothpaste can be bought now without the requirement of turning in an old one because science has succeeded in making a tube of the kind with very little tin. Voluntary collection will continue in used tubes, especially of older ones which contain tin to a very high percentage. In this way, while there is no obligation to return an old tube when securing a new one, people still have the opportunity to hand in what older used tubes containing a much higher percentage of tin than the new ones.

So science has helped again in bringing back to ordinary living known before the war in as far as collapsible tubes are concerned. At the same time it is helping win the war by the great reduction of the amount of precious tin required for the new tubes.

Necessity again is the mother of invention, to use an old adage, never so true as today.

Signs in Germany

Signs of German inflation are seen in the relative values of the German mark and safety razor blade. The latter has greater exchange value than the mark.

Many remember the soaring flight of the mark after the last war when millions in marks were worth zero. Germany was intentionally inflating and robbing the world. It was part of the program of Germay then, just as Germany today is the anti-social nation, rooted in selfishness and all its associated evils, and with her hand against the world.

Germany is getting to the stage where things are beginning to pinch as they cannot help doing with Germany's pouring out of everything she has made in the past twenty-five years into the furnace of war and everything she has been able to rob from the fields, forests and manhood and womanhood of the people of the occuuled states. Her evil forces have been inflated and everything thrown on the hazard as a gambler would throw away wealth in order to carry on a war to dominate the spirit and the manhood of the world.

What her currency will ultimately do time will show.

Lighthouse Beam Cast 22 Miles

("Ships" Magazine, New York)

The United States lighthouse service in peacetime operates 33,000 navigational aids ranging from lanterns hung on posts along our great rivers to the 9,000,000 candle power beam of a modern lighthouse.

With our entrance into the war the lighthouse service came under the direction of the United States coast guard and the jurisdiction of the United States navy.

The peacetime operation of a lighthouse was made possible by a nineteenth century physicist who discovered that lenses and prisms could be so arranged and manipulated that they would collect and concentrate even a feeble flame and multiply it into a tremendous beam of many candlepower.

Typical of what his discovery made possible is the $20,000 lens of the Navesink, (N.J.) lighthouse, where a modest 2.400 candlepower lamp is magically multiplied into 9,000,000 candlepower, a light that probes easily through 22 miles of darkness.

This light revolves in a pot of lubricating mercury, six times a minute. It sends beams in two directions at once giving two flashes to a revolution. It flashes at the same spot every five seconds thus giving ships near Sandy Hook vital directional information.

Dutch Plan to Rebuild

Amsterdam, mindful of the fate of Rotterdam, which was wrecked with bombs when the Germans invaded the Netherlands in 1940, is taking steps to facilitate restoration of historic buildings, should serious war damage be caused. The city set aside $16,200 not long ago to collect photographs, measurements, and other data which would help in rebuilding public structures. To this has been added $54,000 earmarked to carry on a similar work for private buildings of historic distinction. Originally, the work was to encompass 50 municipal buildings; now it is to be applied in addition to 395 privately owned structures, including many churches, ancient almhouses and the old warehouses of the Dutch East and West India Companies.

'The Textbook We Fight For'

(Nottingham, Eng., Post)

Gen. Sir William Dobbie, former Governor of Malta, said recently: "Anything that can be done to put the Bible into the hands of those in the Services—and quickly—will be a very good bit of war service. It is the textbook of all we are fighting for, and deserves special priority like other essentials of war."

BOASTING AGAIN

"Slick as a whistle" and "Smart as a whip!"
Sayings I heard from my grandfather's lip,
Said of my brothers, but never of me.
Wonder how "slick" can a new whistle be?
Still I've the notion deep under my hat,
Ellen Elizabeth's slicker than that!

Spoken of little ones: "Smart as a whip."
Somebody's grandpa first said it, I'll bet,
Or somebody's grandma, more likely, and yet,
Admitting the simile's cleverly pat,
Ellen Elizabeth's smarter than that!

"Slick as a whistle!" That means, I suppose,
Bright-eyed and active and up on her toes!
"Smart as a whip," is the saying of old,
Meaning once only she has to be told.
Listen to me. I am telling you flat:
Ellen Elizabeth's brighter than that!

President Fills Cabinet Posts

Montevideo, Feb. 17.—(AP)—President General Pedro Ramirez of Argentina, rid of conflicting elements who brought on this week's governmental crisis, appeared today to have gained a breathing spell in which to chart his future policies.

Appointments announced yesterday to fill three cabinet vacancies were regarded here as merely deferring a clear-cut decision on how Argentina will stand in the international picture.

The appointments apparently represented an attempt to compromise between the demands of the opposing parties, one of which was said to have urged a declaration of war on the Axis and the other to have strenuously opposed any such action.

Japanese Kill Missionaries, German Citizens

Somewhere in New Guinea, Feb. 17. (AP)—Japanese soldiers on New Guinea robbed, imprisoned and killed missionaries despite the fact that most of them were citizens of Japan's Axis partner, Germany.

The disclosure by missionaries who escaped from the Japanese was contained in a dispatch written last Aug. 31 by Vern Haugland, Associated Press War Correspondent, but released only today.

Haugland was told by Father Anthony Gruysberg, the only member of the group who spoke English, that the Japanese imprisoned over 200 missionaries, mostly German Nationals, from Madang to Wewak.

"Only 20 or so missionaries have been rescued or escaped from our area into Australian territory", Father Crusyberg related He was in a party of eight, including five nuns, which trudged for four months through the wildest part of Central New Guinea to reach an Australian camp.

TIRES AVAILABLE IN FALL

Toronto, Feb. 17 (CP)—Tires for ordinary passenger automobiles will be available by October, November or "certainly by December, 1944," J. Penfield Seiberling, of Akron, O., president of the rubber company of that name, last night told the Canadian section of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Junior Officers In Canadian Army Will Be Loaned

Ottawa, Feb. 17 —(CP)—A large number of Canadian junior officers will be loaned to the British army under a plan to go into effect immediately, Defence Minister Ralston told the Commons yesterday.

The Canadian army, he said, has a surplus of officers. This would allow many officers to get battle experience who would otherwise have little prospect for some time to come. The transfers would be voluntary on the part of the officers and for a minimum period of three months.

BY-ELECTION ANNOUNCED

Toronto, Feb. 17 (CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario announced yesterday a by-election will be held next March 20 in Haldimand-Norfolk riding to fill the vacancy left by the death last week of Wallace W. Walsh, who had been elected as Progressive Conservative member for the riding in the provincial electin last August. The Premier issued a statement saying that the writ for the by-election had been issued yesterday and that nomination day would be Monday, March 13.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

"This world is wild as an old wives' tale,
And strange the plain things are,
The earth is enough and the air is enough
For our wonder and our war".
—By G. K. CHESTERTON.

Weep no more, my lady, for the romantic days of sailing ships. You won't, once you read about travelling conditions of a trans-Canada voyage. There were no deck chairs for the long hours of relaxation in the sun, just benches which as often as not were planks laid upon boxes containing live chickens or other poultry. You see, every inch of space in the ship was at a premium. In fact, it was stipulated by an Act of 1835 that the number of passengers must not exceed one for every ten feet of lower deck unoccupied by goods; nor was a ship to leave port with more than three persons on board for every five tons of registered burden.

"Take plenty of food" was the advice given to passengers who intended supplying their own meals for the Atlantic crossing. Fifty days was the shortest period for which it was safe to provide. From London the passage sometimes took seventy-five days. . . . Arrived in the New World, emigrants proceeding to Upper Canada usually loaded up with more foodstuffs, this time at Montreal. Here they purchased such things as tea, butter, sugar and bread to last until they reached Kingston. The reason for this "refueling" was that the necessaries were less expensive and of better quality than those which could be obtained along the route.

There must have been great activity in the bakeries of England and Scotland just before the big sailing ships pulled up anchor. Here's what each vessel was supposed to store away for the voyage: Seven pounds' weight of bread, biscuit oatmeal or bread stuffs to every week for each passenger; potatoes were also to be included to one-third of the extent of supply, but seven pounds' weight of potatoes to be reckoned equal to one pound of bread or bread stuffs. The trip to North America was to be computed at ten weeks, by which each passenger was to be "secured" fifty gallons of water, or five gallons per week, the water to be carried in tanks or sweet casks.

Deerskin was used in a multitude of ways in olden times. The Indian woman pounced on the pliant leather and cut it into straps for her papoose's pack. The straps went around her neck and supported the upright basket on her back. In this basket the carefully swaddled infant was held by flexible hoops that prevented a "spill". The baby faced out and watched the passing scene with round, wondering eyes. His clothes were usually elaborately worked with coloured beads and other embroideries, a labour of love for the doting mother.

The squaws, complete with smiling papooses, often came shyly to visit with the settlers. They did not wait until the new homes had been raised in the wilderness, but sat and watched while the logs were hoisted into place and "plaster" was applied in the cracks. The mortar was a mixture of clay and lime. If the pioneer was ignorant of the dangers of a sudden frost, he was sometimes forced to give up his task before he was half finished. A plunge of the temperature—and the plaster was as hard and unmanageable as ice.

Few log-cabin owners bothered to bolt their front doors; after all there was little to be stolen! When a move was made to larger frame or brick houses and the heirloom type of furnishings was installed, there grew a demand for locks and keys. The older types were large and cumbersome. These were replaced by the first of the devices to trouble modern burglars' picks. Then came combination locks, time locks and "master" keys. The Yale double dial lock is a double combination lock with two dials, each operating its own set of tremblers and bolts. Two persons, each with his own combination, must be present at a certain time to open it. Or one person only may possess both combinations.

TUCKAHOES

"Tuckahoe" is an old nickname for the poor class of people living in southeastern Virginia.

The term, now seldom heard, was at one time virtually synonymous in some sections of the South for "poor white."

"Tuckahoe" is believed to be derived from an Indian word meaning globular and originally was applied to various bulbous roots used as food by the aborigines in that region.

Chief among the edible bulbous roots so designated were those of the golden-club or floating arum and the Virginia wake-robin.

But the name also was applied to the Virginia truffle, a curious fungus growth found under the soil in the Southern states bordering on the Atlantic.

The Indians and early settlers were fond of these Tuckahoes or truffles.

Tuckahoes are the only variety of truffles native to America and like the truffles of Europe they were located by dogs and hogs trained for the purpose.

In its typical form, Tuckahoe consists of fungus growing on tree roots and possesses a white, dense and edible thalus covered with a hard, barklike coat.

It has no leaves or stem to connect it with the sources of light on the surface.

Captain John Smith wrote that some "would gather as much Tockwogh roots in a day, as would make them bread a weke." He also spelled the word "Tockawhoughe."

In his history of Virginia, R. B. Beverly explained that Tuckahoe is "a tuberous root; which, while crude, is of very hot and virulent quality, but they (the Indians) can manage it so, as in case of necessity to make bread of it."

In time "Tuckahoe" came to signify Indian bread or Indian loaf.

Then it was applied as a sort of nickname to the inhabitants of Lower Virginia because their poverty compelled them often to resort to Tuckahoes or Indian bread for sustenance.

Wrote Schele de Vere in 1871: "He is nothing but a poor 'Tuckahoe,' was often heard during the late Civil War, when a peculiarly sad-looking conscript came in from the Lower James, apparently half-fed only, and shaking with 'chills and fever'."

Poor land in southeastern Virginia was also sometimes called Tuckahoe.

How Research Helps to Prevent Decay of Teeth.

There was a time when all we expected from the dentist was that he simply pulled teeth, made plates, and filled cavities. As dentistry is an actual or integral part of medicine, it is only natural that for many years our dentists should have been keeping pace with other branches of medicine. And, just as physicians are striving to prevent disease, so have our dentists been doing much research work on the prevention of tooth decay and other disturbances of the teeth and gums.

In the Journal of the American Dental Association, J. R. Blayney, D.D.S., of Chicago, writes of the contributions that research has made to assist the practitioner in the control of dental decay. Dr. Blayney speaks of the organism or organisms that cause the teeth to decay, the effect of acid foods, the proper brushing of teeth which prevents acid conditions, the value of the right kind or protective foods, the effect of vitamins particularly vitamins D and K, and other contributions.

In his summary, Dr. Blayney outlines the help research work has given the dentist and his patients.

1.—It appears from every angle that decay of teeth results from harmful organisms. Although this has been believed by many for fifty years, research workers now feel that it has been definitely proven. Just which organism or organisms are to blame wholly or in part still remains to be investigated.

2.—The reports from chemists, bacteriologists (research works on organisms), and nutritionists (research workers in foods), all tend to support the statement that young children should be trained to develop normal food habits, especially in regard to enjoying all types of foods and to regular hours of eating. Also candy or other carbohydrate is less likely to cause decay if the teeth are regularly and properly brushed.

3.—Treatment by drugs to prevent decay of teeth is still in the investigative stage; more investigation is required before any definite statements can be made.

4.—While it is admitted that it is impossible to keep the mouth free of all organisms, the dentist can advise his patient as to the importance of eating an all round diet, regular eating habits, and by no means least, ways and means of thoroughly cleansing "all" tooth surfaces.

Avoid Nervous Wear and Tear

K. T. Stevens relaxes With a Book When Not Working on the Set.

By HELEN FOLLETT

DON'T DO your work breathlessly, lady. Don't let yourself get fussed and in a stew. You know how it is when everything happens at once. Getting the children off to school; sewing a button on the Daddy's overcoat just as he is about to dash out; letting the dog in and out is all in the day's work. So take it easy. If you don't, you'll get grey hair and wrinkles and maybe you'll lose your teeth. If that prospect doesn't scare you into being a nice, calm girl, I don't know what will.

Tension is a source of weakness. Nobody can stay keyed up beyond a certain time, without suffering exhaustion. Relaxation creates strength because it quiets the mind, gives one a sense of peace. Women who drive themselves every minute do themselves an injustice. They would get just as much work done if they hurried less, and they would have sounder nervous systems.

A new profession has developed to meet the needs of this tense period. We refer to the relaxation expert who teaches tired business men how to go limp. After all, it isn't such a new idea. In beauty shops, the first thing the cash customer is told, when about to have a facial, is to go into a state of collapse, stop thinking, close her eyes, rest.

Has it ever occurred to you that you should cultivate body control? When you feel as if you were tied into knots, can you make your body feel lose and free? If you can, you have an advantage over the woman who tears through the day's activities, falls into bed so tired she can't sleep.

The idea is to conserve energy. If you fret and hurry, you are using it up unnecessarily, getting nothing from your efforts. The big thing is to learn to work restfully and placidly, without anxiety as to how much work you will get done.

Complexion Packs

There are two reasons for a woman's interest in complexion packs. One, she knows they clean, whiten and soften the skin. Two, because they are a terrible mess, she has faith in them and—no matter how much you scoff and sneer—faith seems to help. We suggest, however, that the wife and mother make a secret rite of this form of beauty treatment. If she doesn't, the baby may be scared into spasms, and papa may lose his mind. At no time, and under no conditions or circumstances, does a woman put up such an appalling appearance as when her portrait is gummed up with cosmetic smears. Nothing that crawled out from under a stone could look worse.

Begin with a clean skin surface. That's the rule for creaming or packing. No skimming over with the washcloth, but a warm, soapy renovation that brings a glow to the flesh. Rinse with warm water. Cold should not be used if creams or packs are on the beauty schedule, unless it is an astringent treatment, when cold water conditions the skin for pore-closing and tissue-shrinking.

First, the good old clay formula, upon which you can depend for results if you would rid the pores of dust deposits.

Get a few ounces of kaolin from your druggist. This is our old friend, Fuller's earth, made clean and sterile. If your skin is oily, mix the kaolin with witch hazel until it has the consistency of whipped cream. If the skin is dry, use mineral oil instead of witch hazel. Spread it on smoothly, with flattened fingers, starting at the collar bones and working upward to the temples and hair line.

Now take up your mystery story and learn all about the next murder while the pack is drying. When it begins to flake, which will be in about half an hour, remove with tepid water, rinse your face well, dry gently, tap in massage cream. You will notice that the pores are fairly free of blackpoints, that the complexion carries a fresh appearance.

The egg mask is recommended for oily skin and sagging tissues. Use the white only; two will suffice. Beat to a stiff froth, and, before applying, frisk an ice cube over the surface of the skin. You will be conscious of a drawing, starched sensation, showing that this good looks aid is working. Remove with tepid water, dry, and employ a brisk five-minute massage with a heavy cream.

Almond meal—if you can get it—mixed with a thin cosmetic oil, makes a marvellous pack for skins that are over-dry or chapped. While it remains on, apply hot, moist applications; give the flesh a good steaming.

Bridge Street Church Young Married Group

Bridge Street United Church Young Married People's Group held its February meeting in the church parlors on Wednesday night in the form of a Valentine box social. A very entertaining program, including the male quartet, the singing Maestral and the magician was much enjoyed. President Harold Mott was in the chair and welcom everyone, including women present whose husbands are overseas or unable to attend. A welcome was also extended to married servicemen in the district who are not able to have their wives here.

A round of humorous games was spent and helped everyone to become better acquainted. The contents of the beautifully decorated boxes were then explored and proved most delicious. The singing of the National Anthem concluded the meeting.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN Health.

Infections of the hands are sometimes dangerous, and may cause permanent diability. Often some of them cause prolonged illness and loss of time from work. Sometimes the infection cannot be controlled and loss of life may result. To prevent serious hand infections, proper treatment of wounds of the hand is important.

According to Doctor Nils L. Eckhoff, of London, if a puncture wound occurs it is a good idea to make the wound bleed. This can be done—if the wound is on the finger—but putting a rubber band around the base of the finger, thus producing congestion. At times the physician may think it advisable to burn the wound with carbolic acid or with heat cautery. The giving of sulfa drugs may also be advisable.

Hand wounds should be carefully examined to see if any tendons or nerves have been damaged. It is a good idea to sew the nerve ends or the ends of a tendon immediately. The operation should be delayed until all infection in the hand has cleared up. In a ragged wound, care must be taken not to cut away too much of tissue, since this would make it dificult to draw the edges of the wound together without causing stretching or pressure. In cleansing the wound, some physicians prefer plain soap and water, while others use antisepfics, such as tincture of iodine.

Blisters at the base of the fingernails are called subcuticular whitlows In treating this condition, Doctor Eckhoff suggests that the fluid be withdrawn from the blisters and an antiseptic applied. The blisters must be taken care of promptly because they easily become infected and the infection may burrow under the nail.

Subcutaneous whitlow is an infection which occurs most often on the palmar side of the fingers, the side corresponding to the palm of the hand. These infections are extremely painful. Unless properly treated, the infection may progress steadily until it involves the entire finger. When there is severe pain present, it means that pus has accumulated in the tissues and must be released by means of an incision or cut. If this incision is made in the proper location, the pus is released and the infection may quickly subside.

The incision should never be made on the front part of the finger because this is likely to endanger the tendons which connect the muscles with the bones, since there is always some contraction of the tissues when healing takes place.

Another common finger infection known as paronychia, is found around the base of the nail. In this disorder removal of the nail is not advisable. All that is necessary is to remove a little part of the front of the nail. This will allow the infected material to drain out and healing usually occurs within from ten days to two weeks. Proper treatment of these simple hand infections will save much trouble.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S NICE TO see some spanking big hats after all the little peewees. A big, big hat in black taffeta with all over stitching and a tall, telescoped crown, was a recent show success.

PERHAPS its because of brown shoes, but brown is the favored hue in almost every style promotion. A beautiful print of brown crepe has a rich rose design in red, pink and off-white with green ribbon garlands and stems. Cut-out roses border square neckline and sleeves.

YEAR-ROUND fashion is the frock in pastel hued sheer wool crepe. A pretty model in dusty pink wool crepe has a collarless neckline, buttons from throat to hem and has ruffles either side all the way down in front. Big patch pockets on skirt.

A GOOD FOUNDATION for the busy woman's wardrobe is a classic tailor-made suit and a variety of blouses and gilets. A wonderful suit is a one-button model with notched, tapering revers, and skirt with kick-pleat in front and back. Gray men's wear worsted striped in white.

NOT SO MANY glove designs as usual, but enough to make it difficult to choose a spring glove. A good choice might be a shortie in suede with bubble stitching on the back and forming a double scallop border down either side of the glove.

Write to Daughter's Fiance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Two weekends ago, my daughter, 19 years old, went with her girl friend to the camp where her fiance is stationed. He gave her a diamond engagement ring. Now is it my place to write to him?

H. B.

You didn't tell me enough about the circumstances for me to be able to give you a very definite answer. If they were engaged before she went to the camp, if you know the young man and if you and he had discussed the engagement, then it would be natural and "motherly" for you to write him. But if you don't know the young man or hadn't known that an engagement existed or was to be considered, then it is definitely the young man's duty to have written you (or telephoned you, if possible, while your daughter was there). He should show his regard and thoughtfulness of his fiancee's family by introducing himself, or if you already know him, by talking over the engagement with you, telling you of his love for your daughter, discussing with you as much as possible their future plans. In other words, he should do his part in establishing a fine relationship between himself and his family and his fiancee and her family.

However, if this letter from him isn't forthcoming, I wouldn't if I were you, stand on ceremony. Instead, take this establishing of engagement relationship into your own hands, and write him that "motherly" letter that will show your fine feelings. Tell him how happy you are about the engagement because of your daughter's happiness and because of the splendid things she has told you about him; tell him how proud you are about his being in the service, and chat with him about your daughter's news of the camp and his friends there and about her visit there. And talk over with him whatever future plans your daughter has discussed with you.

Bride Buys Bridegroom's Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My fiance and I want very much to have a double-ring ceremony at our marriage. I think I should buy his wedding ring, but several of my friends have told me that he should buy his ring. Am I right, or are they?

2. For a formal church wedding church wedding, with a small reception afterward. Would it be proper for my mother to wear a street-length dress?

H. R.

1. You are right . . . it is the bride who buys the bridegroom's ring.

2. For a formal churcr wedding the bride's mother (and the bridegroom's mother also) should, to be dressed consistently with this formality, wear a floor-length gown of the dinner type, or an ensemble of floor-length gown and matching jacket. A street-length dress is, of course, informal attire.

Courtesy Tip

If your behaviour is "cheap," it means that you put no value on yourself, that you don't care what kind of impression you make. What you are, engraves itself on what you say and how you act.

JURY CONDEMNS SALE OF ALCOHOLIC LOTIONS

Toronto, Feb. 17 —(CP)— A coroner's jury last night urged government action to prohibit the sale of lotions containing alcohol. The jury verdict was that Norman McLean, 61, died in Toronto jail Feb. 1 from broncho-pneumonia, brought on by drinking face lotions. Dr. Smirle Lawson, Chief Coroner for Ontario, commented that "it is a disgraceful state of affairs when poisonous concoctions are allowed to be sold to our citizens."

Bloc Populaire Refused Same Status As Other Opposition Parties in House by Premier

Raymond Wants to Know Why He Was Not Invited to Conference

FORMED IN 1940

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(CP Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Feb. 17—(CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King has refused to recognize the Bloc Populaire as an opposition party in the House of Commons to the same extent as the Progressive Conservative, C.C.F. and New Democracy parties are recognized.

The issue came up yesterday when the Bloc's leader, Maxime Raymond, asked why he was not invited to the Tuesday conference of party leaders on granting of leave to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton and relieving him of the overseas army command.

Mr. King replied that in strict parliamentary practice only the leader of the official opposition, Gordon Graydon, should be recognized. As a courtesy and not as a right, leaders of the C.C.F. and New Democracy groups had been recognized since they were elected to parliament as party leaders.

"But," the Prime Minister said, "for my honorable friend (Mr. Raymond) to say that because a new party has come into existence since a by-election the leader of that party should have the same courtesy extended to him is, I think to state a position that is perfectly ridiculous."

Formed in 1940.

The Bloc Populaire was formed since the 1940 general election and has five members in the House, four of them whom were elected as Liberals and later crossed the floor, and one elected last September in a by-election.

The first House comment on the McNaughton situation since the party leaders met to discuss the matter Tuesday came from Mr. Graydon who said he would leave responsibility with the government for deciding whether or not there is further discussion. The Prime Minister accepted and said:—

"I believe that the morale, not only of the people in these countries (Canada, United States, Great Britain and other United Nations) but more particularly the morale of the armies not of Canada alone but of those other armies might be very seriously affected were there to be a general discussion which went into a number of matters that have taken place in the past, the discussion of which might provoke a very serious condition of affairs if begun at this time."

Govt. Has Nothing to Hide.

In the short exchange which took place as the House resumed consideration of army estimates, Mr. King said he wanted it understood the government had nothing to hide and that Defence Minister Ralston for personal reasons would much prefer to make a full public statement on the situation.

Col. Ralston objected to Mr. Graydon's comment that he (the Minister) had not "told the whole story." He wanted it understood, he said, that he had never stated he was telling the whole story; and, in fact, had made it clear he was not.

Loss of 1,500.

During the general army discussion, Col. Ralston said that from March 31 to Dec. 31 last there was a loss of 1,500 call-up personnel through desertions.

He said the aim is to take into the army during the next fiscal year about 12,000 call-up troops, but that wastage among call-up personnel might absorb the whole number, leaving the total call-up strength at March 31, 1945, somewhere near the present level of 73,000.

When the House opened Air Minister Power disclosed the results of his conference during the past week with Rt. Hon. Harold Balfour, British Undersecretary for Air.

He said a supplementary air training agreement provides for greater control by the R.C.A.F. over the thousands of R.C.A.F. men serving with the R.A.F.; a plan for the transfer into the R.C.A.F. of Canadians who enlisted in the R.A.F; creation of a joint committee of the two forces to handle plans for the difficult task of demobilizing Canadian airmen scattered over the world with the R.A.F.; and a plan for gradual reduction of the intake of pupils into and of the number of schools in the British Commonwealth air training plan in Canada.

Maj. Power said the original purpose of the training plan—to create an air force which would attain air superiority over the enemy—has been achieved. The personnel necessary to fill formations planned for the front line now were moving up through the training schools.

"We have the capital and the necessary immediate replacements," said the minister.

100,000 FIRE

Hamilton, Feb. 17 —(CP)—Hamilton firemen fought a two-alarm fire for 2½ hours last night in the Wunder furniture trade-in store on Mary Street and extinguished it after the top floor and part of the second had been gutted. Nearly 50 firemen with 15 hoses poured tons of water into the three-storey brick building. Damage unofficially was placed at $100,000.

MUST KEEP OVERWEIGHT

Toronto, Feb. 17. (CP)—Salesmen of slenderizing articles will have a hard time convincing Merlyn Melvin, 19-year-old Stratford, Ont., stenographer, who won four first prizes in mezzo soprano and oratorio classes at Kiwanis Musical Festival here. Her biggest worry is keeping overweight—her voice becomes "thin" when she weighs less than 131 pounds.

Allied Planes Plaster Japanese Base at Kavieng

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 17. (AP) — Allied planes flying low through heavy anti-aircraft fire plastered the Japanese base at Kavieng, New Ireland, with 65 tons of bombs, setting the town ablaze and smashing cargo vessels in the harbor, it was reported today.

Today's Allied communique said New Zealand and United States troops, who swarmed onto the Green Islands at the northern edge of the Solomon Archipelago Monday night and Tuesday, have consolidated their position without incident. The invaders met only mild resistance.

American Marines in the Cape Gloucester sector on the western end of New Britain have cleaned the Japanese out of the Borgen Bay and Cape Mensing areas, more than 21 miles east of the Cape, and are continuing their advance.

Ranging into the Carolines to within 400 miles of mighty Truk, land-based heavy bombers Monday delivered the first attack of the war on Ponape, Japan's "Gibraltar of the Pacific", it was announced at Pearl Harbor.

Quebec Opposes New Imperialism Of Lord Halifax

Quebec, Feb. 17 —(CP)— Post-war immigration, particularly where Jews are concerned, brought disagreement in the Legislative Assembly yesterday, a short time after members had joined in adopting unanimously a motion on Lord Halifax's "new imperialism."

The Assembly adopted the motion "that this House considers it its duty to express its divergence as regards Lord Halifax's new imperialism and dangerous tendencies" after hearing Georges Potvin (Lib.-Roberval) and Rene Chaloult, member for Lotbiniere who announced his withdrawal from the Bloc Populaire last week.

Mr. Chaloult, who proposed the motion two weeks ago, said he hoped that "Canada will declare her independence after the war and will join the Pan-American Union." He presented the motion after Lord Halifax, in a Toronto address, suggested that members of the British Empire should commit themselves to a common postwar international policy.

Mr. Potvin said "it is impossible to accept and to conciliate with our own interests, a one-direction policy."

The Legislature came to no decision on the immigration question but heard opposing views from Maurice Duplessis, Union Nationale opposition leader, and Maurice Hartt, Liberal member for Montreal-St. Louis. Mr. Duplessis proposed that correspondence relative to immigration in the province be tabled and a decision will be reached whenever the motion comes up for discussion again.

1,000,000 WITHOUT ACCIDENT

Toronto, Feb. 17 —(CP)—Harvey Kaster of Walkerton, Ont., described as the only authentic case known of a man driving 1,000,000 miles in Canada without an accident, received his reward Saturday in a tribute arranged by the Ontario Motor League in co-operation with Transport News. In 17 years of driving trucks over Ontario highways, 37-year-old, six-foot 2½-inch Kaster never has been summoned for speeding nor received a parking ticket.

FEWER ENTRANTS

Maj. Power said members of the R.C.A.F. were serving "in their thousands" attached temporarily to R.A.F. units throughout the world. "Innumerable questions" arose concerning their welfare, careers and conditions of service. The R.C.A.F. was responsible to the Canadian people for their welfare and future prospects.

From time to time adjustments had to be made and the air department in conjunction with the United Kingdom Air Ministry, discussed and formulated general policies to be followed by both forces in dealing with "these important and sometimes difficult problems."

"Long and tough fighting lies ahead before the war is won," said Maj. Power.

"But we must be ready with plans for demobilization repatriation and rehabilitation well in advance. Our problems in this connection are greatly accentuated because by far the largest numbers of our aircrews are serving with the R.A.F. in distant and varied theatres of war.

"It must be, and is, a matter of primary concern to the government to ensure that these men are not placed in an unfavorable position by reason of their service in the R.A.F., or in any way handicapped as compared with men in the other Canadian services, or with their air force comrades at home."

While demobilization procedure and related questions must fundamentally be the problem of each country, it was essential that Canadian plans be closely correlated with those of the United Kingdom so necessary benefits and advantages would be available to Canadian personnel when their service abroad was ended.

The joint R.C.A.F.-R.A.F. committee would discuss problems involved, exchange views and advice ministers.

"It has already been agreed that arrangements which have been made either by the United Kingdom or Canada for pre-demobilization, educational and vocational training shall be available to the Nationals of both countries on a reciprocal basis," said Maj. Power.

"Our long-term war plans entail certain reductions in the numbers of entrants into training will not in fact engage the enemy for a comparatively long time. This is largely because of the increased complexity of modern aircraft, requiring lengthy training over an even-widening range of subjects."

R.A.F. Schools Closed First.

Gradual closing of training units and schools would begin with R.A.F. schools. As they closed the personnel would be transferred to operational theatres in England. The closing process would extend over many months, and the reduction of training facilities would be geared to the requisite flow of pupils through the plan.

Movement overseas of R.C.A.F air and ground personnel would be facilitated by reduction of training capacity and curtailment of western hemisphere operations due to the more favorable war situation on Canadian coasts.

The concentration of manpower in the United Kingdom would provide more backing for squadrons now actively engaged or required for forthcoming operations, and "render more effective the impact of both the R.A.F. and the R.C.A.F. on the enemy during this critical year of the war."

Routine Order Prohibiting Letter Writing Reviewed

Ottawa, Feb. 17 (CP)—The routine order prohibiting servicemen from writing for publication on military or non-military matters without permission is being reviewed by all three services, Defence Minister Ralston told the Commons last night.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, asked if the order prohibited letters to members of parliament.

"K.R. & O. (King's Regulations and Orders) does that," said Col. Ralston.

"That is pretty drastic," said Mr. Graydon.

"I had a sad experience in my own constituency; I will check on that," Col. Ralston replied.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said the Canadian army was a citizen army and soldiers should not be deprived of civil rights. He urged rescinding of the order on writing to the press and reconsideration of the ban on letters to members of parliament.

Capt. Walter Tucker (L—Rosthern) said he did not agree. It would be difficult to run an army if some soldiers were able to write direct to members and ministers and perhaps obtain special consideration. The army had a way in which any soldier could bring any complaint or grievance to the attention of the authorities.

Col. Ralston said later that when army men wrote to members of parliament asking favors they were breaking any army regulation forbidding a man to seek the aid of outside influence.

The men talked of "pull", and if some consideration were given through a member of parliament others would hear of it.

Team-work would help, and members should encourage young men not to write to them seeking favors. This would make it easier to run the army.

Col. Ralston said one young man who had written to him lost 14 days' pay because he had broken the regulation on letters.

By DOUG HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Feb. 17 (CP)—Paragraphs about the people and happenings that make Britain's political life:

Reconstruction Minister Lord Woolton told a press luncheon he had once lived three years in the slums of Liverpool, an experience that taught him good homes mean more than "all these nobler schemes of reforming the new world" .... Within three hours of his return from Africa, Winston Churchill had waded through a big pile of urgent papers, dictated a score of memoranda, seen a dozen government advisers, conferred with members of the War Cabinet, answered a dozen questions in the Commons, lunched with the King at Buckingham Palace...

Parliament is sitting an extra day a week because of the heavy legislative program confronting members. It may be raised to a five-day week later . . .

Lord Simon, the Lord Chancellor, has brought forth what is probably one of the strangest official publications on record: It tells those with pensions grievances the best way to appeal against the government, even reminds the appellant to claim his expenses. The cost: Two cents ... One politician with a flair for figures estimated after the latest vote of credit that the war has cost the average Briton 560 pounds (about $2,500).

Tabled by Cmdr. O. Locker-Lapson, Conservative M.P., was this motion: "That this House is of the opinion that there might not have been a war in 1914 or in 1940 had not Germany built and widened the Kiel canal, and that a condition of peace with Germany must be the filling in of this canal and its plowing up for agricultural purposes." ...

Latest political party to spring up is the Democratic party, baby of elderly Maj. Noran Leith-Hay-Clark. Among its proposals: Creation of a third house of parliament to be called the House of Achievement, an $11,000 ceiling on incomes, a limit of 2,500 acres on land-ownership in the country, a 10-acre limit in towns."

LONDON LETTER

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(CP Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 16—(CP)—If you saw the R.A.F.'s "blue book of damage" lying on an office desk you would think some hungry accountant had just closed it and slipped out for a bite. It's not an impressive volume — plain, about three feet long, two feet wide and six inches thick, (so far), but it is the most remarkable, most dramatic air book in history.

The big book has no title but junior officers around bomber command headquarters where it lies on a long, green baize-covered table flippantly call it the "cookie bookie." It is the favorite book of the bomber chief, Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris.

Between its blue, leather-bound covers is a diagrammatical record of the progress of the R.A.F.'s offensive against Germany. It shows in amazing detail the results of every bombing attack. German attempts at reconstruction are also noted (for some months now bombing has far outpaced rebuilding.)

On the outside edge of each page is a tab marked with a name like Berlin, Cologne, Essen, Hanover or Brunswick. Coventry is there, too, right at the start of the book. It is the yardstick for comparison. Because Coventry was the best German attempt at saturation bombing.

The pages are detailed aerial photographs of German cities and there is an overlay of drawing silk on each map. When evidence is collected after each raid, experts paint out the sections, building by building, which have been devastated.

On each left-hand page are black-and-white diagrams which show how many buildings, and what sort, have been destroyed in every target city. They show the proportion of the whole industrial area which has been wiped out.

Coventry, where 400 German bombers dropped 450 tons of bombs in nine hours, looks almost untouched in comparison with some of the Reich centres the R.A.F. has visited. The blue used to mark out damaged industrial areas covers extensive sections of the maps of some German cities.

Hamburg, for instance, is just one mass of blue. In the attacks last summer, 9,000 tons of bombs were dropped, sometimes at the rate of 54 tons a minute, and more than 6,200 built up acres were wiped out. Huppertal, Duesseldorf and Berlin, of course, are covered with plenty of blue.

The book has this story to tell about other German cities:—

Hanover: Bombers dropped 1,800 tons at the rate of 60 tons a minute in September, 1943, devastating 2,500 acres.

Cassel: More than 60 per cent. of the town destroyed by bombers which dropped 1,900 tons at a rate of 74 tons a minute in October, 1943.

Lonergan's Counsel Makes Startling Request of Court

New York, Feb. 17 —(AP)— Edward V. Broderick, counsel for Wayne Lonergan, accused of slaying his wife, Patricia Burton Lonergan, moved yesterday in General Sessions Court for permission to submit two assistant district attorneys to a lie detector test.

His startling request and the protests of Assistant District Attorney Jacob Grumet led Judge J. Freschi to declare:

"I will not have this court made a hippodrome."

Lonergan's trial is scheduled to begin before Judge Freschi Feb. 23. The Toronto-born member of the R.C.A.F. is charged with first-degree murder.

"In view of the fact that the veracity of both Mr. Grumet and Mr. Loehr (Assistant District Attorney John Loehr) will be under sustained attack during the trial," Broderick told the Judge, "I want to know whether they will consent to a lie detector test in advance of the trial."

Leaping to his feet, Grumet shouted, "Your Honor, what is the meaning of this? This is becoming a farce. This is a case of murder in the first degree. I'll ask for the mentality of the counsel to be examined."

To other requests by Broderick for questions to be put to Grumet, Judge Freschi replied, "You can write a letter to the District Attorney or go to see him."

3,366 Bombers Lost Last Year

London, Feb. 17 (CP)—A total of 3,366 bombers—2,369 of the R.A.F. and 997 American—was lost over Germany and northern Europe during 1943 in operations from British bases, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Secretary, told the House of Commons.

January, 1944, losses were 319 British and 178 American, he said.

Presumably Sir Archibald's statement of R.A.F. losses included those of the R.C.A.F. and other Dominions air forces flying with bomber command.

Received $900 For $9 Cheque

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 17. (CP) — Walter Tatomir, 17, of Point Pelee, presented a cheque for $9 at a bank, received $900 in error, said nothing and divided the difference with two friends.

Today Tatomir and Harold Dixon, 17, of Mersea Township appeared in Magistrate's court charged with stealing $900 from the bank and were remanded without plea to Feb. 22. A third youth is being sought by police, who have recovered about $345.

It is believed the charge of stealing may be amended so that Dixon will face a charge of receiving stolen money.

N.Z. TROOPS LAND ON GREEN ISLANDS

Guadalcanal, Feb. 17 (AP)—Landings by New Zealand troops with some American support in the Green Islands Monday marked another 125-mile hop towards Rabaul from the beachhead on Bougainville, and the first Allied advance in the South Pacific beyond the Solomons. Salamonsre othavreir-wurlmer

Nissan Island, largest of the Green group, had been used by the Japanese as a daytime barge hideout on the two nights journey between New Ireland and Buka. It is about 120 miles east of Rabaul and 230 southeast of Kavieng, New Britain.

A large New Zealand force made the main landing, South Pacific headquarters said, with American complements including navy construction gangs who began unloading heavy machinery and putting it to work.

About 11,000 Are Deserters From Army

Ottawa, Feb. 17 (CP)—There are about 11,000 deserters from the Canadian army at present, said Defence Minister Ralston in the House of Commons yesterday during debate on the war appropriations resolution.

(The Canadian Press in its day report yesterday erroneously quoted Col. Ralston as saying that there were 11,000 deserters from the army between May, 1943, and the end of last month. The night report carried the minister's correct quotation.)

Col. Ralston said the present number of desertions was an increase of some 2,000 since last May when the number totalled 8,966. He read figures showing the number who had deserted and the number apprehended between last May and the end of January this year.

Post Easter Mail By March First

Posting of Easter mails for overseas not later than March 1st is advocated by Postaster General Mulock to assure delivery to destination in time for the holiday. Easter Day this year falls on April 9th and while March 1st—some five weeks previous—has been set as the latest date on which Easter mail may be posted with reasonable expectation of delivery, the public is urged not to wait until the last minute for posting.

Attention is drawn to the fact that the postal service is still confronted with a tremendous volume of mail, with problems of pressure on transport facilities. Dangers of trans-Atlantic crossings and adverse winter weather to be faced in flying mail to the United Kingdom also counts against quick and sure delivery.

The value of mail in assisting to keep Canadian troops overseas in good spirits is again stressed and it is advised that no birthday or holiday should be permitted to pass without sending a special message or gift to the relative or friend on active service.

POST-WAR HEALTH SERVICE PLANNED FOR GT. BRITAIN

Free Family Doctor for Everybody, Medicines and Hospitalization

HEALTH CENTRES

London, Feb. 17 (CP-Reuters)—The government today announced its plans for a comprehensive health service for the whole nation, thus realizing the first plank in Prime Minister Churchill's four-year plan for Britain's post-war policy.

Free doctors, medicines, hospital treatment, specialists and other services for every man, woman and child in Britain are proposed by the government in the white paper.

Free choice of family doctor and new health centres are planned, and quick legislation is urged. This new scheme largely fulfils Sir William Beveridge's suggestions for a comprehensive national health service.

General practitioners to work from their own surgeries as at present, separately or in groups, or from specially provided and equipped health centres.

Complete and improved hospital service for every area. No charge by hospitals whatever treatment is necessary.

Planning of co-ordinated service over wider areas so that each case goes to the hospital where it will get the best possible treatment.

Voluntary hospitals to be invited to take part under their own management receiving certain payments and observing general conditions which will be applied to all hospitals.

LABOR-PROGRESSIVE PARTY CONVENTION

Toronto, Feb. 17—(CP) — The Ontario Labor-Progressive party announced today its first provincial convention will be held in Toronto Feb. 19 and 20.

SENSE OF DUTY CARRIES TROOPS THRU TIGHT SPOTS

Few Go Into Battle Without Fear or Nervousness

ALL COMRADES

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

London, Feb. 17 (CP).—Few soldiers go into battle without fear or nervousness. Nerveless exceptions are rare individuals.

However, training, discipline and sense of duty are what carry troops through the tight spots. Every soldier realizes that probably every other man around him knows fear when enemy shells are falling or when they're under enemy machine gun fire.

Overcoming war and carrying on despite it is where courage and bravery come in. The average Canadian's natural sense of duty nurtured by army life and its discipline is what enables the soldier to go on with a job that may mean his life.

The sense of danger that lives with a frontline soldier and the men with whom he fights helps foster a spirit of comradeship that becomes one of the important things in his campaign life.

Many a soldier will conceal illness and joke away a minor wound to avoid evacuation to hospital from where when recovered he goes to reinforcement camp while awaiting recall to the line.

The reason is fear of separation from the other fellows in his section or platoon and that he might eventually wind up in some other battalion. Regimental pride is real to the majority of troops. Every soldier likes to think his battalion is the best in the army.

Satisfied With Difficult Job.

While they may be frightened if enemy machine guns open up on them from concealment, advancing troops are able to keep going forward because they've been given a particular role to perform and months of training have taught them that in the army you do what you're told. And, a job accomplished under difficulty gives satisfaction.

Furthermore when you're scared the best thing to do is keep busy. The presence at a nervous soldier's side of another who is steadier will tend to steady the former and help him bear up. A steady soldier has the admiration of all his chums.

A nervous soldier is the object of sympathy rather than scorn but other soldiers with him would rather see him removed to a safe place than have him remain in their presence. Nervousness is as infectious as steadiness. The steadiness or unsteadiness of officers and N.C.O.'s makes a world of difference in the men under their command.

Tend To Laugh It Off.

When soldiers emerge successfully after a particularly rough time the tendency is to laugh it all off rather than describe it in dramatic terms.

Because they may have had to overcome real fear in the accomplishment of an act of particular distinction, many deserving soldiers will wonder if they have earned decorations awarded.

The reason seems to be that bravery as the story-books tell about it bears little resemblance to what most feel really constitutes it. A soldier has difficulty recognizing bravery in himself.

Soldiers likewise resent rather than appreciate glowing public accounts of their exploits particularly if they are pictured as fearless, cool headed fire-eaters.

'OLD EYE STILL IS PRETTY GOOD'

Canadian Airman Blasts Down Nazi Craft, "Better Than I Did in Desert"

Algiers, Feb. 17 —(AP)— Flt.-Lt. James Francis Edwards of North Battleford, Sask., an R.C.A.F. fighter pilot with the City of Windsor squadron, stepped out of his Spitfire today after a mission over the Anzio beachhead south of Rome and solemnly reported, "the old eye is still pretty good."

A year ago Edwards was noted as a sharpshooter. During the desert war he climbed into top scoring position in his squadron with 10½ victories over enemy fighters. Then he finished his tour of duty. Recently he returned for a second operational tour and was sent into the battle of the beachhead where the intensity of fighting in the air almost equals that on the ground.

Just to test out "the old eye" Edwards took a shot at a German fighter-bomber at a range of 500 yards which Spitfire pilots generally consider too great for accurate shooting. He saw pieces break off the German aircraft, then watched it crash.

"It's better than I ever did in the desert," the Flight Lieutenant declared.

This victory and a probable scored by Flt.-Lt. Hadley Everard of Timmins, Ont., brought the crack Canadian squadron's total bag to a round figure of 300 enemy ships destroyed or probably destroyed since its formation.

How to Spell "Hight"

Once upon a time, seventy-four years ago today, an able young Indianapolis newspaperman became convinced that he could publish a better newspaper. There had been much in his career to persuade him that his decisions were likely to be right. The man's name was John Hampden Holliday. The newspaper that he founded was The Indianapolis News. The date was December 7, 1869, six months after his twenty-third birthday.

As time went on, the young man succeeded in realizing his ambitions. One of his best attributes was his firmness of principle. Some people thought he was especially gifted in the quality of his prejudices.

Some fifty years ago, Mr. Holliday felt that his printers were not setting his editorials as he wrote them. He wrote his editorials by hand, and it is a matter of legend in the printing craft of Indianapolis that his chirography was not a model for the school copybooks. The printers did their best, but Mr. Holliday still thought they were not following copy, as the saying goes. So he issued an order that his copy must be followed to the letter.

The printers and proofreaders accepted the challenge. They made sure—doubly sure—that the next editorial that Mr. Holliday sent over was perfectly set. They followed copy to the letter. They sent the proof to Mr. Holliday. In no time at all Mr. Holliday came into the composing room waving the proof. He called the printers together and pointed on the proof to a word—clear evidence that they had not followed copy. But the printers were prepared with evidence of their innocence. They pointed to his copy. They were right. They had set the word as he had written it. So he reconciled the conflict by ordering it run in the paper, then and henceforth, as he had spelled it. That is why The News still spells the word without the "e"—hight.—Indianapolis News.

Belleville Juniors Pass Out Of Playdowns by Suffering Second Defeat From Trenton

Belleville junior hockey squad passed out of the O.H.A. picture at the Hume Arena Wednesday night well beaten by a well-trained Trenton team to the tune of 7 to 1. In a best-in-three series, Trenton took two straight, having won in overtime 6-5 in the initial game of the series. The largest crowd of the season, some 1,000 fans, many of which were from nearby Trenton, saw the better team win following a scoreless initial period of the fastest hockey seen locally this season.

In the middle session, however, Floyd Hamilton, Havelock's gift to the Trenton team, sewed the match into the bag with two prolific solo efforts before Trenton wound up the period leading 5 to 0. Early in the last stanza, Jack Wardaugh saved Belleville with a neat piece of stick handling to score the lone hometown goal after which Trenton rattled home two more to add insult to injury.

First Period Fast

There was no score in the initial period that saw the fastest hockey of the season with both goal keepers turning in with sensational saves as the game raged from end to end. However, it was early in the second canto, that Hamilton broke loose to backhand his first goal and then fool the local defence with some nice stick-handling to put Trenton two up. Howe went through for a neat visitor goal and repeated on a pass from Ross LaMorre, who subsequently rapped home Maxwell's pass and Trenton led 5-0 at the end of the second.

Saved from Shutout

Jack Wardaugh weaved through the scoring position and saved Belleville from a whitewash in the early stages of the last frame. But Ross LaMorre bounced back to ring the bell from Maxwell and then to make matters even Ross passed to Maxwell, who scored Trenton's seventh and the last goal of as clean a game as one would wish.

Hamilton, Howe and Ross LaMorre scored two goals each for Trenton, with LaMorre going great guns to add a brace of assists to his credit, while Harvey in the Trenton nets continued to rise to dizzy heights to ward off all and sundry attacks made by the eliminated Belleville kids.

The line-ups:

Belleville—Goal, Fitzpatrick; defence, Bush and Rosetti; centre, Moher; wings, Barrett, Wardaugh; subs, Semark, Holway, Day, B. Meagher, Greatrix and A. Meagher.

Trenton—Goal, Harvey; defence, Stojan and Howe; centre, R. LaMorre; wings, Hamilton and Maxwell; subs, Taylor, Scott, B. LaMorre, Campbell and Bangay.

What's Doing in Sport

Algiers — (AP) — Six of the 11 bouts resulted in a knock-out yesterday for the third day of competition in the Allied boxing tourney for service men. In a feature welterweight fight, James Holmes of Britain flattened Melroy Gamache of Minnesota, while in the same division, Tommy McGrath of Britain floored Timothy Clark, of Los Angeles.

Toronto—(CP)—Secretary W. A. Hewitt, of the O.H.A., announced today the association's sub-committee will meet here Feb. 23, to arrange senior and junior "A" playoffs which will get underway during the week of Feb. 28.

Sacramento—(AP)—Blaming the downfall of the Sacramento Solons last season to the St. Louis farm-club system, local fans were seeking last night to raise $110,000 with which to buy the franchise from the Cardinals. The Solons copped the 1942 Pacific Coast League title in 1942 but finished in last place in 1943, after the club had been stripped of players.

Bainbridge, Md.—(AP) — Willie Pep, holder of the New York version of the world's featherweight championship, has been given a physical discharge from the navy, the Bainbridge Naval Training Station Public Relations office said yesterday.

I ALWAYS GET CLEAN, QUICK SHAVES WITH BLUE GILLETTE BLADES

CLEM McCARTHY

—Ace Reporter on Gillette's "Cavalcade of Sports"—says:

"A TRIP through the Gillette factory showed me why I always get clean, quick shaves with Blue Gillette Blades. I saw steel hardened in automatically-controlled electric furnaces . . . saw the blades sharpened in grinding machines weighing several tons—yet so precise that they are adjustable to 1/10,000 of an inch. So my advice to any man who wants to enjoy shaving is to use Blue Gillette Blades."

DETROIT WINGS MAY BE TEAM TO TAKE CANADIENS

(By The Canadian Press)

The National Hockey League resumes hostilities tonight after a three-day lull with Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings slated to clash at Detroit in a possible preview of Stanley Cup playoff competition.

Canadiens bounced into the head end of the parade from the drop of the first puck and Red Wings, while their early pace was tardier, still have gained enough momentum to move into second place—still a long way behind the Habitants but four points ahead of Toronto Maple Leafs, the next contender. The 1942-43 Stanley Cup Champions currently are favored in most quarters to offer Dick Irvin's Club the stoutest competition when post-season eliminations begin late in March.

Wings may even be close to an even-money propostion tonight, despite their miserable record against the Frenchmen. In the seven games this season, Detroit has salvaged only one point—a 2-2 tie in Montreal Jan. 13. Canadiens won the other six games by lopsided enough margins to compile a seasonal total of 34 goals against 11 for Detroit.

On the credit ledger, Red Wings have won nine and tied one of 12 games since Jan. 13, when netminder Conny Dion played his first game for Detroit after receiving a medical discharge from the Canadian Army. Another player discharged from the army, Murray Armstrong, joined Wings a few days earlier and has been a vital cog in the rejuvenation.

ICE PANTOMIME TO BE GIVEN

Supplemented by two outstanding figure skaters from the Toronto Skating Club, the Quinte Skating Club will present one of the most elaborate settings for a winter carnival yet attempted by this energetic group of local fancy and figure skaters in the Hume Arena on Friday evening. The initial part of the performance will be in the form of an ice pantomime—"The Court of Old King Cole." Beautiful costumes and a bevy of skating beauties will be featured in this dramatic setting on ice.

However, in the second part of the program, fancy and figure skating will be featured, headed by two of Canada's outstanding skating performers, Miss Virginia Wilson and petite 12-year-old "Vi Vi" Smith, both of the Toronto Skating Club. Miss Wilson was runner-up for the Canadian ladies' figure skating championship at Ottawa recently, while petite "Vi Vi" is an outstanding juvenile of promise. Doubles, singles and group skating will be added attractions by members of the local figure skating club.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Two Negroes at the induction camp were arguing about the Lord's prayer:

Sam—What does yo' know 'bout de Lord's Prayer. Bet yo' don't eben know de fust line.

Mose—Ah'll take dat bet.

The stakes were produced and held, then:

Mose—Now Ah lay me down to sleep.

The annual reports of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association are to be commended. This tireless group of men have done much to better game fishing facilities throughout the Hastings and Quinte area since the inception of the club some ten years ago. For instance there was an increase in membership of 101 last year over 1943 when the association boasted of 273 paid members.

Just to show some of the work being accomplished by the association, Dr. Van Blakslee, chairman of restocking of district waters, reported that 128 lakes and streams had been replenished with fingerlings in 1943. Since the outbreak of war millions of fingerlings have been deposited in the various lakes and streams in all parts of this district and with a marked decrease in American tourists and less gasoline available in Canada, the angling in Hastings County should be one of the biggest businesses in the district, thanks to the foresight of the local anglers' club.

District waters have been restocked with every variety of game fish, including the Atlantic salmon. Dr. Blakslee featured various types of trout and experimented his restocking in many streams until he finally found suitable waters for even the elusive brown trout.

Incidentally the hunters' section of the association is rapidly forging to the front and last year prizes were given for the largest buck and doe shot. Elmer Sandercock captured the former honors and Geo. Wallbridge was the doe winner. Directors were named Tuesday night from which the officers will be elected. J. E. Shortt has been president since the inception of the club. After all it was Joe's pet idea.

By far the better team Trenton pushed Belleville out of the junior O.H.A. picture last night. After Hamilton and Howe rattled in two goals each, early in the middle session, there was little left for the local fans except to watch a superior team race through to a 7-1 win. The first period, that was scoreless, was productive of the fastest 20 minutes of the national winter pastime seen locally this season.

Outside the fact that Harvey was sensational in the Trenton nets and the stellar playing of Floyd Hamilton, Howe and Ross LaMorre for Trenton, there isn't much left to say. The Belleville kids again tried to stickhandle themselves into scoring goals, but that ancient art bounced back with the result the Holway-led crowd stickhandled out of a possible third game. The better team won and there are no alibis so all and sundry from Belleville wish Trenton a championship.

However, Stan Jackson's kids will still have to beat the Combines, who won 7-5 in Tweed last night and the Trenton-Combines series should be one of real interest. Belleville fans still have a good juvenile team to support.

Coach Padre Maiki apparently has gone all out to win tonight's game over No. 6 Repair Depot and cinch first place in the Quinte R.C.A.F. loop. For instance the good Padre has added Wally Wilson and McAtee from last year's Brantford Lions, as well as Griffiths from Verdun, Que. Add those to Voss, Kelly, Dart and Les Canadiens' Paul Raymond and it looks as though the Flyers really mean business tonight. However, Bud Corbett's Repair Depot lads entertain other ideas so that curtain-raiser tonight should see the largest hockey gallery of the season. In the nightcap affair the Bombers meet the Mohawks after that free-scoring 13 to 9 game of Monday night, so all in all it's all out hockey tonight.

(Remember when)

It was just three years ago tonight Joe Louis successfully defended his world's heavyweight championship for the 14th time. The Brown Bomber scored a two-round knockout over Gus Dorazio in a scheduled 15-round bout at Philadelphia. He's now "Sergeant Joe" in the United States army as a physical training instructor.

Gananoque Takes Picton in Midget Playdowns 14-2

Picton, Feb. 17.— In the first game of the O.H.A. midget hockey playdowns, Gananoque defeated Picton 14-2, at Picton Arena, Tuesday night. The return game is being played at Gananoque, Friday night. Winner of the series will meet Oshawa midgets.

The locals were outclassed by the visitors in every department, especially when it came to the size of the players. But this did not deter the locals who fought every inch of the way.

Keith Matthie, Picton goalie, was struck in the face by a stick, causing a severe nose-bleed but gamely carried on until he was hit in the mouth by a puck, which forced him to retire. Dr. K. McQueen gave medical attention. Carson replaced him in the net and he received the first shot squarely between the eyes and was knocked down. He carried on until the end of the game despite rapidly blackening eyes. The Gananoque team played fast, clean hockey of the type which netted goals. Their ace defence man, a six-footer, clashed with 70-pound C. Porter and came off second best. Hepburn and Guernsey scored for Picton. A good crowd braved heavy roads and cold weather to attend.

Winnipeg—(CP)—Ken Watson's nifty rink from the Winnipeg Strathcona rink suffered its first defeat in the 1944 Manitoba bonspiel here last night when he dropped a 14-4 decision to clubmate, Leo Johnson, in the semi-finals of the British Consols event. Both Watson and Johnson are former Dominion curling champions.

Watson's initial defeat came after he had registered 19 straight triumphs and won the bonspiel's grand aggregate title and the Birks-Dingwall trophy.

JOHNNY CONICK LEADS PARADE WITH FOUR GOALS

(By The Canadian Press.)

In a Senior O.H.A. fixture without penalties last night at Hamilton, the Majors turned it on against Toronto Navy to register a 12-2 rout in which the locals' scoring headliners piled up their points in profusion. With this one-sided flourish, Hamilton came to within five notches of the league-leading St. Catharines Saints.

Johnny Conick led the scoring procession with four goals and next in line were Doug Runions, three; Clarence Shillington and Davey with two and Dillon Brady, a single. The Navy's isolated snipers were Livingstone and Bus Benson. Majors made it 4-0 in the first period, 7-1 in the second and rounded out the encounter 10 goals to the good.

In group 2 of the junior "A" series, St. Catharine Falcons blanked Kroehlers 6-0 at Stratford to take over the division leadership and Phillips was the scoring star with three goals, Barber, F. Long and Peterson dividing the remainder. Falcons found the net for two in each period.

Marlboros and Toronto Young Rangers were booked for an all-Toronto tilt in which the reward for winning was four points but the local rivals, far down in the list, managed to make it a 2-all argument with overtime, nobody scoring after the second stanza. Lawlor and James obtained a goal for the Dukes while Dewsbury and Imonti divided the spoils for Young Rangers.

CLEVELAND HELD TO ONE-ALL DRAW

(By The Canadian Press)

The American Hockey League's leading Cleveland Barons were held to a 1-1 tie last night by the lowly Pittsburgh Hornets who have collected less than half as many points as their opponents this season.

Barons now have 62 points—eight more than second-place Hershey Bears—as a result of 28 victories and six draws in 42 starts. Pittsburgh has won only 10 games and tied seven others in 43 starts.

Last night's draw was at least a moral triumph for Hornets, since the Barons have scored an average of more than four goals a game since the start of the season. They have won 17 games in their last 20 contests.

The deadlocked game was fast and rough, but clean. Not a penalty was called.

Major A. A. Burridge Named To Physical Fitness Council

(By The Canadian Press.)

These eight-man National Council ional strength or awaiting his call of Physical fitness, announced at Ottawa last night, includes Maj. A. A. Burridge, director of physical education at McMaster University, Hamilton, as its Ontario member, other representatives having been named for all other provinces of Quebec. Maj. Burridge brings a lifetime of experience to the new board for the development of a country-wide recreational program on which he has already devoted much unofficial time.

Maj. Burridge played his first football for McMaster University in Toronto prior to the last war; became physical training teacher at Lisgar Collegiate, Ottawa, and 12 years later was appointed assistant coach and director at McGill University under Major Stuart Forbes, subsequently being the choice as head of the physical department at McMaster when the college was moved from Toronto to Hamilton. Each year he was director of the summer school of the Ontario College of Education at Toronto at which hundreds of teachers took refresher courses in physical education. For many years Burridge has been convened of eastern junior teams under the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union; has attended various U.S. coaching schools

These eight-man National Council and others; qualified as a C.O.T.C. instructor and developed many track and field stars, basketball, hockey and other players.

Dave (Sweeney) Schriner's joining the Vancouver St. egis hockey team for the Pacific Coast League never have been questioned, President Doug Grimston of the British Columbia Hockey Association said yesterday.

"Sweeney, being a member of the Royal Canadian naval volunteer reserve, was eligible," said Mr. Grimston.

Mr. Grimston added he had wired President Frank Sargent of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association at Port Arthur asking him to lift the suspensions on Schriner and the St. Regis Club.

(In Port Arthur yesterday Frank Sargent said the C.A.H.A. did not consider a hockey player on divising the Vancouver St. Regis hockey as being on Active Service. He acknowledged receipt of Mr. Grimston's wire but did not indicate what action, if any, would be taken on the request.)

Schriner, a former professional with Toronto Maple Leafs, came to Vancouver after playing with the Alberta Garrison Hockey League as a member of the Calgary navy squad. He played again with the navy team last night, the Navy-Mustangs being blanked 4-0 by Calgary Currie Army.

Schriner was branded as ineligible to play with the St. Regis team because he had not fulfilled the residence requirements. Later his military status was questioned. Regulations permit professionals to play as amateurs in service teams once they are on Active Service.

LESSON NO. 365

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Every once in awhile you get a hand that looks like a wow. Not only because of the aces that infest it. But also because of the flossy spread of its cards.

Let me hand you back such a one here:

♠ None
♥ A K J 8 4
♣ A 5 4

Your opening bid with that hand is one heart. Among other things, you say you have a minimum of five tricks. Suppose your partner bids two spades at once in response. What does that tell you?

His mention of spades tells you he has a spade suit that is at least biddable. His one-jump tells you that he sees tricks enough to make a game with your five.

An immediate one-jump response tells you he has two sure tricks in his hand. The fact that his one-jump is a takeout to a new suit tells you he has a minimum of six tricks.

His one-jump told you all these things for more than one purpose. One of its aims was to order you to help keep the bidding alive until at least a game contract was reached.

So, no matter what else you may like to do, you will certainly not let the bidding stop short of a game. But look at the stuff you have discovered in your partnership hands.

You have seven tricks. With the minimum of six shown by your partner, you see 13 tricks. That should add up to a slam unless there is something rotten between the Baltic and North Sea.

But before you go barging into slam territory, find out what trump suit is best for your pair. You have time for that. Because the bidding must not stop as long as game is not yet reached.

Bids follow the order in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. You have another takeout to the suit you have not yet shown. Your bid in this spot is three diamonds.

There is no rush. Take it easy.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Let's Face It"
(Bob Hope)

Bob Hope is up to some new tricks at the Capitol Theatre in his latest Paramount comedy, "Let's Face It" that are even funnier than his antics in "Caught in the Draft." In "Let's Face It," which opened last night, the comedian once again appears in an army uniform but in this case the laugh stems from his activities off the camp grounds.

Hope is co-starred in the picturization of the famous Broadway stage hit, by Dorothy Fields, Herbert Fields and Cole Porter, with blonde bombshell Betty Hutton. The two hit off laugh sparks that make "Let's Face It" a riot to behold.

The picture is full of gags and hilarious situations nicely pointed up by a couple of tuneful Cole Porter songs— "Let's Face It" and "Let's Not Talk About Love," plus a new number written by Sammy Cahn and Jule Styne called "Who Did! I Did! Yes, I Did!"

Maynard, Gibson

Two of the screen's outstanding western stars, Ken Maynard and Hoot Gibson, are featured in Monogram's "Blazing Guns," swiftly paced cowboy drama now at the Capitol Theatre. Portraying United States marshals who are ordered to clean up a lawess western town, Maynard and Gibson top a cast that includes Kay Forrester, LeRoy Mason, Roy Brent and Lloyd Ingram.

A colored cartoon and the serial, "Secret Service in Darkest Africa" completes the big double program.

AT THE McCARTHY

One Foot in Heaven

In these troubled times it is only natural for us to long for "the good old days" when our biggest worries were, convincing father that it was really ten o'clock and not midnight when we came home last night. It is just such a chance to lose ourselves in the past that Warner Bros. offers us when they release their charmingly gay motion picture One Foot in Heaven, now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

The picture tells the story of an American family with its problems pathos and joy. It is a wistful tale that injects an atmosphere of nostalgia. The starring roles are played by Fredric March who plays the part of a parson, and Martha Scott, cast as his wife. Their struggle to get along and win the understanding of their fellow townsfolk during the period of America's "coming of age "between the turn of the century and the end of World War 1, is smoothly told, spanning those years as only the medium of the screen can do.

Second feature hit is The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle, starring Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire with Edna May Oliver, Walter Brennan and Lew Fields.

The latest edition of the British Associated News completes the program.

AT THE BELLE

"The Iron Major"

Convincing and realistic is "The Iron Major," Pat O'Brien's new starring film, now on the Belle theatre screen. It proves to be a surprisingly entertaining film that is a well-deserved tribute to a great American—the late Major Frank Cavanagh.

For the benefit of those who may not know of Cavanagh, he was a Massachusetts boy who, at Dartmouth, Holy Cross, Boston College and Fordham, became one of the greatest footbal coaches of all time, and who on the battlefields of France in 1918 became one of the nation's heroes.

In both capacities, as a coach and as a soldier, Cavanaugh lived a full and exciting life; his career is a shining beacon to Canadians of every age, his guiding principle being that a man must fight for his beliefs and for what he thinks is right.

In portraying the part of the rugged, two-fisted disciplinarian, O'Brien gives undoubtedly his finest preformance to date. He has captured Cav's spirit, drive and personality in remarkable fashion, and he realistically depicts his brilliant coaching years and his overseas exploits to make the picture a personal triumph as well as an absorbing piece of screen fare.

"Coastal Command" Thrilling.

If you want a good idea of the way the British Isles are used as a fortress from which aircraft patrol the sea routes traversed by the all-important convoys, go and see "Coastal Command" produced with the full co-operation of the Air Ministry and the Admiralty, the added thrill feature on the same program.

"Coastal Command" has extraordinary interest in its depicting the routine, shot through through with danger, of the lives of the R.A.F. men and the W.A.A.F. women performing their ascribed duties. The photography is superb, and the shots of fighting in the sky are miracles of skill.

Climax of "Coastal Comand" is the detection and subsequent destruction of a German surface raider, the "Duesseldorf," comparable to the battle which resulted in the sinking of the "Bismarck."

THIRTEEN RINKS IN ONTARIO SPIEL YET UNDEFEATED

Players Now Swinging Into Decisive Half of Big Meet

KINGSTON RINK OUT

Toronto, Feb. 17. (CP)— As the 128 teams taking part in the 17th Annual Ontario Bonspiel swung into the second and decisive half of the big meet today only 13 of the rinks had yet to lose a game. And with third-round play resuming for the Royal York and Birks-Ellis-Ryrie trophies, this number was certain to be reduced by the end of the day's activities.

Latest casualty was E. H. Pooler's Toronto Granite quartet, which dropped a tough 8-6 decision to Ed. Young's revived Toronto Royals in the first third-round match of the Birks event. Other unbeaten rinks remained untested in yesterday's two evening draws in which competition was confined to consolation events for the Waterloo Association and North American Life trophies.

Two extra-end matches featured first-round play for the Waterloo Trophy with J. E. Hardy, Chatham, edging R. B. Ness' Kingston rink, 12-11, and W. S. Campbell's Elmvale quartet winning over A. Menary, Grand Valley, by an 11-10 count. The first round of the Association Trophy competition also produced two thrillers when J. F. Shaw's Sault and A. F. MacDowell's McIntyre rinks used extra ends to decision the Hamilton Victorias skipped by H. C. Snetsinger and J. R. Rae's Wingham entry.

Interest today will focus on the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie and Royal York competitions, with 31 rinks in the former and 32 in the latter event left in the running.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Feb. 17. (CP)—It probably never occurred to Sweeney Schriner, an old man of 32 who should have known better, that in some circles a professional is not allowed to take money for playing hockey until he regains his amateur status. So poor old Sweeney has created a cause celebre likely to put hockey officialdom through the wringer and hang it out to dry for all to see.

Schriner is a businessman, who has traded his hockey services during these past dozen years for good old jingle-jangle. So the other day, figuring ways and means of making the next payment on his annuities, Sweeney took an offer from Vancouver and left Calgary to play with St. Regis in the British Columbia Senior final.

We don't know how much dough he received but he gave good value and in three games scored six goals and a flock of assists, even though the Saints lost three straight to New Westminster Lodestars.

So what happens? The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association says Sweeney is a professional and can't take money for playing in Vancouver unless he is an amateur. They add the explanation that Sweeney is an amateur if he is on Active Service.

Now Schriner is all confused. He has been playing amateur hockey all winter with the Calgary Navy-Air Force team in the Alberta Senior Services League. But he is also an honest man and he admits that, although he has applied for navy enlistment, he has not yet been called for active service.

The hitch in all this funny business is the C.A.H.A. rule that a professional automatically becomes an amateur on entering the armed forces but reverts to professional status, when he leaves the services. The question is this: Is Sweeney in or is he out?

The National Hockey League enters the picture with Managing Director, Red Dutton's bleat that Schriner "Can't do this to us. He belongs to Toronto Leafs and if he plays civilian hockey he plays with Leafs or not at all".

Manager Frank Selke of Leafs puts in plaintively: "I don't know why Sweeney didn't play for us. He could have made good money."

Settlement will require a Solomon. That wise old character probably would call Coley Hall of Vancouver, Lloyd Turner of Calgary, Frank Sargent of the C.A.H.A., Dutton and Selke into conference. Schriner would be laid out peacefuly on an operating table. Old Sol would propose to divide Sweeney into five equal parts and the man (excluding Schriner) who howled loudest would be awarded first claim.

Ask and you shall receive, with reservations, pop said, and I said, I'm going somewhere special tomorrow, pop, so can I wear your black and white stripe necktie? I'll be careful of it, pop, I said.

You'll be so careful of it that you'll leave it severely alone in its tissue paper wrapping where I fondly replaced it after the single time I wore it, pop said. In other words the answer is a categorical No, and that's a No that means 9 times No, the same as the number of a cat's lives. Yee gods my 5 dollar tie, he said, and I said, Well then can I wear your square glass cuff links?

Those cuff links are not glass, they're the finest cristal, with a pearl of great price set in the center, pop said. For Peet sake you're not by any possibility thinking of getting married, are you? he said, and I said, No sir, G wizzickers.

Well I assure you I wouldn't lend you my cristal cuff links for any less serious ceremony, pop said. What the dooce is this momentous occasion tomorrow, anyway? he said, and I said, It's a special extra meeting of the Yops.

The Yops being short for the Young Patriots and being me and Puds Simkins and Lucky Leroy Shooster, and pop said, Well do you mean to tell me you seriously thought there was a chance that I'd lend you my cristal links or my 5 dollar tie either?

No sir, I was just leading up by slow degrees, I said, What I really want to borrow is your trench helmet from the first war, because we're going to elect the Grand Commander, and if I'm wearing your trench helmet it may influence Puds and Leroy to vote for me, I said, and pop said, Yee gods you take the cake.

Do you mean the trench helmet, pop? I said, and he said, Okay, the helmet, but for one meeting only.

Making me feel lucky.

CHAPTER 13

Duffy slipped the revolver into his pocket and sat down again. "There's one point," he said. "When you were sitting on the bed there in McKibben's apartments, you heard him come back in after mailing that letter, and then you said you heard him say something. What was it he said?"

"I don't know. I didn't catch it. It sounded as though he told somebody to hush."

"Told somebody to hush? Was it a long sentence?"

"No, just a word or two. 'Oh, hush,' or something like that."

"Did it sound as though he was scared?"

"No, I don't think so. More as though he was surprised. It sounded as though he started to say something and then the gun went off before he could finish."

"You had never heard McKibben's voice, had you?"

"No, I never had."

"So you don't really know whether it was McKibben speaking or somebody else."

"No, I don't. I supposed it was him because I didn't know anybody else was there. I don't see yet how anybody else could have been there."

"And that was all you heard?"

"Yes, that was all."

"There wasn't any other noise at all after the shot was fired?"

"I didn't hear any."

"How long did you sit there on the bed?"

"I don't know. A minute, maybe."

"And then you ran into his bedroom?"

"I started to and tripped over something and fell."

"Did you make any noise?"

"Of course I made some noise. Quite a lot."

"You still had the gun in your hand?"

"Yes. I told you all that."

"I want to hear some of it again. You stayed there on your knees for another minute, with the gun pointed toward the door, and then, when nobody came, you got up and ran into the other bedroom — is that it?"

"Was anybody in the bedroom when you got there?"

"No, nobody but the dead man."

"Did you look around?"

"Of course I looked around. I thought the person was there who had shot McKibben."

"It didn't occur to you that he might have shot himself?"

"No, that didn't occur to me," said the boy slowly. "You see I heard somebody talking."

"You didn't hear anybody come in with him?" Duffy asked. "When he came back from mailing the letter, I mean."

"Oh no. I'm sure he came in by himself."

"Now think carefully. Was there a gun lying by the body?"

The boy closed his eyes in an effort at recollection. Then he shook his head.

"I didn't see any gun. I don't think there was any gun. I'd have seen it when I stooped over the body."

"But McKibben was still alive?"

"His eyes looked alive. They looked up at me sort of surprised; then they seemed to go out."

"And you changed the flowers, and heard the bell and opened the door and went out?"

The boy nodded wearily.

"That's right."

"You didn't look around any more for the murderer?"

"No—I didn't want to find him. He might have taken a shot at me too."

"You didn't look in the bathroom?"

"No, I didn't look anywhere."

Duffy settled back in his chair and glanced at the columnist. "Any questions you want to ask him, Tony?"

"I don't think so. It seems straight enough. I don't see any holes in it."

"Unless it's one big hole," Duffy grunted. "Look here, young man," he added, suddenly, "do you know how to bolt a door from the outside when the bolt is on the inside?"

"Sure!" answered the boy. "Everybody knows that old trick. And how to pass a key to the inside, too."

"Did you know it was done in this case?"

"Yes. I read the papers. The door certainly wasn't bolted when I was there. It must have been done after I left. I don't see why."

There was only one place the murderer could have gone. He must have been in the bathroom. He had heard the boy fall and had dived in there out of sight and watched him. That ringing at the door must have given him a terrible start. Like the knocking at the gate in Macbeth . . .

Duffy turned all this over in his mind. Then he looked at the boy, his face at it grimmest.

"What was it you tripped over in that bedroom?" he asked.

"I don't know. It might have been a rug."

"Did you straighten it out after you tripped over it?"

"No, of course not. I ran right into the other room."

"And didn't come back?"

"No. I told you what I did. I went straight out with Leda."

"Then how do you explain the fact that the rug was straightened out when I saw it next morning?" Duffy demanded.

The boy did not reply, just sat staring. Then he shook his head helplessly.

The detective gave a snort of disgust, swung around to Leda and went over the ground again with her, as he had with her brother. Finally, he had Lucy, the colored servant, in.

"Do you know what time they got back from New York?" Duffy asked.

"Yes, suh. I was worried and waited up for them. It was most four o'clock."

Duffy looked at Leda. "Took you quite a while, didn't it?" he asked. "According to your story, it couldn't have been much after two when you left the apartment. That leaves at least an hour unaccounted for."

"We couldn't find a taxi," she explained. "We had to walk all the way to Columbus Circle. Then, when we got to Grand Central, we had to wait nearly half an hour for a train. When we got to Mount Vernon, there was no taxi at the station and we had to walk home."

"Got an answer for everything, haven't you?" Duffy grunted sourly. "I'm going to be frank with you two. You're in this pretty deep, and we haven't got anybody's word but your own for what happened. I'm going to check you up as far as I can, and I warn you that if I find you have not been telling the truth, I'll charge you with McKibben's murder. In view of that, does either one of you want to change your story any?"

He looked at one of them and then at the other. Tony looked at them too. Surely there was one detail that the girl would want to change!

But they both shook their heads.

"Any way you look at it," Detective Duffy went on grimly, "this boy seems to be the only one who could possibly have killed McKibben."

"I don't see how you make that out," young Terry protested.

"I'll tell you how I make it out. You admit that it was you who put that bloody flower in McKibben's buttonhole. You admit that you know how to bolt a door from the outside. Now I'd like you to explain to me why anybody but you should do that after the carnations had been changed."

"I could have denied knowing how to bolt the door if I'd wanted to, couldn't I? And why should I have bolted the door?"

"Because nobody but you knew that you'd changed the carnations."

After a short pause, Franklin said, "I thought he was killed by a bullet from his own gun."

"We're inclined to think that was just a blind," Detective Duffy declared. "You may have killed him with your revolver, and then found McKibben's, fired one of the cartridges through the mattress on his bed, and planted the bullet under his body. Remember, we haven't got anybody's word but yours as to how long you were in that apartment. You might have been there an hour, and still got home when you did."

"But look here," the boy protested, "you're talking as though I'm a hardened criminal, up to all sorts of tricks. Why it's silly. Even if I had killed McKibben, I would never have thought of all that. I'd have been too scared."

"There's another thing which upsets your theory, Jim," Tony put in. "That old revolver would never have sent a bullet clear through McKibben's body. It would still be in him somewhere."

"Well," countered the detective, "supposin' you're right—even supposin' that that old rod wouldn't have shot clear through McKibben —I don't see anything to show that this boy couldn't have grabbed McKibben's gun and shot hi with it."

"I didn't even know he had a gun," the boy protested.

"Not beforehand, perhaps," Duffy conceded, "but the minute you stepped into that bedroom you saw it lying on the desk where he had placed it when he took it out of his pocket and you grabbed it up and waited..."

"I tell you I didn't!" Franklin almost shrieked. "I didn't see the gun, I didn't go into that room. I went into the next room. I was sitting on the bed there when the shot was fired."

"So you say. But how are you going to prove it?"

"How are you going to disprove it?" the boy demanded, getting a grip again on his self-control.

"I'll check the blood on the flower; I'll see if that bed was sat on; I'll see if there are any marks where you fell; I'll take your fingerprints and your sister's, and, believe me, if they're anywhere inside that place I'll find them..."

"If they're telling the truth," Tony put in, "there are probably some prints on the stair rail."

"I'll have that gone over," Duffy agreed. "Bring on your outfit, Bill," he added to one of his men, "We'll take their prints now."

"That's that," he said. "Now I'm not going to take you two into custoday, but I'm going to leave a man here to make sure you don't get away. I can't have you leaving the state. It would be too much trouble to get you back."

"But—but we were going to Williamsburg tonight," Leda stammered. "The funeral is to be there tomorrow."

"Well, it can't be there tomorrow," Duffy snapped. "You'll have to postpone the funeral till I tell you to go ahead."

"But all the arrangements are made..."

"Can't be helped," and Duffy turned to the door. "You coming, Tony?"

The two Terrys drew deep breaths of relief.

"Duffy's bark is worse than his bite," Tony assured them. "He's a good officer with more than the average amount of brains, and he's on the square. You can trust him. I have worked with him for years."

"Are you a detective, too?" Franklin inquired.

"No. I'm a newspaperman. My name is Antony Bigelow. I gave your sister my card, but she tore it up."

"Tore it up? What did she do that for?"

"I guess she doesn't like me," Tony chuckled.

"Well, I like you," and the boy came forward with outstretched hand. "What got into you, Leda?"

His sister hastily picked up the fragments of the card, her face crimson.

"You must forgive me. Mr. Bigelow," she said. "I was so upset by everything. I thought that you..."

"Forget it," said Tony, and took her hand and patted it. "I don't blame you for being suspicious of me. In fact, I'm more or less responsible for the police coming out here. It was I who found out that your brother had been asking for McKibben Monday night, and I mentioned it in my column. They would have found out later, anyway, of course, for they were going to check up on all of McKibben's customers. I'm glad both of you told your stories so frankly. I only hope Detective Duffy doesn't find any holes in them."

"I don't see how he can," said Leda, "because there aren't any."

"Duffy may think there are. If he does, you'd better get a lawyer. And now as to postponing the funeral," Tony went on, "it will be much easier for me to explain things. Who is in charge of the arrangements at Williamsburg?"

"Professor Babbock — Walter Babcock. He is one of father's old friends."

Tony made a note of the name. "Are there any relatives to be notified?"

"No. We have no near relatives. Both father and mother were only children."

"All right then," said Tony. "I'll arrange the postponement." Then after a short pause, he asked: "You'll be moving back to Virginia, I suppose?"

"I don't know—we haven't made any plans yet," replied Leda. "Frank will have to go back till he graduates, of course."

"We both thought we'd be more apt to find work here than in Williamsburg—worth while jobs anyway," her brother explained.

"It's like being young again to listen to you," Tony said. "It does me good. Now I must be going. May I call a taxi?"

Leda called one for him and Frank helped him into his coat. It made the columnist feel almost grandfatherly.

"I'll let you know if there are any developments," he said. "And please don't hesitate to call me if you think I can be of any help. Goodbye, Frank.

The boy shook hands with him warmly, and Leda went with him to the door.

"How kind you have been!" she said. As she smiled up at him, he thought: How wonderful it would be to have a girl like this...

Tony shook himself out of it. So he remarked, "When you were telling your story to Duffy, I was worried by one detail which I didn't understand."

"What was it?" she asked, her eyes searching his.

"You said that when you got to Grand Central you ran straight out to the street, jumped into a taxi, and gave the driver McKibben's address."

"Yes. That is exactly what I did."

"Didn't you have to stop to look up the address?"

"Oh, no. I knew it."

"You knew McKibben, then?" he asked in surprise.

"I had met him."

"And you had already been in his apartment?"

"Oh no," she explained. "You see, the doctor who had been treating father had his office in the same apartment house, and I used to go with father sometimes, or go there to meet him, and one day Mr. McKibben came in while we were there and we were introduced to him. He seemed very pleasant and father liked him. I think it was the doctor who recommended him to father. But I didn't even remember what he looked like. I didn't know him when he stepped out of the elevator Monday evening, and I don't think he remembered that he'd met me."

County Snow Plow Stalled On Tracks Hit by 'Fast' Train

The county snow plow was completely demolished when struck by a C.N.R. express train at the Sidney crossing west of Belleville early Wednesday evening. The plow operated by John W. Hamilton, R.R. No. 7, Belleville, became lodged between the rails just prior to the scheduled time for arrival of the Toronto-Montreal flyer. Although Mr. Hamilton was unable to flag the train down, he did jump clear of the impact as the train roared past 60 miles an hour with the emergency brakes applied. Parts of the truck and snow plow were strewn along the tracks for a distance of over 600 feet, where the train was finally brought to a stop by Engineer M. P. Buck, of Belleville. The plow and truck were a complete loss.

"I was plowing out the snow at the Sidney crossing and had gone over the packed snow at least twice trying to lift it when the point of the plow became lodged between the south tracks. A west-bound train passed me as I was trying to free my truck, when I suddenly observed an express train coming from the west. I immediately tried to warn the engine crew as I ran up the track to flag the passenger train but I was too late and had to jump to the side to avoid being struck by the flying debris from the truck." Mr. Hamilton, the driver, told Provincial Constable Robt. O'Brien, who investigted the accident.

M. P. Buck, the engineer, told police he saw the stalled truck when some distance west of the crossing and applied the emergency brakes to the train. "However, as I was travelling about 60 miles an hour, I was unable to stop the train before the impact," assured Engineer Buck. The train crew had to pry parts of the demolished truck from the front of the engine where it was nothing but a bent and twisted mass of metal wreckage.

'Ollie' W. Duff Executive Member Boards of Trade

Toronto, Feb. 17. (CP)—The Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce of Ontario voted yesterday to appoint an industrial commissioner to serve in Ontario House in London, Eng., and to establish a fund of $15,000 a year for a five-year period to finance the undertaking. The executive will ask Premier Drew for space in Ontario House.

Midland already has set aside a "substantial sum" for such a mission, the meeting was told.

C. N. Weber of Kitchener, was elected president of the Ontario Association Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, succeeding A. H. Fitzsimmons of Ottawa. The next annual meeting will be held in Kitchener or Toronto as the executive decides.

Men in Forces Are Ambassadors Says Massey

Ottawa, Feb. 17. (CP) —Canada never has been more in the public mind in Great Britain than now, Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, said at a press conference here today.

This, he said, is due to the large number of Canadian service personnel serving in Britain, to a realization of what Canada is doing in the war and to the knowledge of every housewife that a big part of her bacon ration comes from Canada The bacon ration, he remarked, is not large but is an important item in the British diet.

Mr. Massey, making his first visit home since 1938, said he did not intend to settle in England. As soon as his work is finished he and his wife and their two sons, one a prisoner in Germany and the other serving with the R.C.A.F., intend to return to Canada.

"We couldn't have better ambassadors than the men in our three services", said Mr. Massey. "It makes me prouder every day of being a Canadian when I see them both at work and on leave".

The hospitality of the British people toward Canadians has been generous and sincere. The men feel that they are in a "friendly and homelike community".

JOURNEY 60 DAYS THRU TERRITORY HELD BY NAZIS

Little Band of Nurses, Soldiers and Aircrewmen Reaches Italy

DEFIED CAPTURE

By HAL BOYLE
(AP War Correspondent)

Somewhere in Italy, Feb. 17—(AP)—A little band of 13 American army nurses, 13 soldiers and four plane crew members attired in an odd assortment of ill-fitting clothes, stepped gaily from the deck of a trim British naval launch Jan. 9, ending a 60-day journey through Nazi-controlled territory during which they escaped death or capture countless times. They were aided throughout by Balkan underground workers.

The dangerous game of hide-and-seek with the enemy started when their transport hospital plane crash-landed in the mountains of Albania early last November, after being lost in a thunderstorm and fired on by Nazi fighters.

Later as they trekked across the Albanian mountains they were caught in a Balkan blizzard which nearly brought their flight to a tragic end.

Forced March.

At the last they made a 26-hour forced march to a seacoast rendezvous after an attempt to rescue them by plane failed.

The most heartbreaking moment of the journey came when rescuing planes, sent to pick them up, were forced to leave because approaching German troops were in a position to sweep the landing field with heavy fire.

"That was our lowest moment—when we saw our own American planes fly away and leave us," said one nurse.

After the plane rescue failed the disappointed party resumed the long, devious walk to the coast, which they finally reached after a fatiguing 26-hour forced march.

That night they waited tensely on the rocky shores as a single row boat took them, a few at a time, out across the shallow waters to the waiting British launch. It was after midnight before the last of the little party was aboard.

As the rescue vessel neared its home port the nurses—feminine to the end—spruced up as best they could and dabbed on their last bits of lipstick which they had been saving for this moment.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 17 (CP)—Industrial and mining groups were lower today and the western oils showed practically no change in the average on the Toronto Stock Exchange. Volume was again light at 302,00 shares for the first three hours.

Industrials took an index loss of .28 up to noon mainly on lower prices for the utilities, foods and papers, Canada Bread B lost a point and Silverwoods Pfd was down 3-4. Ford A, Aluminum, Consolidated Bakeries, United Fuel A and Abitibi Pfd. declined fractions.

Lake Shore lost 1-2 and other moderately weak golds were Dome, Kerr-Addison, Macassa, Wright-Hargreavesand San Antonio.

WALL STREET

New York, Feb. 17 —(AP)— Mild rising tendencies were displayed by scattered Rails and Industrial Specialties in today's stock market but the list, as a whole, was apathetic to recovery .

The feeling the lengthy upswing in the carriers may have topped off with Tuesday's fast sprint caused the lightening of commitments here and there. Dividends and earnings again provided the principal purchasing inspiration.

Among favorites, Rustless Iron made a new 1943-44 top.

Canadian issues were mixed, with Dome Mines and Distillers Seagrams down fractions, McIntyre up a fraction and Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore unchanged.

TORONTO LIVESTOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 17. (CP) —Cattle trade was slow with prices about steady up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. A few plain weighty steers brought $11.25 to $11.75, medium quality butcher heifers $11 to $11.25 and butcher cows $7.50 to $8.75.

No sheep or lambs were offered.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were:

Nazi Says German Exchanged Prisoners Went to Russian Front

Moscow, Feb. 17—(AP)—An implied criticism of Britain's exchange of war prisoners with Germany was contained in a lengthy story published today in Pravda, communist party organ. The Russians never have exchanged prisoners with the Germans.

The story was an account of a German senior corporal, Gerhardt Machens, who said he sailed from Oran in North Africa last October in a Red Cross exchange and then went to the Russian front after a leave of four weeks.

Machens, in a letter adddressed to "the Chief of Command, Red Army," said "there were about 2,400 healthy German captives here (Oran) and 800 gravely wounded," he said.

A ship carrying the Germans departed on Oct. 23, 1943, Machens said. His letter declared the Red Cross was aware of the healthy condition of the prisoners.

Story of How Carefully Drilled R.A.F. Squadron Wrecked Big Hun Dams

Attack on Moehne and Eder Dams Which Control Much of Ruhr Water System Was One of Most Daring of War—Only Eight Returned of 16 Who Made Attack

One of the most daring and successful air raids of the war was the attack on the great Nazi dams. The story of this raid has just been told in an article by Clarence J. Curtis in Flying Magazine for January, which is reproduced here.

Under a bright moon, at midnight last May 16, nineteen specially modified Lancaster bombers took off from an air base on the east coast of England and headed eastward toward the continent. They met fighter opposition over Holland that sent three of them limping back home. The other 16 roared on toward secret targets.

Tenseness was in the air as the Lancasters swun gover their targets. Not a few minutes of suspense, as in most bombing raids, but two and one-half hours of it as the circling bombers hugged the hills and treetops of the Ruhr valley and were directed at intervals, individually, to go in for their all-important targets.

Nazi night fighters hunted them frantically all the while. Flak probed for their vitals as they came dashing into the muzzles of the guns for their quick precise thrust of bombs. Only eight of them got back.

Their mission was the war's most precise bombing raid, and one of the most important and devastating — and destruction of the Moehne and Eder dams in the Ruhr valley and the damaging of the Sorpe dam. The work of that night was equal to winning a battle.

The Moehne dam, holding about 135,000,000 tons of water, was constructed in 1911, to create storage of the surplus rainfall of the Ruhr catchment area—thus poviding a reserve which could be released gradually during the summer months to maintain a fairly constant level in the river and protect the underground water table which provided supplies for industrial and household purposes. The dam also improved navigability of the lower Ruhr, controlled winter flooding and maintained a constant flow of water for electrical power.

The Eder dam, holding some 200,000,000 tons of water, was constructed in 1914, primarily to prevent winter flooding of agricultural land and to assist in improving navigability of the lower Weser. The dam also provided some water for the Mittelland canal.

Almost immediately after the breaching of the Moehne dam the inhabitants of Hamm, Dortmund, and several other cities were ordered to boil their drinking water.

The effects on transport were serious and may be increased by winter floods. Shipping on the Ruhr and lower Rhine rivers was held up for a week by the flood water and debris immediately after the attack. Washing of silt into the Rhine was expected to present an additional problem. The breaching of the dam released floodwaters which disrupted land transport. One of the four main rail lines leading eastward from the important Ruhr valley was put out of action for several months. Major repairs were necessary on a great number of secondary and main lines in the area. Much of land, especially susceptible to washing, and much of the track has had to be reballasted and relaid. the rail system was on "made"

A number of small power stations were damaged and others submerged. If the ground water level was affected the results will be felt throughout the war.

Such was the damage wrought by this raid.

The Lancasters straggled back to England. The last to land, about 5 a.m., was Wing Commander Guy Penrose Gibson, who had organized, trained for and led the air war's most amazing mission.

Commander Gibson sat easily behind a desk in the British information services in Chicago as he told his story. He was not tall, a bit stock—he had started as a fighter pilot flying Beaufighters during the first part of the war. Yet perfectly controlled and assured as he was, his fingers trembled slightly as they held a cigarette and crushed it in the ash tray. At 25 he had completed 174 raids on the continent. The destruction of the dams was his last.

The destruction of the Ruhr dams did not begin on the night of May 16. Planning for the raid began long before. Training for it had taken the entire time of Gibson's bomber squadron for three months.

The Moehne dam was approximately a half mile across and constructed of reinforced concrete. It was about 145 feet thick at the base and 140 feet high, and held back the Ruhr river. The Eder dam was quite similar and held back the river Eder. The Sorpe dam was a large earthen dam and the attack upon it was primarily a diversion, although it is still leaking from the effects of the bombing.

The dams were protected by anti-aircraft guns and by barrage balloons. Heavy torpedo nets were anchored about 50 feet away from their crests.

It was calculated that a successful attack upon them must involve the placing of explosives within an accuracy of 15 feet.

• •

Other extremely difficult problems were entailed, including the development of special mines containing an unidentified explosive. In order to place the mines as accurately as demanded, the attack would have to be conducted at a low level in the face of bitter flak opposition, complicated by protecting barrage balloons.

Further, the attack had to be made during the chosen week in May in order to have the water behind the dams at its optimum level.

The crews did practice bombing of dams in Scotland and Wales. They scraped up a few bellies on trees and smacked the water a couple of times, but the tough Lancasters could take it. There were 750 men in the quadron of whom 140 were flyng personnel. Finally they were ready.

"Once we reached the first target we split up and it was every man for himself until he was ordered in for his attack," Gibson said. "We operate under a strict system of control and had practised our low level flying so that our planes could circle out of sight, low over the hills and forests, in order that the German night fighters couldn't find us. We didn't lose a single plane to fighters.

"There was no longer any need for radio silence and I made the first reconnaissance, keeping in telephonic communication with all the other planes at all times. The Huns had antiaircraft mounted on the dams. They knew the only way we could attack the dams was by low level approach and they had their guns set up for just that kind of an attack. They didn't touch me as I came in; in fact I didn't get hit during the entire trip — another great piece of luck.

"After my attack I had to wait about 15 minutes because of the huge splashes and terrific waves on the lake—it was like a tidal wave. Finally the water quieted down and I went in for a reconnaissance, shooting at the German gunner as I passed. Meanwhile the German planes were all over the sky trying to find us.

"After my reconnaissance I ordered the next plane in. John Hopgood was the pilot. 'Hoppy,' we called him. He was shot down by the flak while he was making his attack.

"And so it went. I would order the planes in one at a time and make a reconnaissance after each attack. They were circling around out of sight but never far away. They would come in low over the moonlit water, only fifty feet high, and drop their mines. Then, if they were lucky, they would make their escape flying low. Finally I observed that the dam was breached. There seemed to be a break about 100 yards long and a 150-foot wall of water was pouring out of the break.

Throughout the attack Gibson kept flying back and forth over the target continuously, picking off the guns and gunners and diverting some of the defensive fire to himself.

"All this had taken about an hour and a half and what was left of us rendesvoused over the east end of the reservoir and went on to the Eder reservoir, repeating our attacks there by the same methods."

• •

After the Eder dam was breached each plane lit out for home—all except Gibson's, that is. It was his duty to return to the Moehne dam to assess the damage, for if demolition were not complete the planes were to return again before dark. When he arrived Gibson found the reservoir already two-thirds empty. Old foundations of houses, and bridges that had spanned the river long before, were now visible for the first time in years.

Within 18 hours, reconnaissance reported, the reservoir was down to a little creek in the middle of the valley. Later it was learned that water from the Eder had raced through the streets of Kassel, flooding buildings and factories. Delicate precision machinery was damaged or ruined by silt, mud and rust.

Fifty-six men, including two wing commanders, were in the eight planes which failed to return.

Anti-Tank Ditch Reported Built By Huns in Denmark

London, Feb. 17 —(CP)— The Germans have built extensive anti-invasion defences, including a gigantic anti-tank ditch, along the coastline of Denmark, about 300 miles across the North Sea from Britain, and have increased the Nazi occupation force to seven full divisions, reports reaching here from the continent say.

Five big surface airports have been built north of Jutland and there are others underground, it was said. All fortified areas are banned to the Danes.

Fifty thousand German troops were estimated to be stationed at a big camp near Aalborg, 15,000 more on the Island of Zealand and about 10,000 on Funen. The strength of police battalions to combat sabotage was also increased.

ORGANIZER'S CAR MISSING

Kitchener, Ont., Feb. 17 —(CP)— R. Edmunds, Provincial Organizer for the Progressive Conservative Party, may have been on bad terms with Lady Luck when he came to Kitchener for a political meeting. Anyway, when the meeting was over his car had disappeared from the parking lot where he had left it and a long search by police failed to discover any trace of it. Edmunds had to find another way of getting home.

TREATED FOR FROZEN FOOT

Chatham, Ont., Feb. 17 —(CP)— Allan Lewis, 16, of Toronto, is in hospital here for treatment of a frozen foot. He was found sitting in a parked car on a nearby highway and it was learned he had spent last Saturday night in the car. Police said he will be charged with theft of the car from a Toronto owner when he recovers.

POWERFUL U.S. TASK FORCE ATTACKS TRUK

Staraya Russa Has Been Evacuated by Germans

Tokyo Radio Says American Troops Used in Action

Believed All Carriers Protected by Large Fleet of Battleships, Cruisers, Destroyers

MANY PLANES USED

New York, Feb. 18 (AP). — The Tokyo radio said today, "powerful mechanized units as well as airpower" had been used in the American attack on Truk. "Fighting with our troops is now going on," a broadcast added.

"This present attack by the enemy is not the real thing, and it seems that it does not go beyond the scope of a strong reconnaissance," said the overseas dispatch broadcast by Domei Agency and recorded by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service.

"The main force of our invincible navy is biding its time until the very end, and, co-ordinating it with the supply difficulties that will increase in proportion to the distance of the enemy's advance, is now looking for the golden opportunity to destroy the enemy at one strike."

No Explanation.

There was no explanation of what Tokyo meant by "mechanized forces" and nothing from any other source to support the implication that American ground forces might have attempted a landing.

Japanese broadcasts in the past have hinted prematurely at American landings, perhaps with the purpose of claiming they had been defeated in the event that they did not develop.

An earlier Domei dispatch quoted an imperial communique as saying that carrier-based planes had attacked Truk and "fierce fighting is now going on between our forces and the enemy."

The Chungking radio, also heard by U.S. government monitors, said the Japanese radio had announced that "strong motorized Japanese forces and Japanese troops are involved in fierce and continuing action opposing American forces which landed on Truk."

This was about eight hours after Tokyo's first broadcast acknowledgment of the action.

The carriers, protected by battleships, cruisers and destroyers, sent several hundred planes against Truk. One reconnaissance pilot brought back reports of sighting more warships in Truk's 40-mile-wide lagoon than "I ever saw at one time in Pearl Harbor", 3,200 miles to the northeast.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander of the United States Pacific fleet, used the significant words, "commenced an attack", in announcing the attack on the bastion—some 200 volcanic formations, bristling with guns, dotted with airfields, guarded by strong defences encircled by a protective reef with few entrances.

This blow fell less than two weeks after conquest of Kwajalein Atoll, keystone of the Marshalls more than 1,000 miles east of Truk, a conquest which afforded a lagoon base or the most powerful United States fleet ever amassed in the Pacific.

Admiral Nimitz' cryptic announcement said the attack was begun by "powerful naval task forces. . .with several of our planes participating".

Neutralize Airfields.

Although there was no elaboration, there was nothing to indicate the escorting battleships, cruisers and destroyers risked the concentrated fire of Japanese fleet units and shore batteries as well as defending planes to move in and shell Truk.

Until Truk's airfields were neutralized and any carriers inside the Lagoon were knocked out, a ship bombardment would be a doubly dangerous venture.

But the assault did carry the American offensive on past such Japanese-held bases as Eniwetok in the Western Marshalls and Kusaie and Ponape in the Eastern Carolines. The latter was hit Monday by 55 tons of bombs dropped by land-based planes.

May Be Pearl Harbor Defeat.

These dispatches recalled 105 Japanese bombers and torpedo planes made the attack Dec. 7, 1941 on Pearl Harbor whereas the initial assault on Truk was made by "several hundred" planes, meaning at least 300 and probably many more.

HOUSE SUSTAINS ROOSEVELT VETO OF SUBSIDY BILL

President in Message States Legislation is 'Inflation Measure'

GIVES OTHER REASONS

Washington, Feb. 18. (AP)—President Roosevelt today vetoed the Anti-Subsidy Bill and the House of Representatives promptly sustained the veto by a vote of 151 to 226.

A two-thirds majority was required to override the veto. The vote was 226 to override the President to 151 against.

The President said in his veto message that the legislation was "an inflation measure, a high cost of living measure, a food shortage measure".

The subsidy repealer was attached as a rider to a bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation, which expired yesterday. Speaker Sam Rayburn (Dem.-Tex.) said the corporation would be continued by new legislation.

The legislation proposed to end government subsidy payments for food after June 30. In addition, it would extend the life of the commodity Credit Corporation until June 30, 1945.

Mr. Roosevelt said that it, in effect, would reverse a Congressional policy and repeal the economic Stabilization Act.

He said no major warring country had been able to stabilise living costs without subsidies and that he did not see how the wage line could be held if the bill became law.

Once that line breaks, he asserted, food costs will rise still further and all other costs will go up, including those of munitions and supplies for the Armed Forces.

Won't Accept Responsibility.

The President told Congress that the Legislation would destroy the stabilization program and "I cannot accept responsibility for its disastrous consequences." He said he hoped Congress would not compel these consequences.

The measure, Mr. Roosevelt declared, would boost the government's cost of food index at least seven per cent and raise the entire cost of living materially.

He said the housewive would have to face these added posts:

Ten cents a pound more for butter, nearly eight cents a pound more for cheese, an additional cent a quart for milk, an extra cent a loaf for bread, seven cents more for 10 pounds of flour, four cents a pound more for hamburger, 4½ cents for pork chops, 6½ cents for sliced ham, 3½ cents for chuck roast and five cents for round

Truk not only has warship, airfields and extensive gun defences but also great oil storage facilities, underground installations and vast stores of supplies, said to be sufficient to last for years.

Japan Admits Attack.

New York, Feb. 18—(AP)— The Tokyo radio said today the Japanese naval base of Truk has been attacked by American carrier based planes and quoted an Imperial headquarters communique as saying "fierce fighting is now going on between our forces and the enemy."

The English language broadcast, reported by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service, was the first recorded Japanese reference to the assault on Truk, which was announced yesterday from U. S. Pacific Fleet headquarters at Pearl Harbor.

The Office of War Information said there was no indication whether the Japanese people themselves had been informed.

PARTISANS STAB ACROSS BORDER INTO NORTH ITALY

Battling Germans South of First Great War Battlefield of Caporetto

CROSS PIAVE RIVER

London, Feb. 18 —(CP)— Yugoslav Partisan forces have stabbed across the Slovene border into northern Italy and now are battling the Germans just south of the First Great War battlefield of Caporetto, Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) announced today.

A communique broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio said units of the 30th Patriot Division had crossed the Piave river between Gorizia and Tolomina and occupied the right bank of the stream. Bitter fighting is in progress, the bulletin said.

Tolmina is 10 miles southeast of Caporetto and Gorizia is 20 miles further downstream.

The communique also reported continued heavy fighting between German and Partisan forces in the Croat province of Zagorje between Ludbreg and Koprivliva.

One hundred Germans were killed, the bulletin said, in a collision of two Nazi troop trains near Skpolje in southern Yugoslavia.

Ind. Socialist Candidate Wins By 4,561 Majority

London, Feb. 18. (CP)—Alderman Charles White, Independent Socialist today won the West Derbyshire by election, defeating the Marquess of Hartington, the government's candidate, by a majority of 4,561 votes.

Polling in the rural constituency took place yesterday and the results were announced today as follows: White, 16,336; Lord Hartington, Conservative, 11,775; Robert Goodall, Agriculturalist, 233.

The House of Commons vacancy was caused by the retirement of Lt.-Col H. Hunloke, an uncle of Lord Hartington. In the last by-election in the district, in 1938, Col. Hunloke defeated Alderman White by a majority of 5,524.

While White's victory was not unexpected— he had been favored in pre-voting odds at 5 to 4—the defeat of Lord Hartington, heir to the Duke of Devonshire and future head of the Cavendish family, was a blow at the Churchill Government. The Prime Minister himself entered the fight with letters of support and encouragement written to Lord Hartington.

The Labor and Liberal parties did not contest the election, under the wartime truce.

By capturing the House of Commons seat, White repeated the victory of his shoe-maker father a quarter-century ago. The elder White also defeated a member of the Cavendish family, breaking a hold that family had on the seat for nearly three centuries.

The elder White died two days before polling day in 1923 and from then until 1938 the present Duke of Devonshire held the seat as the Marquess of Hartington. Col. Hunloke won it in the by-election of 1938 caused by the elevation of the Marquess to the House of Lords in succession to his father.

Another by-election vote also was announced today. It resulted in a government victory. T. F. Hubbard, Labor candidate and former miner, won the Kirkcaldy, Scotland, contest to fill a vacancy caused by retirement of Tom Kennedy, former Labor whip.

Nearly 800 Nazi Army Commanders Flying Out of 'Trap' Are Shot Down

Moscow, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Nazi officers, scrambling to board transport planes and flee the bloody Dnieper Bend trap, shouted back to their doomed men to "Keep on! Relief will come", the newspaper Izvestia quoted captured Germans as saying today.

It termed the desertions by Nazi commanders one of the most sordid chapters of German military history.

During the last few days of the slaughter, the newspaper continued, the weary and hungry Germans still fighting within the trap were issued a triple portion of Vodka and sent, drunken, to die before the Russian guns.

Izvestia said that in addition to the 52,000 Germans who died there, dozen of Junkers transports each carrying from 30 to 40 Nazi officers were shot down by Russian fighter plans as they attemped to flee. It said that of the 3,000 commanders who fled by transport, almost 800 were killed as the Russians shot them from the skies.

NEW DOMINION LABOR RELATIONS CODE INTRODUCED

2,500,000 Industrial Workers Covered by New Regulations

PENALTIES PROVIDED

Ottawa, Feb. 18. (CP)—Some 2,500,000 of Canada's 3,500,000 industrial workers are estimated officially to be covered by provisions of a new Dominion labor relations code which makes collective bargaining and arbitration of disputes compulsory in war industries and other so-called "national" occupations.

The code, tabled in the commons yesterday by Labor Minister, provides for compulsory negotiation between employers and certified bargaining agents. It prohibits strikes during the seletion of a bargaining agency, negotiation of an agreement, conciliation proceedings if necessary, and the life of the agreement after it is adopted.

However, strikes or lockouts still are possible under certain conditions —after collective bargaining efforts have failed and a conciliation board report has been before the Labor Minister for 14 days without completion of an employer-employee agreement.

The code authorizes establishment of a wartime labor relations board comprising a chairman, vice-chairman and not more than eight other members, and certification by the board of bargaining agencies representing the majority of employees in affected industries.

Other Clauses.

Other clauses outline concilation procedure if negotiations for an agreement fail, and define unfair practices by employers, employees' organizations and unions.

National occupations, previously under the industrial disputes inquiry act but now superseded by the new code include railways, communications, steamship lines, mining and smelting operations and public utilities.

The code, given immediate endorsation by Percy R. Bengough, president of the Trades and Labor Congress, and A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, may be extended to cover more workers. One of its provisions enables any province to introduce legislation to make the code applicable to all workers in provincial jurisdiction.

All Except But Ontario.

This clause, which would not restrict the code to war industries and national employment, is believed to be an attempt to meet objections raised by the Ontario government which had asked that the code be of general application.

RUNNING ATTACK MADE BY ALLIES ON JAP CONVOY

Six Ships Already Sunk or Damaged and Attack is Continuing

RABAUL HIT HARD

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 18 (AP).—A Japanese convoy attacked by Allied bombers off Mussau Island in the Bismarck Archipelago has lost six ships sunk or damaged, an Allied communique reported today. The attack is still in progress.

Solomons-based bombers and fighters hit Rabaul, Japanese base in northeastern New Britain, Monday and Tuesday with 221 tons of bombs.

Vunakanau, Tobera and Rapopo airdromes at Rabaul were blasted in these latest of almost daily raids which have made the base the most bombed spot in the South Pacific. Twenty-six enemy aircraft were destroyed or damaged on the ground and ten were shot down in the attacks, against the loss of one Allied fighter.

The Japanese sent 15 dive-bombers to attack shipping and the beaches at the Green Islands, which New Zealand and American troops occupied Tuesday. Six of the raiders were downed.

Airdrome Blasted.

On New Britain Island, American marines pushed eastward from Cape Gloucester on the northwest coast. The marines have reached Rottock Bay, about 27 miles east of the cape.

Contact with Japanese troops has been made by Allied troops along Mot river, about seven miles west of Saidor on the northeast New Guinea coast. It was southeast of Saidor that Australian troops recently joined American soldiers who invaded Saidor from the sea Jan. 2. The contact at Point Iris on the Mot river may mean the Allies are moving toward Madang, the enemy base about 50 miles up the coast.

SEEKS IMMUNITY FROM BOMBS

Washington, Feb. 18—(AP)—The Vatican sought immunity from bombs and shells for the Pope's summer residence at Castel Gandolfo yesterday, declaring it is jammed with 10,000 refugees, and there are no German soldiers on the premises.

LUFTWAFFE MORE NERVOUS

Toronto, Feb. 18—(CP)—Flt. Lt. Graham Robertson, with the Canadian Red Indian squadron overseas since its formation in 1941, has returned on short leave with a conviction that the German Air Force is losing its grip. "They're twitchy; they won't fight," said Robertson.

ALLIES REPULSE SECOND MAJOR GERMAN ATTACK

Anzio Bridgehead Unshaken, While at Cassino Artillery Rips Nazi Lines

HEAVY BOMBARDMENT

Naples, Feb. 18 (AP).—Hundreds of Allied guns thundeing in unison shook the Germans in Cassino with a six-hour shelling today in one of the war's most intense bombardments in the Mediterranean area as Allied headquarters announced the enemy's heavy attacks against the Anzio bridgehead had been repulsed.

The guns poured a deadly hail of shells into battered and blackened Cassino in a barrage which ended a little before dawn.

Meanwhile troops on the beachhead, aided by one of the greatest aerial umbrella ever raised in this theatre, beat off head-on attacks made by the Germans in an effort to drive the Allies back into the sea at any cost.

Attempt Frontal Attack.

The Germans attempted a frontal attack straight down the 10-mile stretch of road from Carroceto (Aprilia) to Anzio, apparently willing to take enormous losses to carry out Hitler's demand that British and American troops be driven off their springboard.

But they were met by a terrific smash from Allied air might, including hundreds of heavy bombers which carried out the greatest air action ever fought in the Mediterranean area in support of ground troops.

Showering the enemy with thousands of anti-personnel and fragmentation bombs and other missiles, the bombers attacked all along just behind the Germans' front.

1,500 Sorties Carried Out.

Clearing weather which permitted the air forces to take off in strength saw swarms of medium and light bombers roaming the battle area and striking the enemy almost at will.

Allied airmen carried out 1,500 sorties, in one of the biggest days they have had.

Although this had the effect of pinning down German armor and infantry, bitter fighting still was raging along the beachhead.

Besides making his main effort down the Via Anziate toward Anzio, the enemy also struck in the Cisterna area. Two regiments penetrated into Allied lines, but Allied headquarters said the Anglo-American position was re-established by prompt counter-attacks.

At other points German thrusts were repulsed before any breakthrough was achievede.

Royal Marines in Every Battle Fight 'With Courage Terrible to See'

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 18—(CP)— Where British arms face an enemy, from the Dover straits to India, there, too, the Royal marines can be found fighting "with a courage terrible to see" as the official report described them at Dieppe.

There has never been a time in the tradition-steeped history of the corps, founded in 1664 by Charles II, when Britain's marines have fulfilled their original function to fight to land and by sea more fully than in this war.

Read the achievements of the corps from 1939-43 as related by the admiralty in "the Royal Marines" and a scene from every chapter of British arms against Japan, Germany and Italy unfolds, no less vividly for the prosaic lanuguage and lack of dramatics in these official books.

The commando has been descirbed as a product of this war's amphibious operations but the Royal Marines always have been commandos, trained from the outset for land-sea operations and specialized assignments requiring toughness, skill and initiative, at home in the battleship's 16-inch turrets or behind a Bren gun in the Malayan jungle.

The Marines' traditional role has been reinforcement of the Navy's strength and they do it in a dozen different ways.

Form Landing Parties.

They form landing parties from ship to shore bases to carry out a definite task to be followed by Namsos or Aandalsnes in the Norwegian campaign, or Boulogne or Calais later.

They fight the tough rearguard actions. That was Crete and Norway, too, for they were the last to leave as well as the first British troops to land in Norway in fulfillment of one of the corps' oldest traditions.

They create and occupy advanced bases on friendly or enemy territory. That was the occupation of the Faroe islands or the landing at Madagascar.

Against the Japanese, they went ashore in Malaya after the repulse and the Prince of Wales had been sunk and fought gallantly in a jungle battle foredoomed to failure.

The Marines have fought three times with hte Canadians since 1939—at Dieppe when sent in to support the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, at Hong Kong and Sicily, where they were the first of the sea-borne invasion forces to land, assigned to knock out any big guns that might hamper the Canadians.

The family tradition in the marines is so strong, a Naval officer was led to remark, "they don't recruit marines ,they breed them."

Action May Lead To Withdrawal From N. Russia

Retreat Toward Baltic States Sign Of Foe's Growing Manpower Crisis

LIQUIDATE NAZI ARMY

By JAMES M. LONG
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 18—(AP) — The Germans announced today the evacuation of Staraya Russa, their strongest base between Leningrad and Smolensk, in a broadening crackup of defences which seemed to presage the complete German abandonment of northern Russia.

The Red Army triumph south of Lake Ilmen came one day after the Russians said they had completed the liquidation of the German 8th Army trapped around Korsun near the Dnieper bend, inflicting on the enemy his worst single disaster in Russia since Stalingrad. Marshal Stalin yesterday announced 52,000 had been killed and 11,000 captured from the 10 divisions and a brigade, picketed in the Dnieper bend. Another 21,900 had been killed in futile efforts to break open the trap bringing total German losses around Korsun to 84,900.

Berlin's broadcast account of the newest retreat toward the Baltic States reflected Germany's growing manpower crisis. The Germans said the retreat was necessary "to shorten the front and gain further operational reserves." Moscow has not yet confirmed the victory.

Staraya Russa—a bastion on the Lovat river—had been outflanked by Russian offensives west from captured Novgorod, north of Lake Ilmen, and south from Leningrad to within 27 miles of Pskov. These columns had reached positions 100 miles due west of Staraya Russa and the Red army was astride the direct east-west railway retreat or supply line.

The evacuation of Staraya Russa gave the Russians control of all but the extreme western tip of Lake Ilmen and there the rail junction of Shimsk seemed ready to fall.

The Germans countered Stalin's victory claim of last night with the assertion that a relief tank force had broken through to the trapped remnants of the German 8th Army in the middle Ukraine.

"West of Chirkasy in bitter defence and attacks which lasted several days, connection with cut-off German fighting groups has been re-established," a Berlin broadcast said. The Nazis claimed a corridor was cut through the ranks of the numerically superior Russians and said fighting was "fluctuating".

1,000 U.S. Troops Lost as Troopship Sunk by Enemy

Washington, Feb. 18 —(CP)— The enemy has sunk an Allied troopship with loss of 1,000 American soldiers in European waters, the greatest toll ever exacted from United States convoy forces plying the oceans. The ship, carrying about 2,000 troops, was attacked at night, probably by submarine. Half the men were rescued, the army said.

The announcement gave only bare details, the army explaining that the Germans probably do not know fully the success of the attack. The date and location were not revealed. "European waters" could mean anywhere in that continental area from Italy through the Mediterranean, off Spain, France or the British Isles.

A number of transports have been lost, but never before with such a toll of American lives. About a year ago, the navy disclosed sinking of two cargo-passenger vessels in the Atlantic, with army, navy, coast guard and civilian personnel. Six hundred of the 900 on one ship were lost, and about half the 500 on the other. The President Coolidge hit a mine in the South Pacific Oct. 26, 1942, but only five lives were lost, while between 4,500 and 6,000 were saved.

Forty-three servicemen died in the sinking of the tender Langley and another 43 soldiers on miscellaneous merchant vessels.

The ship was attacked in darkness and sank rapidly in a heavy sea.

"Military security now permits announcement of the sinking, due to enemy action, of an Allied ship carrying troops in European waters on an undisclosed date," said the brief announcement.

"American soldiers in substantial numbers were aboard the ship, which was lost at night. In a heavy sea, the ship sank rapidly and 1,000 men were reported missing. Rescue efforts resulted in the saving of about the same number.

"The emergency addresses of all who are listed as missing have now been informed. There is reason to believe that the enemy does not know of the results of this attack and therefore the date is withheld."

Army officers said that no additional information could be supplied concerning the ship or the location of the sinking.

MUST NOT SEND UNTINNED MEATS

Despite postal department reminders to the public not to mail untinned meats or other spoilable foodstuffs to soldiers overseas, the base post office recently reported an unbelievable incident — a damaged parcel containing several pounds of beefsteak, a roast of pork and a pound of butter, along with a suet pudding.

The postal department points out that such foodstuffs do not make the best travelling companions in heated railway cars or when packed with thousands of other parcels in the holds of ships for trans-ocean military destinations.

Eighteen Boys Join Air Cadets

Eighteen local boys, all new recruits into the Belleville Air Cadet Corps, had their initial introduction to drill routine early this week when with other corps personnel they were guests at No. 5 Initial Training School. The eighteen new boys, who have recently joined with the Air Cadet Corps enjoyed a drill period with special instructor PO. Cuttrice as their instructor.

The 54 Air Cadet members who attended at No. 5 I.T.S. enjoyed a full night's program arranged through the R.C.A.F. liaison officer, PO. Bishop and by permission of Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger. They had their regular drill period and then took part in organized games following which the airmen's canteen was turned over to them with a subsequent raid on hot dogs, "cokes" and chocolate bars. It is reported this part of the program cost the cadet officers a bit of their loose change as they stood the treats.

As announced earlier by the Air Cadet commanding officer, Dawson Boyd, new recruits into the cadet corps who qualified by last Monday night, will be eligible to attend summer camp later in the year.

Winter Number Of K. G. School Paper Issued

Having the distinction of being the only public school in Belleville, and possibly in this section of the province, which publishes its own student newspaper periodical, King George Public School has recently issued its 1944 winter number. The publication is truly a credit to its compositors and particularly to the students for their contributions of school news and verse and prose items.

The entire work of publishing the 'Courier" as the school periodical is called, is done by the school students, including the sale of advertising and sale of copies, which now number more than 300 per issue. The periodical is turned out on the school duplicator.

Special features of the periodical include the regular letter from the school principal C. A. Brown, while the current number carries a letter from the public school inspector, L. A. Kells, giving commendation to the staff of composers and reporters for their fine publication. Drawings by grade pupils illustrate the periodical, while prominence is also given to the school project of salvage paper collections. Proceeds from the periodical go to the King George Home and School Association.

Dedicates New March Number To Air Cadets

Sunday evening's band concert at Bridge Street United Church will be of special interest to officers and members of the Belleville Air Cadets in that a newly composed regimental march 'Eyes Front" from the pen of Belleville's distinguished composer, Mr. E. R. Hinchey, will be dedicated to the local squadron. The number will be played by the Belleville Municipal Band as part of the concert program which is being sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of the Belleville General Hospital.

Officers of the 133rd Belleville Air Cadet Squadron feel honored in having as their own regimental number a march from the pen of Belleville's well-known musical composer, and today Air Cadet Flying Officer Dawson Boyd, commanding officer, expressed his and the corps' appreciation for the gesture. It will be remembered that last summer a number by Mr. Hinchey, the march "Athene" was chosen by the Canadian Women's Army Corps as their regimental number.

It is requested by the air cadet commanding officer that as many members of the local corps as possible attend the concert at Bridge Street United Church to hear the premiere of their regimental number.

Objective for the 'Belleville' Has Been Raised to $5,000

Extra Funds Will be Put in Trust Account for Future Use

CORVETTE "ADOPTED"

The committee of the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" FUND met yesterday afternoon in the Council Chamber of the City Hall to discuss the final stages of the campaign and to consider the suggestion that the city of Belleville carry on beyond the 'sponsoring' stage and adopt the corvette "BELLEVILLE" for the duration of the war. A motion by His Worship Mayor Rollins, honorary chairman of the committee, was made moving that the "BELLEVILLE" be adopted for as long as it is in the war service, and that, the funds raised for this purpose be incorporated into a trust account to be used at the discretion of the committee for the furnishing of comforts to the men who will comprise the ship's company when she has been commissioned for active duty on the high seas. The motion was seconded by Mrs. E. J. Neate, regent of the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E.

Following the motion to adopt the "BELLEVILLE", it was moved by chairman J. B. Boyce that the objective be raised from $3,500, as originally set for the sponsoring alone, to $5,000 which would make the adoption possible with the added amount. It was felt by the committee that the original outlay of money to equip and furnish the ship with the finest accessories possible would be lost sight of in short time if the "BELLEVILLE" was left unadopted and later taken up by some other town or city. A considerable amount of money will be involved in equipping the "BELLEVILLE" before she is outfitted for action and, unless the citizens and the city of Belleville carries the project through to adoption, another municipality would reap the benefits and distinction of having the finest equipped ship in the Canadian Navy as their protege at only a small figure each year. Mayor Rollins said that Belleville was large enough to extend their efforts to a further point than simply sponsoring the ship, that it would be disastrous to the record of the city to permit the "BELLEVILLE" to sail wthout the backing of everyone in the city whose name she bears. The committee was unanimous in its approval.

Confidence was expressed by several members of the committee that a larger amount than that set would be received from public spirited and patriotic citizens. The trust fund to be established would be controlled by the committee who would use discretion in the administration of the funds entrusted for the welfare and comfort of the men aboard the "BELLEVILLE". Close contact would be maintained by the committee with the men and officers aboard the protege ship and their requirements and needs would be considered as requests were received. The fund would be administered with the sole object of seeing that each man aboard the "BELLEVILLE" had an equal share in the comforts supplied. Replacements of defective equipment supplied at the sponsoring, additions to the ship's library, additional winter clothing not supplied in naval issue sent to the crew from time to time, items of food and cigarettes would be the main purpose of the fund.

Trenton Plane Reported Missing On Night Flight

ANNUAL BANQUET IS HELD BY LIFE UNDERWRITERS

Graham Walter of Canada Life Heard in Talk on Fear and Its Results

MANY GUESTS

Canada Life Assurance Company played hosts to members of the Belleville and District Life Underwriters' Association of Canada, their wives and friends at the annual banquet held in the main dining room at the Quinte Hotel on Thursday evening. Attendance was representative of the district with salesmen from Napanee, Brighton and North Hastings being present.

The Belleville branch of the company acted as direct hosts for the evening with Mr. Ralph Morden, local representative, acting as chairman for the program. He officially welcomed the guests and paid tribute to the ladies, especially to the wives of salesmen, who, he said, were in a great measure responsible for their husbands' success.

Guest speaker for the evening was Mr. Graham (Pete) Walter, branch manager of the Osgoode branch of Canada Life in Toronto. He delivered an inspirational talk on fear and its relation and hindrance toward success of the individual.

Characteristics Required.

Three characteristics, to have an objective, to have a desire for accomplishment, and a determination for success which surmounts all possibility of failure, were cited as the requirements toward achieving success in life. "Life begins on the day that you rid yourself of fear", stated Mr. Walters. Fear of failure in many instances kept people from trying.

"All of us could do things, which we did not dream of doing, if we would only try", he said. "Some day many of us will realize how almost successful we were. Only those who recognize their own ability to do something, and then do something about it, really live as they are intended".

Former Track Athlete.

A former track athlete, Mr. Walter illustrated his point of failure resulting in many cases because of fear of trying, by citing his own experiences while trying out for the Canadian Olympic team in 1928. During early school life his prowess as a runner had seen him returned victorious at school and district track meets with the eventual try-out for the Olympic team. Pitted against the Canadian champion he had been intimidated into believing he was no match and after trailing the champ by only one foot at the tape had realized he had failed because he had been afraid to really try.

"The Canadian champ got a trip to Paris out of it", he concluded, "while I got a trip back to my home in Listowel. I eventually realized that no prizes are given out in sports, or in life, for mediocre efforts".

The guest speaker was introduced by C. H. Rook, Kingston branch manager, while member appreciation was expressed by Harry Sager of Trenton.

In fine fettle in his role of song leader "Sandy" Burrows led salesmen and their guests in spirited community singing, while adding to the enjoyment of the evening were vocal solos by Miss Sheila Burrows. Leo Riggs acted as accompanist at the piano and delighted with a beautifully rendered piano solo.

Labor Official Addresses Group Of Local Workers

Speaking to an assembly of United Automobile Workers, Local 426, members at a meeting held in the Aajama Hall last night, Mr. Drummond Wren, general secretary of the Workers' Educational Association of Canada and educational director for the United Automobile Workers, said that the need for democracy in industry can only be accomplished through the effective organization of labor, intelligently led, the movement resulting from sound education so that labor is familiar with the problems it and the nation are confronted with in order that they will have their full democratic participation in the solution.

Mr. James Smith, international representative of the United Automobile Workers, referred to the report of the industrial commission which appeared in The Ontario Intelligencer on Wednesday, Feb. 9, as follows: "The extremely difficult labor situation brought about by new labor movements and aggressive action by international unions has occasioned strong defensive action upon the part of employing industrialists." He said there would be no labor difficulties if the intentions of the industrialists were in favor of labor and for the establishment of sound collective bargaining relationships with unions, otherwise the statement could only mean that there is an intention to continue a bitter struggle which can only result in serious industrial unrest and strife. Relationships after the war are going to have to be faced, and there must necessarily be a greater measure of good sound labor-management relationships. Mr. Smith said that the manufacturer cannot solve the problems by himself, that it is ridiculous to think that he can solve them by himself. Such would throw the world back into the hard days of 1933, and the people will not stand for it.

Following the speeches by the two C.I.O. representatives, a nomination and election of officers for 1944 was held in the open meeting. Mr. Mike Ridley was unanimously returned to office as president of Local 426 U.W.A.-C.I.O., as were Don Masterson, vice-president, Eulalie McNeil, as recording secretary and Rene St. Denis as financial secretary-treasurer.

A motion picture was shown which illustrated the trade labor movement in the United States and the opposition they met with from large corporations and police forces during strikes. It also showed conditions which existed when share-croppers in the southern states asked for a ten-cent raise in pay. It carried the labor movement through the various phases of strikes and unsettlement to the present-day situation of collective bargaining.

POLISH CABINET IN LONDON MAY BOW TO DEMANDS

Probably Will Resign and Form New Cabinet Acceptable to Russia

WORD SENT TO STALIN

By JUDSON O'QUINN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 18 (AP).—London Poles said today the Polish cabinet here may bow to Moscow's demands and resign thereby enabling Premier Stanislaw Mikolajcayk to form a new government acceptable to and capable of dealing with Russia.

Although reports of a possible resignation were denied in official Polish circles, those in close touch with the Polish government admit privately that cabinet changes are possible to meet Soviet demands for removal of some of the members Moscow has accused of being anti-Russian.

Other reports said the cabinet's decisions on Moscow's newest boundary proposals were being transmitted to Premier Stalin by Prime Minister Churchill, the British prime minister was said to have sent one message to Stalin earlier in the week and now is preparing a second message, possibly telling Stalin that the Poles might be prepared to accept the boundary terms and order the Polish underground to take up arms against the Germans alongside the Russians.

Acceptance of Moscow's boundary proposals and an order to the underground to collaborate with the Red army would remove two of the greatest stumbling blocks to Russo-Polish accord, leaving changes within the Polish government the principal remaining problem. Formation of a new government apparently would solve this last major obstacle.

Aikens Sunday School

3rd Sidney—A piano solo by Miss Barbara Hamilton was the special number for Sunday School at Aikens on Sunday. A very fine temperance program was presented by the temperance superintendant, Mrs. Selbourne Westover, with several members taking part. It was pointed out that the liquor traffic as it is today may well be called a wolf in sheep's clothing, the voice may be gentle, but underneath it is as ferocious as a wolf and out to kill the finest and best in our youth. The chief object of all liquor concerns is gain for self, not for the betterment of humanity. An extract from a letter written by the Canadian flying hero, George Buerling, to his mother, was read, wherein he thanked his mother for her wise teachings during his childhood and early youth. George Buerling states that in flying, especially in contacting the enemy where split seconds may mean life or death, there is no place for liquor. During the church service which followed Rev. L. W. Scott chose as his text, "I am come that ye might have life and have it more abundantly." An urgent appeal was made for funds to be sent to the starving people of India and China.

Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Hubble and Mrs. Selburn Westover called on Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hay on Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Bailey and Miss Jewel Bailey were dinner guests on Sunday evening of Mrs. Simpson and Miss Marjorie Simpson at their home in Belleville.

Gunner Harold Perry, who has been visiting his brother, Mr. Urvan Perry, is now a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, where he was taken after a knee injury.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Jones and son Richard and Mr. Orville May of Belleville, spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Selburn Westover.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mills, of Cannifton called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Woods on Monday afternoon.

The fall of snow over the weekend was much appreciated by the farmers, who were anxiously waiting for sleighing to get their winter's wood hauled from the woods where it has been cut since early winter. Tuesday's storm blocked the roads for a short time.

Messrs. Donald and Burton Hubble spent the weekend at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ritz, fourth of Thurlow, and attended the Valentine party given by Mr. Norman Ritz on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Urvan Perry entertained a number of friends at a Valentine party on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Brummell and Diana of Massassaga were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Carr.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Burrell and Bobbie of Evergreen were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert McCurdy.

The blizzard on Tuesday blocked many of the concession roads and a number of social events were postponed until a later date.

Mr. Kenneth Stewart was a dinner guest on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Herity of Moira.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Green, Jimmie and George were Friday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Thompson of Sine.

The Carmel Royal Black Preceptory which has been located at White Lake for a number of years, has been moved to the lodge room at West Huntingdon and the first meeting was held on Friday evening with a good attendance.

Mr. Bill Donnan has returned home after spending the past two months' in Toronto.

Changes in Pay and Allowances For Army Under Consideration

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Feb. 18 —(CP)— Two changes in the pay and allowances regulations for the army are under consideration, Defence Minister Ralston told the House of Commons last night.

One is some adjustment in the impact of financial penalties on soldiers who go absent without leave and later return to duty. The other concerns the case of a soldier's mother who has a husband earning a very small income but is otherwise without income.

In the first instance, under the present regulation the dependents' allowances for relatives of a soldier who goes A. W. L. continue for a period of three months and they continue to receive the pay he assigns them. When he is apprehended or comes back to duty he is required to pay back to the government that part of his pay which went to his dependents while he was away although he himself draws no pay for the period.

Some members termed this a hardship since it meant that for several months after returning to duty the soldier gets little cash. Col. Ralston said some representations on the point were under consideration.

Case of Soldier's Mother in Need.

The present regulations allow payment of an allowance of $25 a month to a soldier's mother if she is in need, providing he also assigns some of his pay. If the mother has a husband, however, she may not qualify unless he is fully incapacitated and unable to support her. The Minister said a proposal now under consideration would make the definition of incapacity "less restrictive" so that earning of a small income by the husband would not bar a woman from receiving the allowance.

The discussion took place on the army estates in the war appropriation bill, and ranged over a wide field with several hours devoted to various angles in pay and allowance regulations.

Some members contended that families should not be made to suffer because of the crimes of soldiers, and that allowances should not be stopped when soldiers desert.

Col. Ralston said he could not see that argument. The basic idea of allowances was the good of the service, to relieve soldiers from worry about their families at home. If they were still relieved of worry and knew their families would be taken care of when they went A. W. L. there would not be much deterrent to that offence.

Use of Soldiers A. W. O. L.

Some members who said they had in mind cases of wives whose allowances were stopped found it hard to understand how soldiers could be absent without leave in England for 12 months or more without being apprehended. George Tustin (PC—Prince Edward-Lennox) expressed belief such men could have been killed in air raids.

Maj. Mulch said it was not only possible but common. He said some men had been absent longer than 12 months and in the interval had occupied lucrative positions in civilian life.

"The English people are very hospitable," he said. "They treat our boys very well. They treat them too well. You can live longer in England without money if you are absent without leave than anywhere I know of."

Reduction in Venereal Disease.

Col. Ralston told the House there had been a "significant reduction" in the incidence of venereal disease in the army from 38 cases per 1,000 in 1942 to 32 cases in 1943.

All three services were making a determined attempt and working as a team to combat the disease which were the greatest cause of loss of man-days.

Hon. Herbert Bruce (PC—Toronto Parkdale) raised the subject of venereal disease by inquiring about a telegram he said he received quoting a press report to the effect corvettes had been delayed in sailing from Quebec because of venereal disease among the crews.

Navy Minister Macdonald said no ship had been delayed in sailing anywhere for that reason so far as he knew and gave a specific denial that any ship had been delayed in sailing from Quebec.

John Blackmore, new democracy leader, failed in attempt to move adjournment of the House to discuss the need for encouraging more sugar-beet production to meet what he said was a prospective shortage of sugar.

Car and Tractor Lost in Blaze Near Northport

Picton, Feb. 18. —More than one hundred volunteer fire fighters managed to confine a fire, which broke out at the farm of G. H. German, Northport, to the drive house, thereby saving the barn and house nearby. Mr. German was awakened by light from the flames late at night. An alarm was broadcast over the telephone and all men in the district responded. The building was razed to the ground, contents including a tractor, two cutters, democrat and other articles owned by Mr. German, a complete kit of tools and a car owned by his brother-in-law, Lew Crouse.

The wind was blowing towards the house and barn during the early part of the fire, with a pig pen of cement with metal roof in between. This was largely responsible for confining the fire to the one building. Livestock were removed from the barn as it was feared that building would also be lost. The wind changed, aiding the fire fighters. Origin of the blaze is a mystery. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

Aims of Kinsmen Outlined.

At a dinner meeting Wednesday night, 25 local young men were present to hear the aims and objects of the Kinsmen Club outlined. Seven members from Kingston were in attendance and T. D. Slater outlined the purposes of such clubs. As a result of the meeting, it was decided to organize such a club, to meet twice a month. William Brahscombe was named president; T. J. Bourke, secretary and Charles Lewis, treasurer. Dayton Wark, George Anderson and C. Lewis were named a committee to act with the provisional executive to pass upon memberships. It is expected there will be 30 charter members. The Kingston visitors were given a hearty vote of thanks by J. K. Welsh and Ralph Warren.

Three Arrive Home.

Three more local men have arrived home from overseas, C.S.M. Rodger J. Ross, Gunner William Steenburg and Cpl. Warren Pringle.

C.S.M. Ross was formerly a local newspaperman and enlisted in the R.C.A.F., as a photographer, in November 1940, serving at Toronto and Rockcliffe before joining the Personal Identification Bureau at Ottawa. He transferred to the army in a similar capacity and went overseas 14 months ago. He was stationed in London with C.H.M.Q. Records Office. Mrs. Ross has been residing here. After leave, he will report to Ottawa.

Cpl. Pringle was re-united with his bride when he arrived at his home in Cherry Valley. An English girl, she had arrived here a month earlier. He went overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in December 1939, and was wounded in Italy. Residents of that community are planning a welcome and shower for the couple.

Gunner Steenburgh was a member of the Royal Canadian Artillery and expressed disappointment that he did not see action owing to illness. He had been overseas 16 months. Though expected home for some time, his arrival at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Steenburg, here, came as a complete surprise. After 25 days' leave, he will report to Kingston.

"Canadians are mighty lucky", was the general comment of the men, who were loud in their praise of the hospitality of the British people, and of the manner in which they are carrying on under difficulties. They were also very proud of the record of members of the local regiment which has so distinguished itself in action in Sicily and in Italy.

Promoted to Captain.

Mrs. R. S. Newman yesterday received word that her son, Fred, who is overseas with the 8th Canadian Infantry Brigade Workshop, R.C.O.C., has been promoted from the rank of first lieutenant to that of captain. He has been overseas a year. He received his degree of Bachelor of Science in Mechanical Engineering at Queen's University, which he attended after being a student at Albert College, Belleville. He was widely known as a member of local orchestras. His father is with Wartime Housing Limited.

Airman Won Draw.

AC. Victor Sandiford, a member of the Royal Air Force, was the winner of a centrepiece and place mats on which tickets were sold by the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary. The draw was made at a dance in the Armouries, Wednesday night, when 400 attended. The R.A.F. orchestra provided music.

Wounded Overseas.

Mrs. William Cole received word that her son, Pte. Percy E. Minaker, was wounded in action Feb. 2nd. He went overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1939, serving in Sicily before going to Italy. Nature or extent of his wounds was not given in the official message.

Poultry Club.

The Rotary Club has planned a Poultry Club for county boys. The 25 members will each provide a boy with 25 chicks. The boys in turn will exhibit the birds at Picton Fair when special prizes will be given, and they will donate one dressed bird for the Rotary Christmas baskets.

Sadie Hawkins' Dance.

The assembly hall at Picton Collegiate was gaily decorated with Valentine emblems, Wednesday night, when a Sadie Hawkins' dance was held. Following the custom the girls extended the invitations, and footed the bills during the evening. Davies' orchestra provided music. More than 100 attended. The Junior Red Cross sold refreshments.

Brevities.

In the first game of the finals of the Church Bantam hockey league, St. Mary Magdalene Cubs defeated the United Church Spitfires, 6-2.

Before reporting to Aylmer, LAC. Charles Hepburn is spending 21 days' leave with his parents, Mr. James deC. Hepburn, M.P.P., and Mrs. Hepburn.

ALLIES REPULSE

Drive Supported with Artillery

As in their offensive Wednesday, the Germans supported their drives with intense artillery fire and used large formations of their air force to support the drive, sending out 185 sorties.

American heavy bombers flew almost double their previous record of close-support sorties, however, while R.A.F. Wellingtons continued the attacks for the sixth night in succession to prevent the Germans frm getting set for new thrusts.

Allied warships contributed to the battle on both fronts. The British cruiser Mauritius blasted the German road bottleneck at Formia, just in front of the main 5th Army front to the south, while other warships took shots at German long-range guns which have been shelling Anzio shipping.

The Germans apparently elected to make the costly drive down the main road toward Anzio because the round on either side was too soft to permit armor manoeuvres.

Held One-third of Cassino

Prior to the heavy shelling of Cassino American troops were reported holding one-third of the town where they have been inching forward from one stronghold to another for nearly two weeks.

There was hard fighting yesterday in the region of Albaneta Ridge, two miles west of Cassino, where the Americans are striving to cut the highway to Rome, but little change in positions took place. The Allies gained the peak of a hill but withdrew before a German counter-attack.

On the 8th Army front fresh snow blanketed the mountains, but an Indian patrol chased off one enemy detachment and British artillery shelled enemy vehicles in the Miglianico area.

Airmen Strike Continuously

The Allies flew about 1,500 sorties —300 more than the previous day, and established a one-day record for this theatre. The Germans also stepped up their air operations considerably, flying an estimated 185 sorties. Allied aircraft shot down three enemy aircraft and lost nine.

The Allied air forces blanketed the beachhead but still had strength to spare for assaults in other sectors. Medium bombers attacked shipping off the west coast of Italy, scoring hits at San Stefano, Marina di Pisa and Porto Ercole. Fighter-bombers attacked the jetty and barracks at Igoumenitsa in Greece.

Yesterday's record force of heavy, medium and light bombers operated over virtually all the immediate battle area in the Carroceto sector and also swept to the rear of the German lines to hit objectives in the vicinity of Frascati and Albano. Targets in the Campleone and Albano areas were hit again last night.

AN EXPLANATION OF REDUCED DRUG STORE HOURS

In 1940 Belleville Drug Stores were open an average of 110 hours weekly. Their total operating staffs,—druggists and assistants—were 30 males and 8 females.
In 1943 staffs totalled 15 males and 25 female clerks.

Ontario law does not permit longer than a 50-hour week for female employees, thus making reduction of open hours an absolute necessity.

Moreover, this not solely a Wartime condition, since it takes five years' store and college training to qualify a druggist, and the boys who would normally be apprenticed now, are all in the armed services.

●

Accordingly, Belleville Druggists are co-operating to give the maximum possible service, and can only ask your co-operation too. We suggest that you clip the schedule below for future reference.

Drug Store Hours

WEEKDAYS: All Stores open till 8 p.m.
SATURDAYS: All Stores open till 10.30 p.m.
SUNDAYS: At least one store open morning and evening, 10 to 1, 6 to 10.
WEDNESDAY: At least one store open all afternoon, till 8 p.m.
HOLIDAYS: At least one store open morning and evening.

You are always at liberty to call your druggist at home, during closed periods, in emergency. He will willingly open his store for you.

Back in School

One of the signs of the new life under Allied occupation is seen in Naples where the Italian children are again trooping back into school. These youngsters have passed through one of the most terrible times in Italian history for this people was betrayed by Mussolini and his Fascist party and when Italy fell with the clash of the Fascist clay leaders, the Hun, notorious for atrocities in—the mood of bitter frustration, ravaged Italy, and is now destroying or carrying off systematically everything of value in Italy to try to stop the Allied progress of liberation.

Now these children are going back to their school lessons, which they will study in the shadow of the war still raging farther north in Italy.

And there is the sublime fact that their country is in the process of being cleared of the roots of dictatorship and aggression. The way ahead will be light in the dawn that brings a freedom from ruthless dictatorships which they will live to see working out in what is expected and hoped to be a worldwide security. These children have suffered from Fascism and Nazism, the homes of many have been destroyed and relatives lost but they will see that better day which will provide them with opportunity of peaceful pursuits.

The Trap Holds

In the pocket in which the Germans have been trapped in Russia the Russian success continues. Make what desperate attempts they can to extricate themselves the Germans have found no chance of success in their efforts to escape for they are under the fire of Russian artillery and mortars.

The grip which the Red armies have upon these German forces suggests that a complete success for the Reds and a great disaster for the Germans will be the result.

Never before in this war have the Germans faced such a gathering of military reverses on the eastern front. The Russian forces are acting with unexampled energy and with brilliance of strategy to cut up the German armies. The Nazi generals were endeavoring to retreat at a rate to enable them to hold, but the insistent pressure of the Russian armies never lets up.

Assurance of Victory

Reassurance by General Alexander that the Allies are near the end of the second round of the battle of the Anzio-Nettuno beachhead and that "we are winning it" coming on top of Mr. Churchill's statement at the weekend that the Allied generals felt confident of the ability of the beachhead force to fulfil the duties entrusted to it and to go on to Rome, was the best of news to the public.

"The third round will come when we've built up for a strong push, gathered our forces and started our punch," said General Alexander and also "we will pull it off." He says the Allies will smash their way to Rome without assistance from the Cassino sector.

Shrines Will be Restored

Though the monastery on Mount Cassino, Italy, founded by St. Benedict of Nursia over fourteen centuries ago, has become a casualty of war, it will no doubt be rebuilt after the war. For it has so scholarly and so deeply religious a past that men feel that it should be perpetuated in a new shrine to replace the old one which had stood on the summit as a symbol of peace and security. The whole Christian world regrets its destruction as a result of military necessity which was carried out to save the lives of the men bringing the assurance of a peace and security to Italy that will not again be destroyed as the peace of this part of the twentieth century has been shattered by the savagery of German Nazism.

Montreal Gazette has a reference to the ancient abbey worthy of repetition: "Undoubtedly the destruction of this ancient shrine involved one of the most difficult decisions and irreparable losses of the war. But it is an event that compels a reconsideration of the value of such historic buildings. Surely they are valuable for something greater than sentimental charm, or as points on a tourist's itinerary. Rather, they gain their meaning from having been associated with the struggle in years past to conserve and enrich the world's good heritage. Their meaning is vital for today, when this same heritage is endangered.

"And what of their destruction under such circumstances? Is it to be regarded as an unredeemed tragedy? Or cannot there be in such destruction a certain grandeur for the building that falls? It is as if they were once more entering into the enduring fight, and sharing the sacrifices that must be made to preserve those good values that must have given them their real significance. Not inglorious are the broken walls that saved spilled blood."

Italy has had a varicolored history and in the course of time many historic buildings have fallen during wars. But the significance for which they once stood has not been lost. Many buildings destroyed in the past have been rebuilt. The monastery of St. Benedict itself had been sacked by the Lombards not long after it was built. It was rebuilt, to be attacked two centuries later by the Saracens. Thereafter it was again rebuilt. After the deluge of destruction this war has caused, a new building will rise for its ideals are not subject to war. They live and they triumph. So when Hitlerism and Fascism have been swept away the human heart cherishing the ideals of spots sacred to memory and glorious in the spiritual ideals which they express will again erect shrines, temples of faith and buildings that will not be subject to the ruthlessness of Hitler and those of his kind.

"Mairzy Doats"

(Time Magazine)

Mairzy Doats and Dozy Doats
and liddle lamzy divey,
A kiddley divey too, wouldn't you?

These iddy-oozey words were spreading fast last week from Tin Pan Alley to any place where a man could go nuts over silly syllables. Most citizens could keep their sanity at least long enough to discover that this apparent double talk was simply nursery talk—it was a paraphrase of an old verse ("Mares eat oats and does eat oats, and little lambs eat ivy. A kid'll eat ivy, too, wouldn't you?")

"Mairzy Doats" was written two years ago by three affable-looking Broadway song writers named Milton Drake, Jerry Livingston and Al Hoffman. Drake got the idea from the infant prattle of his daughter, Niela. Last month Jack Robbins decided to take a chance on it. By last week with a sale of 350,000 sheet music copies, it was already the biggest Tin Pan Alley freak since "Yes, We Have No Bananas" and "The Music Goes 'Round and Around." Bandleader Al Trace, who had introduced the song at Broadway's Hotel Dixie, had made the first recording (for Hit Records). Said he: "People get so annoyed by the words, they go out and buy it. It's just the darndest thing."

LETTER FROM THE BOY

From some outlandish station came his letter yesterday.
We think he's in New Guinea, but he's not allowed to say.
We feel certain that his chuckle still remains a part of him,
For he writes: "Oh, darling mother, in this filthy place I live.
I'd pass up all promotion for that bath you used to give!

"Do you remember, mother, how I tried to run away
When you said: 'Come on! Get ready! It's a bath for you today?'
How I battled! How I struggled! How I filled the air with cries
When you covered me with lather and the soap got in my eyes!
Well, tonight I'm fairly wishing you could lead me to the tub.
I would stand there at attention and be glad to let you scrub.

"I am wishing, darling mother, you could once more probe my ears
With those lovely, pointed fingers that I said were sharp as shears.
I'd be glad to let you lead me by my top knot, and I swear
I would never once start shouting: 'You are pulling out my hair!'
Oh, I wonder, little mother, in those fits of boyish wrath,
Did you think for one brief minute that I'd ever like a bath?

"Oh, we fellows talk things over now we're miles and miles away,
And we count the many blessings that were ours just yesterday,
And the joys we took for granted! Let me tell you, mother dear,
It's for those things we are fighting in these dismal swamps out here.
And there's not a boy among us, trudging beach and jungle path,

Making the Rationed Diets Sufficient To Our Needs.

In times of food rationing we all try to figure out just how best to make up our needs where we cannot get a full supply of the rationed foods such as meat, oranges, cod liver oil and others. Some timely suggestions from a very high authority may help us all at this time.

In the Wisconsin Medical Journal, Dr. Elmer L. Sevringhaus, Madison, Professor of Medicine, Wisconsin Univ., states that difficulty in purchasing the foods usually included in an adequate diet is leading many laymen as well as physicians to wonder whether there will be an increase in the number of people who will not be receiving enough of the right foods to keep them in good health. The two foodstuffs that may not be available in sufficient quantities are proteins and the B vitamins. Dr. Sevringhaus makes the following suggestions.

For lack of animal proteins — meat, fish, eggs—the use of increasing amounts of vegetable proteins, cereal grains in any form, will make up to some extent proteins needed if a sufficient quantity is eaten. However, the quality of the cereal protein is not as good as that in meats and so cannot be relied upon to make up the whole amount needed. If most of the cereal grain is in the form of baked goods made from the modern enriched flour, the intake of the B vitamins—thiamin, riboflavin, nicotinamide—and calcium will be improved. But unless the bread intake is at least six slices a day, not enough of these foodstuffs will be eaten.

"One of the best possible additions to a diet that may not be sufficient is the use of milk, 1 to 2 pints a day". Adults should also drink milk.

As oranges and grapefruit are scarce in most places, tomatoes, fresh or canned, is the next best source of vitamin C. Fresh cabbage is also a good surce of vitamin C.

Vitamin D, so necessary for growing children, usually taken in the form of cod liver oil, is another food factor not readily available and it may be necessary to secure this in some form from your druggist. In large cities milk and bread also are strengthened by vitamin D.

However, if vitamin foods get scarce, Dr. Sevringhaus states that it is possible to secure for not over six cents a day all the vitamins A, B, and D that are needed by the growing child and adult.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

"This world is wild as an old wives tale,
And strange the plain things are.
The earth is enough and the air is enough

* * *

Everyone has read about Eliza and her flight from slavery in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." But few and far between are the stories of fugitive negro slaves in Canada, probably because there were not many of these domestics, and because those in bondage felt their chains lie very lightly upon them. The Montreal Gazette of 1778 does, however, give space to an ad headed "Six Dollars Reward", which goes on to say. "Ran away on the 14th instant, a slave belonging to widow Dury Dessaulnier, aged about 35 years, dressed in striped calico of the ordinary cut, of tolerable stoutness. Whoever will bring her back will receive a reward of six dollars and will be repaid any costs that may be proved to have been incurred in finding her." . . . The idea of slave labour had become so repugnant to Canadians by 1793 that in that year the importation of slaves was forbidden by law. The same decree ordained that the children of slaves were to be emancipated on reaching the age of 25 years.

* * *

One of the many duties of the slave or "hired help" was the baking of bread. This was usually accomplished by the "hop-rising" and the "salt-rising" methods. The former gave best and most certain results. First you took two double handfuls of hops, boiled these in a gallon of soft water until the hops sank to the bottom of the vessel Then you made a batter of a dessert-plateful of flour and water, and into this strained the hop-liquor while scalding hot. When lukewarm, you added a cup of the liquur to set it to work. You let the "barm" stand until it had worked well, then bottled and corred it . . . Some settlers added two or three potatoes to their bread.

Starving-Out Process Used On the Germans

Cairo, Feb. 18 (AP)—Allied air strategy on the so-called "forgotten front" in the eastern Mediterranean is described officially as a starving-out process for the Germans on the islands of Rhodes, Crete and Scarpanto in the Dodecanese.

"The main Allied air strategy in the Balkans, and the Aegean and Ionian seas is directed not so much towards any individual target or targets but against the enemy lines of comunication which supply his ring of island defences, and other strategic points in the theatre."

Last fall the Germans were reported to have 35,000 troops on Crete, 7,000 on Rhodes, and 5,000 scattered among the other islands, all supplied by sea routes. These routes fanned mostly from Piraeus which in turn is supplied by rail lines through the Balkans.

'Allied bombers based in Italy take a heavy toll of these supplies as they pass via the Balkan railways," the R.A.F. says, adding that the toll has been so heavy after the supplies leave Piraeus that the enemy has "been forced to cut down the size of convoys." The Germans reportedly now are using mainly trawlers, barges and schooners.

"Night and day, long-range aircraft of the R.A.F. based in the Middle East seek out this shipping and destroy it. Every day, much-needed supplies are sent to the bottom. Meanwhile German garrisons in the Aegean Islands must tighten their belts. Small craft which succeed in getting through cannot carry all the supplies so urgently needed."

Germany's outer ring stands intact, but for how long?" the summary concluded.

ABOUT THE BIBLE

According to Revelation 22:13, an angel said to St. John the Divine in a vision: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last."

Alpha, A, is the first letter in the Greek alphabet and Omega, O, is the last. From Alpha to Omega is equivalent to from A to Z. It means from first to last, all, the whole, everything.

The proverbial phrase, "a law unto themselves," is in the Bible, but there it is used in a favorable rather than an unfavorable sense. In Romans 2:14 St. Paul says: "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves."

A person who supports or encourages another in action is said to hold up the latter's hands. This is an allusion to the supporting of the hands of Moses by Aaron and Hur during the battle between Joshua and Amalek. Exodus 17:8-13 says:

"Then came Amalek and fought with Israel in Rephidim. And Moses said unto Joshua, Choose out men, and go out, fight with Amalek: tomorrow I will stand on top of the hill with the rod of God in mine hand. So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek: and Moses, Aaron, and Hur went up to the top of the hill. And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed. But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun. And Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword."

"Cabins" occurs in the King James Version of the Bible only once. In Jeremiah 37:16 we are told that the prophet entered "into the dungeon, and into the cabins." Here the correct meaning is expressed by "cells" and it is so translated in the Revised Version.

The Nile river is nowhere mentioned in the King James Version by name. "Nile" is the Anglicised form of the classical name of the great river of Egypt. The Egyptians never knew it by that name and there is no corresponding word for it in Hebrew. In the story of Moses in Genesis and elsewhere in the King James Version the Nile is referred to simply as "the river."

The "evil eye" occurs in the Bible several times, but there it does not refer to magic or sorcery, but is synonymous with envy, jealousy and malice.

Rats are nowhere mentioned in the Bible.

The War Today— Attack on Powerful Truk Base One of Most Significant of War

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Admiral Nimitz, after baiting the Mikado's navy for long weeks in an effort to draw it into battle, finally has reached into the great naval base of Truk—one of the world's most powerful strongholds.

The most significant aspect of this daring action is that the United States finally has the striking power to permit of such an operation. Just over two years ago losses at Pearl Harbor crippled America in the Pacific.

As this is written we lack details of what apparently started out as a major raid on Truk at dawn Wednesday. The attack was opened by hundreds of aircraft based on carriers. A big naval fleet supported the expedition.

Example of Huge Air Attack.

Such a raid, if highly successful in shattering enemy defences, might be followed by naval action. However, the original design of the expedition seems to have been to give Truk a merciless bombing. We have here, incidentally, a striking illustration of what can be done in the way of launching a huge aerial attack against an enemy from airplane carriers.

Truk normally is a powerhouse of warships, planes and land defences. It's Japan's Pearl Harbor, for it was designed as the major base for both defensive and offensive operations in case of war with America.

Loss of Truk would be a catastrophe to the Mikado. It would leave a vast gap in his eastern defences.

No Sign Japanese Fleet is Out.

Despite the importance of the base, there's no indication thus far that the Japanese fleet has come out to answer Nimitz's challenge and defend his prize. Certainly the enemy must have been on the alert for an attack, since only two weeks ago a couple of bombers flew over Truk and obtained invaluable photographs of the stronghold.

The Nipponese were quite aware of this aerial photography, for they not only cut loose with anti-aircraft guns but sent planes up. However, the pair got away and the Japs thus were served with warning that they could expect trouble.

This attack on Truk, coming so quickly after the success in the Marshall Islands, is a display of strength which indicates that there finally is the power to maintain the offensive which is leading to the Japanese mainland.

Comprises 245 Islands.

Truk is supposed to be as close to invulnerable as any base in the world. It isn't just one island, but comprises some 245 islands and its lagoon is 440 miles in diameter. It has unlimited facilities for a naval fleet, and on land can support a big army and air force.

There is a reef across the mouth of Truk's huge harbor, and this affords natural protection against invasion by water. Certainly any attack would have to be spearheaded by heavy aerial bombardment. Undoubtedly the base is defended with much heavy artillery.

Because of this, the assumption is that the naval fleet staging the present raid stood well off from Truk so to be out of range of the land guns. A sally of the Japanese fleet for battle, however, would be a welcome event.

Washington Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Feb. 18 (CP)—One-million men constantly under arms and a navy greater than the 1941 fleet in a world from which war has been banished is the paradoxical forecast of some observers here for post-war United States.

Maintenance of such a force was held essential by Marquis Childs, veteran foreign correspondent, in his first column, "Washington Calling", when he took over the syndicate spot vacated by the death of Raymond Clapper in a Marshall Islands' plane crash.

But he is not the first. Writers and Congressmen have said the same thing, and it has been said in varying degrees, in and of other countries of the United Nations.

Yet the general assumption—and certainly the hope and inspiration of the United Nations war effort—is that victory over the Axis powers will forever remove the threat of aggression.

There has been a chorus of demands from quarters of varying influence for the post-war retention by the United States of bases established in other lands for the purpose of stopping the Axis.

The only purpose of an armament race among the victorious powers in the post-war period would be for defence from each other, since they would have destroyed for all time the war-making potentialities of the traditional aggressors.

Thus it would appear the protagonists of perpetual maintenance of powerful armed forces, by any other of the Allied powers, are making the tragic assumption that the United Nations ideal of a world free of the fear of aggression cannot be attained.

It would seem to a layman, only a compact and highly mobile international force would be necessary to provide against the rise to power of any ambition-mad country.

Children First:

The Washington Times-Herald and the New York Daily News, ever ready to tell the United States and any other government what it should do, have editorially demanded conscription of 17-year-olds rather than of married men with children. They claim that there are some 1,800,000 boys between 17 and the draft age, 18, who should be called before tired daddies in their 30's.

This, perhaps, is more acceptable than another suggestion, frequently made by the same papers, that the Allies take the initiative in the use of poison gas as a war weapon.

Victory Fleet:

Close to 3,000 merchantmen have been added to the United States victory fleet since the country entered the war and anti-administration critics are already fearful of what will be done with the merchant marine when the war is over. They are afraid some of these vessels will go to those Allies, including Britains whose freighters brunt of the early submarine campaign.

McNaughton Case:

No Canadian war figure has been more publicized in the United States than Lt.-Gen. Andrew McNaughton, former commander of the Canadian Army overseas. His return to Canada and the controversy there over reasons for his retirement have had prominent play in American newspapers.

Radio Heroes:

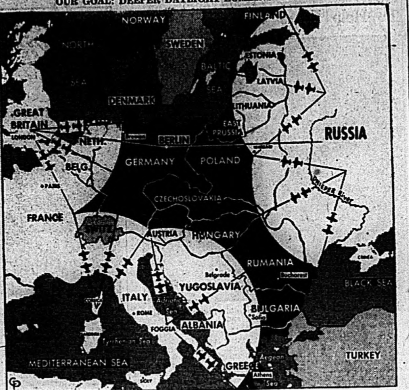
So many American soldiers have been heard on United States radio programs that the inevitable witticism has been invented, something like this: A healthy-looking youth is downcast because he is classified 4-F. A friend asks what his disability is. "I failed in the radio audition", is the reply.

OUR GOAL: DEEPER DAYLIGHT BOMBING OF THE AXIS



With engineers adding greater flying range to pursuit planes, it becomes evident that there will be more effective bombing of enemy soil. For while escort fighters parry the blows of Nazi rocket planes the big bombers can move to their targets unhampered. American bombers in England held the upper hand in daylight precision bombing until new Nazi tactics resulted in heavy losses, pushing back the daylight bombing front to a point only 400 miles from England, as shown by the arc. This was the range of escort planes. This also held true of Allied planes in Italy, and of Russian bombers based near the Polish border. The British, whose specialty is night bombing, have been able to make deeper penetrations into the blackened areas because of the protection of moonless nights. With the acknowledged improvement of "peashooters" it becomes clear that the black area will shrink.

Final Links Welded In Canol Project

Whitehorse, Y. T., Feb. 18—(CP)—Final links in the American-financed canol project pipeline from Norman Wells, N. W. T., to Whitehorse, were welded today near Macmillan Pass, astride the Arctic continental divide deep in the Mackenzie mountain range.

The welding thus completed one of the most vital parts of the $130,000,000 project, a program of the U. S. government for development and distribution of oil and gasoline in Northwestern Canada and Alaska.

"The pipeline project is completed as of today and we hope soon to make the first test runs at Whitehorse," said Brig. Gen. L. D. Worsham of Evansville, Ind., commanding general of the Northwest Service Command. Gen. Worsham was in charge of the project under over-all command of Brig. Gen. James A. O'Connor, former commanding general of the Northwest Service Command.

The project, started June 29, 1942, two days after the U. S. government proposed development to Canadian authorities of the area when a Japanese attack on Alaska appeared imminent, consists of:

Farthest North Oilfield.

Drilling of wells at Norman Wells, a construction road from Norman Wells to Whitehorse, pipeline which parallels the construction road, pump stations and storage tanks, a refinery which was dismantled in Texas and transported and enlarged at Whitehorse and a network of pipelines to other points in Canada and Alaska.

Canol, which stands for Canadian oil lines, is the farthest north oilfield in the world and is about 1,000 miles north of Edmonton.

Terms of the agreement between the U. S. and Canadian governments, provided the U. S. government would construct the project and own and operate it for duration of the war. Thereafter the properties are to be valued and the Canadian government is to have first option of purchasing the pipeline and refinery at the commercial valuation.

Wartime 'Squeeze' Spurs Illicit Liquor Traffic

(By The Canadian Press)

A familiar "squeeze" of modern war—accelerating consumer demand and contracting sources of supply—has spurred illicit liquor traffic in Canada and padded the pocketbook of the corner bootlegger.

Thus, it was shown today in a nation-wide survey by The Canadian Press, the average Canadian who slakes his thirst through illicit channels pays roughly double bootleg levels and anywhere from two to six times vendors' prices.

Of the Dominion's major cities, Montreal seems least affected by bootleg inflation. Prices are approximately double liquor store scales, 26 ounces of rye selling for about $7 and an equal amount of Scotch at about $9 or $10. A 40-ounce bottle of Scotch may sell for $15.

Further east prices are fairly uniform. A quart of rye can be obtained from $12 to $15 in Halifax and Saint John, while $6 is a minimum for a six-quart cartoon of beer in both cities.

In five major western Canada cities, selling price of 26 ounces of rye may vary from a low of $10 in Winnipeg to a high of $25 in Edmonton. Rye or Scotch ranges from $10 to $15 for 26 ounces in Winnipeg, with a mickey selling at $5 to $8. A "short snort"—one ounce—may be obtained for 50 cents. No beer is sold in quarts, but $6 will buy a 12-pint carton.

In Regina, where $12 to $15 is the tariff for 26 ounces of rye and Scotch, beer sells for 50 cents a bottle. Saskatoon, at approximately the same levels, can buy an ounce of rye for 75 cents and an equal amount of Scotch for $1. Beer in Edmonton sells at $6 to $8.50 for a 12-pint carton, while in Vancouver, 26 ounces of rye or whisky may bring $12 to $16.

Toronto at $12 to $15 and Ottawa at $10 to $12 for 26 ounces of rye whisky are closely aligned. Windsor and London residents pay $10 for rye while London may go as high at $12 to $14 for Scotch. The lowest prices for rye prevail at Hamilton, where a 26-ounce bottle can be obtained for $8. In the same city Scotch may sell for $12 to $15 in the same amount. Beer prices are roughly the same in all five Ontario cities.

It is understood that all provinces except Ontario have indicated their acceptance of the code's provisions.

The code makes no provision for compulsorily imposing an agreement on either employers or employees. The final stage of negotiations is the appointment of a conciliation board which may make recommendations which will be published, but the board will have no power to enforce them.

Employers are forbidden to attempt to dominate or interfere with trade unions and employees' organizations or to contribute financial support to them. Employers may not refuse to employ or discriminate against employees because they are members of an organization.

No Coercion Allowed.

Unions and employees' associations ar prohibited from coercion or intimidation of workers to force them to join an organization. Activities in plants during working hours in an effort to enlist union membership are banned and no support or encouragement may be given to slow-downs or other interference with production.

Penalties are provided for employers who cause illegal lockouts, for employees who strike illegally, for unions or employees' organizations authorizing illegal strikes, and for persons or organizations contravening other sections of the code.

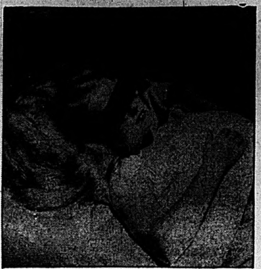
Apply Massage Cream To Help Erase Wrinkles



After massaging face, let cream stay on while you relax, resting eyes with cold witch hazel compresses and a black band to shut out light

By HELEN FOLLETT

DRAWING the hair away from the face, though locks be straight or locks be waved, gives a girl a clean, freshly-washed look, like flowers on a rainy April morning. The mode means that the forehead must be kept in form. Satin smooth, no lines, neatly powdered.

Women have learned that expression lines form easily, come quickly, almost over night. Frowns are numbered among these blemishes. We've got so we're almost afraid to smile, lest sun ray creases appear around the eyes. Don't worry. Keep faith with the massage cream, and you'll keep right on travelling along the path to good looks. It isn't necessary to remain in a state of bovine serenity to beat old man Time at the wrinkle racket.

Avoid Frowning

Lift your eyebrows, look in the mirror. Irrigation ditches will be mapped across your forehead. Let's not express surprise that way, let's not register emotions in facial tissues. There's many a woman who folds her forehead into pleats when she asks a question. And frowning is a common habit, destructive to the smoothness of skin that is necessary if one is to keep within finger touch of one's youth.

After the nightly face washing, rinsing and drying, have a conference with the massage cream. Spread it on lavishly, use enough friction to make most of it disappear. Do little circles across the forehead and over the frown lines, if you have them. Sweep around your eyes, starting at the inner corner of the upper lid, coming back under the eye to starting point.

Give the entire facial area a smart slapping and patting. Smooth up and down the neck. Don't forget to work on the ear lobes; they get chapped and rough, don't look pretty.

That body o' yours

Two Kinds of Sinus Infection

I saw a chap, always greatly interested in sports, unmarried and of military age awaiting his turn in a barber shop. I asked the barber why he was not in uniform as I felt that he had the body and determination to make a good soldier. The barber then told me that this chap had suffered since a boy with sinus trouble, had undergone several operations, and the air, army and naval physicians all rejected him. They felt that his sinuses would not withstand the cold, heat sand and dust of war.

However what is not generally known is that many of these old or chronic sinus infections are caused by allergy—being sensitive to various substances just as hay fever sufferers are senstive to ragweed pollen.

In the Journal of the Michigan State Medical Society Dr. George E. Shambaugh, Jr., Chicago, shows the difference between the ordinary chronic sinus infection and that caused by allergy. Thus in the pure or real infection, chronic sinusitis, the lining of the sinus (mucosa) appears inflamed, moderately thickened, but without much swelling.

In chronic sinusitis caused by allergy the lining of the sinus appears pale, much swollen, "tremendously" thickened and thrown into folds.

Another most significant yet logical sign pointed out by Dr. Shambaugh is that in true infection the signs and symptoms are found in the one sinus or sinuses, the other sinuses (usually on the opposite side of the nose) remaining completely normal. In allergic sinusitis, on the contrary, there is some swelling and other changes of all the sinuses and, in fact, in other parts of the nose, throat, and bronchial tubes.

These simple differences between true infection—redness of lining, some swelling, on one side only—and allergic sinusitis— paleness of lining, great amount of swelling and disturbances of sinuses on both sides together with other part of the nose and throat—should make it easier for patients and physicians to obtain better results from treatment.

Sinus infection caused by allergy can be proved by removal of some substances giving relief and causing the symptoms when given again. These substances are (a) pollens, dust, animal danders, or (b) foods or drugs.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Woman's Most Heroic Role in War

This is a woman's war fought in secret and silence. Not for them is the frenzy of combat, that for the time being stops even the hurt of torn flesh and broken bones.

The woman's war is an agonized period of watchful waiting, going about accustomed rounds—getting the children off to school, going to market and counting points—while over them hangs the dread of that brief communication from the War Department "Dead" or "Missing in action."

There isn't any glory to carry them along on soaring wings. It's just a grim, all-in-the-day's-work for the women the soldiers have left behind them. And now comes this final challenge to their courage. They must carry on even more bravely when their men come home, sometimes wraiths of the splendid creatures who went overseas, sometimes dreadful to look upon.

These men whose heroism has made them what they are, are so humble . . . They seem to hope you'll judge them by pre-war standards. And this is the hardest ordeal for women to face. How can they restore the morale of these silent, brooding men? In this grim period of rehabilitation, women are given their opportunity to play a more heroic part than ever before.

Everything will be done to bring these soldiers back to health and restore as many as possible to self-supporting civilian life. Those who cannot be retained in the service, who will receive honorable discharges will be given hospitalization and the best of medical care.

This is where the big part women will play begins. There may be amputation cases or neuro-psychiatric cases or paralyzed cases. For these, women will have to learn a certain amount of physio-therapy and occupational therapy.

They must take lessons from the army in this wonderful new program of reconditioning. This includes keeping the mind, as well as the body active so the patient may progress and develop and never relapse into an idle, brooding existence.

Occupational therapy, as administered in the home has made enormous strides since the First World War. Take, for instance, only one form of employment—woodworking. When a man works in wood, constructing a useful or interesting object, he is exercising muscles and strengthens them. He gains initiative, and opportunity for self-expression is developed. That helps enormously to restore morale.

GEARED for important afternoon events and after dark doings is a suit of deep-violet-blue moire, the jacket closing with cut steel buttons and made with weskit front.

THERE'S A NEW LOOK to the classic tailormade. Some of the smartest of the new white suits have the collarless, cardigan neckline, a detail that looks especially well on a chalk striped gray flannel suit.

Writing Letters Easy With Rules

"Still Writing That Letter?"

A letter needn't take such hours! If you put off writing to friends—perhaps losing them—because letters are such a hard task, follow a little plan in your writing.

FIRST—A LOT OF "YOU." Write: "What are you doing . . . Everyone asks about you."

And strike that warm flattering note right at the beginning, not starting with "I guess it's time to write you," but with "At last a chance to write you!"

SECOND—A LITTLE "ME." For, of course, friends want to hear about you.

THIRD—A DASH OF "THEY." Is there something to tell about mutual friends? There's sure to be—and there you are at the end of the sheet before you know it, writing "When will we see you again? Fondly yours—"

Knowing the simple rules you can write all sorts of letters with ease. Our 32-page booklet has 24 model letters—friendly, business and social—including invitations, thank-you notes, job applications. Gives pointers on vocabulary, letter etiquete.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of GOOD LETTER - WRITING MADE EASY to The Ontario Intelligencer Home Service, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Useful Jersey Dress

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

TWO COLORS are good, but, say some designers, three colors are better, especially for little frocks geared to see one through a busy day. This useful little dress is of jersey and uses navy blue for the bodice and belt, British red for the plastron, collar and skirt and white bands for trimming. The bands are used to outline the plastron and terminate in pockets. Dress buttons to below the waist where gathers soften the front of the skirt.

Bombing, Gunnery School Entertains Hospitality Clubs

Featuring the band of its very own station orchestra, the Mountain View Jive Bombers, the Bombing & Gunnery School of Mountain View entertained at a dance on Thursday night the girls of the Belleville Hospitality Club, St. Michael's Hospitality Club and Picton Club.

For variation, some old-time reels were conducted with Harvey Faithful at the piano and the "Fiddling Firemen," led by Flt. Sgt. Osborne and the dance hall for a short time was really transformed into "a little bit of the farm." Another novel contest was staged and received a great deal of enthusiasm from everyone. It was "lead the band" prize number and the lucky winner was Miss Shirley Maxwell.

Appreciation is extended to the Knights of Columbus for their decorating of the hall and the band stand with St. Valentine finery in colors of red and white. It formed an attractive background for the merrymakers and added greatly to the festive atmosphere. In the intermission, delicious refreshments were served in the airmen's mess by the Air Force personnel.

At the conclusion of the dance, Mr. Urban Hughes, Knights of Columbus Supervisor, expressed thanks to the hospitality girls for coming out, to the hostesses for their fine supervision of the affair, to the lunch and entertainment committees and particularly the master-of-ceremonies for their contributions to making the evening the success that it was.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ont.

Q. Is there a ceiling price on tinned pork and beans?

A. Yes. Each dealer has his own ceiling represented by the maximum price that he charged for the same article during the basic period in 1941.

Q. The other day in a chain grocery I noticed a shop assistant distributing a scarce commodity amongst fellow-employees before the limited supply was placed on the shelves for the cutomers. Is that permissible?

A. There is no regulation forbidding this practice, but it was most indiscreet and tactless of the manager to sanction it, if he did.

Q. Our milkman in this village has refused to provide us with milk and I know of other instances in which he has done likewise. What can we do about it?

A. The Ontario Milk Control Board, which administers milk regulations, advises that there is no authority under the Milk Control Act to force a distributor to give service to any particular customer but if there are complaints about the service he does give, it will consider the issuance of another distributor's licence for the same market.

Q. My landlord wants me to vacate these premises, occupied under a monthly lease, in order to occupy them himself. Can he do that under the rentals regulations? If so, how much notice am I entitled to receive?

A. Six months' notice is required with a sworn form being completed in triplicate and filed with the Rentals Appraiser. One copy of this form must be handed to the tenant. The notice to vacate cannot fall due between September 30 and the following April 30.

Q. Is there any danger of potatoes becoming as scarce this spring as they were a year ago?

A. The Prices Board has established control over the distribution of potatoes in order to avert such a situation. Carload lots of potatoes are being diverted to areas in which there is a deficiency and it is hoped that by this means severe shortages may not occur.

Q. Is it necessary for me to renew my Prices Board licence?

A. Not unless there is some alteration in the type of business in which you are engaged or the service that you are rendering. These licences do not require renewal under ordinary circumstances.

Q. My husband is a diabetic. Is there any way in which he can obtain extra rations of butter and meat?

A. Yes, provided he surrenders sugar coupons not required, he can apply to a branch of the Ration Administration for such rations. The application must be accompanied by a statement signed by a duly licenced medical practioner identifying his disease and indicating the extra rations in specified amounts that are required by him.

SAVE TIME IN TABLE SETTING

If you have to save time on those domestic chores — and what woman doesn't these days — here are a few hints that will help you serve meals with a minimum of effort and a maximum of appeal. Try using gay, colorful mats or doilies in place of your usual tablecloth. If something spills, only one small piece, not a big tablecloth, can be easily washed in extra soapy suds. Perhaps you can buy smart cellophane mats which are simply washed clean with a damp cloth and used indefinitely. Omit the use of serving dishes now and then by serving dinner "buffet" style from the kitchen. It's fun to "come and get it" straight from the stove. To save your dishes and also table space, a "three-way" platter is a grand idea. This is simply a longish platter divided into three sections which will hold two kinds of vegetables and meat. As for that salad, don't bother with individual salads or salad plates, prepare a generous bowl of cole slaw, relishes, etc., and pass these with the main course at dinner. When clearing the table, save mileage by using a large, washable tray. Stack dishes on this and remove them all in two or three trips to the kitchen.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur William Tedder, Britain's Top-Hole Air Strategist, Was Chosen Deputy Chief Because of Brilliant Work in Mediterranean

(By Lee McCardell, writing from London, in Baltimore Sun)

Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur William Tedder, deputy supreme commander under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower of the British and United States expeditionary forces now organising to invade Europe, is generally regarded as Britain's top-hole air strategist—probably the greatest leader produced by the royal air force during the first quarter century of that service's history.

As Allied air force commander in the Mediterranean, unhurried, unflurried, highly competent, Tedder laid the famous "air carpet" for the big Allied push in Tunisia. He also directed the air support for the combined operations in Sicily and Italy.

His appointment as Eisenhower's first lieutenant indicates that fullest use will be made of Allied air power to blast a path for the ground forces storming Hitler's coast defences.

Short and slim, the ascetic faced marshal, 53 years old, is a kindly, friendly man, with remarkable blue eyes. He is straight and lank, with fairish hair, turning gray. His manner is mild, almost hesitant. He speaks quietly between puffs at his pipe, but his droll, dry wit has given him a reputation for knowing all the answers.

Tedder is one of the RAF's many-sided characters, quoting Shakespeare and making black and white sketches as readily as planning operations. Yet his neat mind has a knack for brushing aside non-essentials. Typical is the remark attributed to him when confronted with an administrative tangle:

"To hell with history — what's the problem."

• •

Tedder has none of the eccentricities which characterize General Bernard L. Montgomery, with whom he worked so well during the African campaign.

He liked to mix with the men at the front. He rarely wore the marshal's gold braided hat. He preferred the simple fore and aft cap. He discarded his blouse for an open neck shirt, without wings, ribbons or shoulder straps.

A son of the late Sir Arthur John Tedder, he was born at Glenguin, Sterlingshire, and educated at Magdalene College, Cambridge, where he won the university prize for an essay on the British navy in the time of King Charles II.

He entered the army in 1913, seeing active service in France during the last war, first as a first lieutenant in a Dorset regiment, then as a royal flying corps pilot.

A variety of RAF postings later took him to Egypt, Turkey and Singapore, where, in 1936, he was director general of research and development at the air ministry. In the summer of 1940 he was assigned to duty with Lord Beaverbrook, then minister of aircraft production.

It appeared that Tedder was stuck in an office job for the duration, when, a bomber carrying Vice-Air Marshal Boyd to Cairo, made a forced landing in Sicily, and Boyd was taken prisoner.

Looking around for someone to take Boyd's place as deputy to Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Longmore, the air ministry picked Tedder, who later succeeded as air officer commander-in-chief for the Middle East.

• •

When Field Marshal Erwin Rommel was threatening the Nile delta, Tedder made the most of his own small air force to hold the offensive against the luftwaffe. But at El Alamein, where he had more ships, he began perfecting the most deadly and sustained bombing seen in the war up to that time. The popular clamor was for dive bombers, but Tedder persevered with fighter-bombers.

His "Boston Tea Parties" of pattern bombing carried out by high flying formations of Bostons, Marylands and Marauders became the terror of the German army.

Tedder himself quietly described the "tea party" technique as an "impersonal sort of bombing that's a good thing if you want to be thoroughly nasty about war."

Throughout this campaign, Tedder spent more time in tent and caravan in the desert than at his comfortable Cairo headquarters. He worked, as he always works, at least 12 hours a day, often lunching at his desk, with a sandwich.

He was at the front in every crisis. When visiting squadrons in the field, he took off his coat, rolled up his sleeves and sat on the ground, and with his men around him would say:

"Now ask me questions."

And they did.

• •

One day, while driving along a desert coast road, without coat or insignia, Tedder stopped at a maintenance unit. He was wearing the regulation black tie not often seen in the desert, and some of the men, not recognizing him, laughed about that tie.

"Oh, I'm a headquarters bloke," said the air marshal. "You know how stuffy the ACC-in-C (air officer commander-in-chief) is at regulations. He returned to Britain and was sitting in the House of Commons gallery last February when he heard Prime Minister Churchill announce his appointment in response to an earnest request from Eisenhower that he become commander of all the Allied air forces in the Mediterranean.

Tedder went back to Africa, where he and Eisenhower soon came to understand and know each other as "Ike" and "Arthur."

In Tunisia, Tedder made military history with his "air carpet." Wave after wave of heavy bombers, formation on formation, each with a tremendous fighter escort, swept over the hills to lay that "carpet" by bombing an area four miles long and a quarter of a mile wide, and to pave the way for the capture of Tunis and Bizerte.

• •

Tedder has suffered two tragic personal losses in the war. His older son died in a bomber raid over Germany early in the war. His first wife met her death in an air accident near Cairo while returning from a visit on war work to a hospital at Bengasi. Last October he married Mrs. Marie Black, daughter of Col. Sir Bruce Seton.

His other son, 14 years old, hopes to become a pilot. He has a daughter who is a WAAF (women's auxiliary air force) officer in Britain.

Big, plump Eisenhower and slight, pale Tedder are friends as well as fighting colleagues. The appointment of Tedder to the post of deputy commander was the first appointment ever made of an air officer to such an important position in a joint command.

3" INFANTRY MORTARS

One of the deadliest weapons of the infantrymen of any army is the mortar, heavy or light. Actually, the weapon is a light, portable artillery piece — demountable and usable from any terrain. It consists of a metal tube about three feet in length, with a heavy base and supported at an angle by a bipod. The missile looks like a small aerial bomb, pointed at one end and with tall fins at the other. The "bomb" is dropped tail-first down the leaning barrel, and "shoots itself" out of the muzzle in a high trajectory. Astounding accuracy can be attained with this seeming loutish weapon. The heavy, 3-inch mortar is used generally for firing high explosive bombs. The lighter, two-inch mortar fires either high explosive or smoke bombs, the latter for screening the actions of Canadian infantrymen as they press the attack.

Timber Insects To Be Combatted

Halifax, Feb. 17—(CP)—Special efforts to combat destructive timber insects — brought here from Europe 50 years ago — that are menacing maritime forests are being made by the federal government, R. E. Balch, officer in charge of the Dominion Entomological station at Fredericton, told Nova Scotia Forest Rangers in session here yesterday.

Mr. Balch said that Canadian entomoligists during the past six or seven years, in order to fight the pests, had imported natural enemies of the insects, from Europe.

Rotarians Hear Suggestions Made For Improvements

Trenton, (Special.)— The regular weekly meeting of the Trenton Rotary Club was held at the Gilbert Hotel on Monday evening and was in charge of the Publicity and Information Department under Chairman O. M. Newton.

Mr. Newton gave a detailed report of the work of his department and discussed future planning of town of Trenton. He suggested that much post-war planning was being carried out in every locality and it was up to Trenton to get busy and take immediate steps in the way of making improvements for the town. Some of his suggestions included improvements to town buildings such as the library, and town offices, armouries, etc., the making of proper playgrounds and parks, particularly along the Bay shore, and improvements in roads especially those leading to industries in the town. This latter improvement was given as most important if Trenton is to be considered when large concerns are faced with locating new plants or expanding those already in operation.

Two of the most important items on Mr. Newton's new program were the hospital, now being organized, and an armouries which he suggested should be an immediate necessity when one considers the importance of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment.

Mr. Newton advocated more and better parking space in the centre of the town, and said it would be good business for the merchants of the town to start advertising Trenton now, either collectively or by individual advertising in which stress should be made of the possibilities of shopping in Trenton, rather than advertising definite merchandise for that particular merchant.

Older Men, Women, Mothers and Youths In Nazi Labor Call

New York, Feb. 17—(AP)—Fritz Sauckel, Nazi delegate-general for the direction of labor, has called on all able-bodied German men and women legally exempt from national labor conscription to volunteer for war work "in this year of greatest decision," a Berlin broadcast, recorded by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service, said.

Sauckel's appeal for older men and women and mothers and youths to augment German labor reserves was transmitted by D.N.B. for publication in today's German morning newspapers.

New Halifax Bomber Used in Berlin Raids

London, Feb. 17 (CP)—An improved type of Halifax bomber, with a higher ceiling, increased speed and greater rate of climb now is participating in R.A.F. night raids on Berlin, it was disclosed today.

The principal change, an announcement said, involves the substitution of four Bristol-Hercules engines developing more than 1,630 horsepower each for olls Royce-Merlin engines. The latter developed 1,175 horsepower.

Performance figures still are secret. The older Halifax had a top speed of 300 iles per hour, a maximum range of 3,000 miles and bomb capacity of 5 1-2 tons.

Khaki Closeups

Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, Feb. 17 (CP)—Khaki closeups. "The biggest surprise of my life," was Cpl. H. B. (Smokey) Atkinson's summary of three hours he spent in No-Mans Land trying in vain to draw fire from German machine gunners.

Smokey comes from Hythe, Alta., and with Ptes. Wally Hawk, Parkland, Alta., and Louis Canada, Pine Falls, Man., went out on a pre-dawn patrol to draw fire away from another group of soldiers investigating German positions.

"We got in there easily," said Smokey, "and when it looked as though nothing was going to happen, we coughed to attract Jerry's attention. That was no go so I fired a fast burst of Tommy."

The Germans remained silent and the Canadians moved deeper into their lines, still without response. They tossed a hand grenade to make it appear they had encountered enemy, and there was dead silence.

One of the jobs of the Royal Canadian engineers' field park is to find and make an inventory of all engineering stores available in areas occupied by Canadian troops. The sappers have authority to requisition anything they think the army may need.

Lumber is one of the great shortages and discovery of a saw mill at Ortona was a welcome windfall. Most of the planking for the many bridges Canadian had to build in the Moro valley came from this mill.

Lieut. Jim Near, St. Catharines, Ont., is in charge of the platoon which searches for and distributes stores. He moved into Ortona a few days after the town fell and carried a mine detector with him on all his investigations.

Six-Ardees Hold Trenton Station Team to 4-4 Draw While Bombers Beat Mohawks

Service Hockey Loop Getting Interesting as Finals Approach

SMART CONTESTS

Things are beginning to get interesting in the Quinte R. C. A. F. service hockey league.

Take for instance Thursday night at the Hume Arena when the Trenton "Flyers" and No. 6 Repair Depot played a 4-4 tie, their second draw match in as many meetings and each squad drew a point in the loop standing. Then in the nightcap, of a dual bill, Dan Cowley's Mountain View "Bombers" rubbed it into the Deseronto "Mohawks", 8 to 1 to chalk up third consecutive win of the season.

Today you find Trenton leading the parade eight points, while No. 6 Repair Depot and Mountain View are tied for second place with six points each, while the lowly Mohawks have yet to register a win. Now the big show should attract the fans, when the Bombers and the Flyers tangle Monday night.

Battalion Parades to Arena

The Argyll Light Infantry Battalion paraded to the games and during the intermissions the Battalion pipe band entertained the patrons with selections. In the meantime Coach Padre Maiki introduced a highclass trio of pucksters on a new line, when he teamed Paul Raymond, formerly of the Montreal Canadiens, with Wilson and McAtee, two former Oshawa junior "A" players, in the curtain-raiser against "Sixardee". However, Coach Bud Corbett's Repair Depot lads were little concerned about named players and proved the aggressors forcing the Flyers to come from behind to gain even a tie.

The Raymond - McAtee - Wilson combination accounted for all four goals scored by Trenotn as the Flyers lead 3-1 at the end of the initial frame and 3-2 at the end of the middle stanza. Dixon and Pfoff each scored in the last stanza as Trenton had to come from behind with McAtee scoring the picture goal of the night to knot the count. There was no quarter asked or received in a wide open contest.

The line-ups:-

Trenton, goal, Prudhomme, defence, Kelly and Griffiths, centre, Wilson, wings, Raymond and McAtee, subs, Dart, Tessier, Ellis Curry and Voss.

No. 6 Repair Depot, goal, Jackson, defence, Derry and Feldman, centre, Hunt, wings, Dixon and Pfoff, subs, Stewart, Campbell, Landriault, Goddhue, McInpes and O'Connor.

Referees, St. Louis and Holway.

In the nightcap affair, that by now saw upwards to 700 fans on hand and mostly men in uniform, Dan Cowley's Bombers waited until the third to score six goals and win 8-1 over "Butch" Lalonde's courageous "Mohawks".

The game only started when Pat McReavy, former Boston Bruin star, rifled home the first goal on a neat combination play with Bauer and Fuger for the only tally of the frame. Fuger made it 2-0 for the Bombers on Bauer's second period set-up and to open the last chukker a Polish lad in the Air Force, by the name of Hrdicka, banged in Al Clements' pass for the Mohawks only goal. The Bombers then went to work and scored six goals in quick succession to run their count to eight as the summary indicates. Another of these thrill-packed Air Force doubleheaders will be staged at the Hume Arena Monday night.

The line-ups:

Mohawks, goal, Gariepy, defence, Lalonde and Clements, centre, McLelland, wings, Brenchly and Brown, subs, Hrdicka, Baker, Flookes, Zateny, Steele and Finn.

MAURICE RICHARD SCORES 3 GOALS TO BEAT DETROIT

All Tallies Come in Third Period and Scored in 2 Minutes, 13 Seconds

FINAL IS 3-2

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Three years of frustration in amateur and professional hockey receded from memory today as Maurice Richard contemplated the latest in a series of scoring exploits notable less for intrinsic brilliance than for the circumstances surrounding their accomplishment.

The slim, dark-browed speed hound who has spent more time in a hospital cot than on the ice fashioned the final touches in an unusual scoring sequence last night, firing three third-period goals as Montreal Canadiens surged from the shadows of defeat to conquer Detroit Red Wings 3-2 in a test of strength between the clubs regarded most likely to succeed in post-season play-offs.

From a production standpoint, Richard's feat of six goals in Montreal's last four starts probably has been surpassed many times in league competition; but it is doubtful if one player has so thoroughly dominated his team's goal production. In those four games, the athlete coach Dick Irvin has picked as the player of the year accounted for 75 per cent of the league leader's goal output. Only one other Montreal player—defenceman Leo Lamoureux—has scored over the four-game stretch.

All but two of the eight goals were scored in the third period. His hat trick last night came within two minutes and 13 seconds, 21 second off the quick-trigger pace set with Carl Liscombe tallied three in one minute, 52 seconds in Detroit March 13, 1938. Whistling 50-foot drives produced two of Richard's scores and the other was fired from close range as Canadiens exploited a penalty to Bill Quakenbush for their first tally.

Richard, a headlong skater boosted around Montreal as a second Morenz, has been dogged by misfortune throughout his brief career. In 1940-41, playing with Montreal Canadiens' Seniors, he fractured a leg. Joining the professional Canadiens the following year, he suffered another leg fracture at the start of the season. Last year he completed one-third of the schedule—and broke his leg again.

For 42 minutes last night, 13,175 Detroit fans had little suspicion of the thunder Richard was to loose. Liscombe opened the scoring for Detroit early in the second period and Adam Brown made it 2-0 at 13;24, buoying Detroit hopes of winning their first of eight games against Montreal. Then Richard went to town, handing the Wings their first defeat on home ice in eight games and sending Montreal eight games ahead of the 1942-43 Stanley Cup champions.

GENERALS REGAIN 4-POINT LEAD

(By The Canadian Press)

Oshawa Generals regained a four-point advantage in leadership of group 1 of the Junior "A" O.H.A. series at the expense of Port Colborne last night when they whipped Recreationists 7-5 at Port Colborne, the losers retaining possession of third spot in group 2 standing by a slim one-point margin over Brantford Lions in the battle for playoff position.

Generals impressed with a 4-1 lead in the first period stretched it to 5-2 in the second and were on top 7-2 at one stage in the third frame whereupon Recreationists took hold of the situation to ram in three goals in quick succession.

Ken Smith and Bill Ezinicki twice rifled the puck into the cage for Oshawa, Frank Curry, Johnny Chenier and Barker accounting for the balance. Gravelle was the powerhouse for Port Colborne, leading the scoring performances of the evening with three counters. Imonti late of Toronto Young Rangers, accounted for another while Hills bagged the final tally of the engagement.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Feb. 18—(CP)—Al Ritchie, the sage of Regina, acknowledges demand for hockey palyers will reach a new and hectic high in the first two years after the war but Alvin Horace confidently predicts Canada, and specifically the Prairies, will be able to supply the demand.

Ritchie told Dave Dryburgh of the Regina LeaderPost there is plenty of material in juvenile and midget leagues around Southern Saskatchewan. "Definitely the most promising group of kids for three years anyway. War has hit senior and junior groups but has placed an emphasis on the younger boys. They are getting a big break.

Al's Regina Pats were the greatest power in Western Junior Hockey 15 years ago. Pats won the Memorial Cup in 1925 and '30. Yet he claims Canada still produces stars as great as came from his best teams. "Absolutely—maybe better ones," he says.

That means something from Ritchie. His 1925 Pats developed such stars as Johnny Gottselig, Ken Doraty and Frank Ingram. The 1930 crew included Buzz Boll, Eddie Wiseman, Gordon Pettinger. Ritchie developed many other stars and now is a New York Rangers scout.

Al agreed hockey will mushroom right after the war. Scores of inactive senior clubs in Canada will resume operations and scour the country for material. The N. H. L. will expand. Minor professional leagues like the American Association and Pacific Coast circuit will organize again and dozens of other professional and semi-professional clubs will appear in United States. Still, says Al, Canada will meet the demand.

"Remember this: There will be many first-rate players come back from the war to star all over again. They have been living a good, clean life and will be as hard as nails. Dumart and Bauer and Schmidt and all those fellows will be as good as ever if they are spared. I can not agree that war has ended their careers. I would say it hard merely interrupted them.

"Why, Georgie Hay came to Regina after the last war and hadn't laced on a pair of skates for three solid years. He became one of the most brilliant left-wingers in the game."

It's good to hear Al is still pitching in th oratorical league. He was never at a loss for a few thousand words and Canada has never had a greater authority on sports. We like to remember him as of old, preched on his favorite lunch counter stoll, his boys around him, diagraming hockey or football plays on paper napkins. A great guy—a credit to Canadian sport!

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press.)

Joe Carveth, Detroit, got one point last night when Canadiens defeated Red Wings 3-2 to put himself in a fifth-place tie with Boston's Bill Cowley on the Naional Hockey League's high scoring list. Carl Liscombe, Detroit, formerly sharing seventh place with Chicago's Clint Smith and Canadiens' Elmer Lash, gained undisputed ownership of that position when he scored one to make a total of 51 points. Other scoring leaders were idle.

PLAY IN SPIEL MOVING TOWARD A SHOW-DOWN

Two More Rinks Removed From Undefeated Ranks Yesterday

SCORES ARE CLOSE

Toronto, Feb. 18. (CP)—Play in the Ontario Bonspiel moved toward a show-down yesterday with elimination of two rinks from the undefeated ranks in the first evening draw but possibility remained that one of four rinks might take both of the richest prizes—The Royal York and Birks-Ellis-Ryrie trophies.

It required only three matches in the Royal York competition last night to sink C. R. Redfern's Torontos and Bert Kennedy's Toronto Royals from their unbeaten status. Both lost to worthy opponents as Don Best's Kirkland Lake Rink and E. H. Pooler's Toronto Granites turned the trick with identical 9-7 victories. Those yet with a chance of posting a double cup triumph are George Doggett, Kirkland Lake, R. H. Howard, Toronto Granites, Dr. A. E. Walkey, Hamilton Victories and T. E. Hawkins' Toronto Royals.

Walkey's Victorias won a fifth-round berth in the Royal York event with a 16-8 decision over Ross Tarlton's Hamilton Thistles, and Hawkins also won easily, 12-4, over J. W. Currie's Ayr rink. Doggett and Howard found the going tougher with three and two-point margins over W. D. Taylor's strong Torontos and Jim Shaw's powerful Sault quartet.

Rousing Matches.

Consolation events provided rousing matches last night as Don Best's Kirkland Lake and Charles Roffey's Sudbury rinks went down 13-12 and 9-6 to Dr. W. Young, Chapleau and Stan Sargeant, Orillia, in the third round of the American Life Trophy competition. G. A. Fitzpatrick, Orillia, prevailed 10-8 over the McIntyre rink skipped by Dr. Lou Hudson in the second round for the Association trophy, and Jim Shaw's Sault rink dropped another close one in extra beds to W. A. Watson, Sarnia.

The first draw today sees competition for all trophies except the Royal York, with highlight matches bringing together Dr. Walkey's Hamilton Victorias and T. Hawkin's Toronto Royals, and George Doggett's unbeaten Kirkland Lake quartet meeting C. R. Redfern's Torontos in the fourth round of the Birks competition for aggregate honors. Ed Young, Toronto Royals, co-winner of the trophy last year, meets H. W. Walker's Owen Sound rink in the same event.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

London, Feb. 17. (CP) — Soccer will be a great unifying instrument in the future of the world, the keenest football follower in the War Cabinet told a luncheon prior to a match between representatives of Holland and Belgium.

"It is a game which unites great crowds in democracy", added A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, who in his younger days guarded goal for a West Country side.

He said it was a great regret that during his tenure of office at the Admiralty, the Navy, so busy on the seven seas, had been unable to field a soccer side the same as the other services.

The First Lord, turning to youthful reminiscences, spoke of the days when he "walked three miles and paid twopence at the gate" to see Charles Wreford Brown play. Brown, present at the luncheon, was a great Corinthian player and was capped for England in the 1890's.

Every speaker at the luncheon voiced the opinion that the match to follow would be the last Holland and Belgium would have to play on British soil.

A new greyhound running at Preston, Lancashire, has been named Station Buffet— and thereby hangs a tale.

Preston track officials purchased the dog, pay all its upkeep costs and race entry fees. Every penny the dog earns will be turned over to the manager of the Preston railway station—so that men in the fighting services won't go without refreshment.

Hence the name—Station Buffet.

A boxer who bends six-inch nails and steel bars with his bare hands and who, with a rope coiled about his neck, allows himself to be the centre-piece in a full-scale tug-of-war, will compete in the coming National Fire Service boxing championships in London.

He is Company Officer C. N. Greenfield, of Wombwell, Yorkshire, 36-year-old heavyweight. He has boxed as an amateur for 19 years and never has been knocked out.

Even that tug-of-war act, with men pulling all-out, leaves him perfectly composed. Apart from boxing, he holds two British weight-lifting titles.

An avalanche of ticket applications followed the startling concession that an attendance of 140,000 will be allowed for an England-Scotland International soccer game at Glasgow's gigantic Hampden Park, April 22. The previous wartime police limit was 80,000 at Wembley, London.

The concession takes the gate allowances back to pre-war days and raised hopes that the Southern League Cup final in April will find the allowance raised to the capacity 100,000.

The accepted crowd record for Britain came at a 1937 Scotland-England game at Hampden Park when 149,547 squeezed through the turnstiles.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

A Rascal Anyway

A Negro who was well known to the judge had been haled into court on a charge of having struck a relative with a brick. After the usual preliminaries the court inquired:

"Why did you hit this man?"

"Jedge, he called me a black rascal."

"Well, you are one, aren't you?"

"Yessah, maybe I is one. But, jedge, s'pose some one should call you a black rascal, wouldn't you hit em?"

"But I'm not one, am I?"

"Naw, sah, nawsah, you ain't one; but s'pose some one'd call you de kind of rascal you is, what'd you do?"

(Getting complicated.)

The district R.C.A.F. service puck loop is narrowing down to the point where every goal will count from now in. After last night's dual bill, that saw the Trenton "Flyers" and No. 6 Repair Depot play their second draw contest in as many meetings; now you find Trenton out in front by two points ahead of Mountain View "Bombers" and the "Repair lads", who are tied for second place with six points each. Incidentally Dan Cowley's Bombers moved into a tie for second place by taking the Mohawks 8-1 for their third consecutive victory and they're the hottest club in the loop. The fun will be answered on Monday night, however, when the Bombers meet Padre Maiki's Flyers, whose front line of Les Canadiens' Paul aymond line of Les Canadiens' Paul Raymond all of the Flyers' goals against the courageous No. 6 squad, who literally forced the play over the Flyers last night as Bud Corbett's crowd ran into some tough luck, and without the advantage of named players.

Rome Taylor dropped in to say the play-off dates between the Combines and Trenton had been arranged. The series will open in Stirling on Monday night with the second game slated to be played in Trenton next Wednesday night. The venue of the possible third game will be decided in a new method, explains Rome. If a deciding game is needed the match will be played on the home ice of the team gaining the greater number of goals in the first two contests.

Frankly it sounds rather screwy, as neither the Stirling or Trenton rinks have housed much over 700 patrons for any game thus far this season. If the management of the two teams would lend an eye to the future they'd play a possible third game at the Hume Arena, where at least 2,000 fans would turn out to see the Combines and Trenton battle it out in a third and deciding contest. (No charge for the suggestion, fellas.)

Collegians win.)

With Vince Massey carrying the punch for six points the Belleville Collegiate junior hoopsters downed Stirling High School 18 to 11 on their home court last night. The Church Street students were always ahead of Principal Good's Stirling quintette, who incidentally put up a courageous struggle on the larger B.C.I. floor.

Convener Homer Townsend announced today that Albert College had withdrawn from the junior Interscholastic basketball series owing to transportation problems. Albert will remain in the senior series with B.C.I. thus leaving Picton Collegiate, Stirling High and Belleville Collegiate in the junior round-up.

Canada's favorite sports, hockey, baseball, softball, boxing, football, basketball, lacrosse and soccer, are not included in the proposed program of army athletics for which special medals will be issued according to an announcement from Major Ian Eisenhardt, chief army sports officer at Ottawa, says Bill Walshe in the Kingston Whig-Standard. Special medals will be issued for efficiency in various forms of athletics but the tests appear more of the picnic program type than games for he-men in training for war. The program is planned to develop good physical condition and interest but most of the proposed medal events are known only to a few specialists in peace times and many are novelties that are seldom reported on Canadian sports pages, which cover more forms of athletics than any other sports papers in the world. Track and field are the main contests on the army athletic program but strange events are also added like kayak paddling, simple sculling, cycling, throwing with both hands, rowing, ski marathons, endurance swimming and target shooting. No doubt Canadian soldiers will be encouraged in their camps to play their popular body contact games but the Ottawa report does not include team sports in the list of win medals. "Sports and games in future will be an integral part of the soldier's training." Major Eisenhardt's announcement proclaims and he states that "physical fitness esprti de corps, discipline and morale will be strengthened through an effective program." He does not explain how the individual sports included on the medal winning list will promote the three virtues.

Just three years ago tonight Boston Bruins ran an unbeaten streak to 22 games by holding the Toronto Maple Leafs to a 2-2 draw. This improved a National Hockey League record they established five days earlier when they broke New York Rangers' mark of 19 undefeated games set in the 1939-40 season. Bruins extended their record streak another game—to 23—before being stopped by the Rangers.

(Galaxy of stars)

The stage is all set for the Quinte Skating Club's gala ice carnival at the Hume Arena tonight. The show will feature petite Vi Vi Smith, one of Toronto's outstanding juvenile skaters . A large number of local skaters will help to round out a full two hours program.

Horse Sense Bridge

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Watch your bridge hand like you do your waistline, gals. Keep it within bounds as long as you can. That's how good bridge players get more attractive figures in their scores.

Bring your attention back to this hand:

♠A K 10 3 2
♥Q 7 6 2
♦K 7 6 2
♣None

When you have this hand, suppose your partner starts with an opening bid of one heart. Your first response is two spades. If partner then bids three diamonds, what should you do?

Bids follow the order in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. So, you first look for another takeout; another new suit, if you have one; otherwise a rebid of an unassisted rebiddable suit.

You have no new suit. But your unassisted spade suit is in the rebiddable class. How do you know? It has one honor card in addition to a biddable suit.

Thus do you reach the conclusion that your second bid is a rebid of your spade suit. Your bid is three spades. But why only three? And why not show your heart support in this spot?

Your first response of two spades was a one-jump; a signal for the bidding not to stop short of game. As long as your bid is not at a game contract, your signal assures you of another chance to bid.

It behooves bridge players to keep the bidding as low as they can. That way, they get a chance to exchange the most information. So, after one jump in any deal, both partners quit jumping.

That gives you a chance to show your spade suit is rebiddable. It still permits you to show your heart support later, if necessary. Partner may need all you can tell him.

Of course, you assume your partner is bridge-wise enough to co-operate. With a bridge-dumb partner, you try to co-operate with his dumbness.

AT THE BELLE

"The Iron Major"

The picture revolves around the life of the noted Dartmouth and Fordham football coach, the late Major Frank Cavanaugh. It develops his brilliant record with his gridiron teams as well as relating his exploits on the battlefields of France during the first World War.

Ruth Warrick has the leading feminine role as Mrs. Cavanaugh, and Robert Ryan and Leon Ames head the supporting cast. Ray Enright directed.

"Coastal Command", a timely adventure story and a new Community Sing film will be exhibited on the same program.

DeHavilland-Tufts Team

A gay comedy romance played against the absorbing background of Washington is "Government Girl," RKO Radio's latest feature offering, which stars Olivia de Havilland and features the new "find" Sonny Tufts.

Tufts is cast as a go-getting dollar-a-year man ordered to speed up bomber production, and Miss de Havilland has the title role as his efficient secretary who tries vainly to keep him out of trouble.

"Government Girl", comes to the Belle Theatre this weekend, with the Canadian Paramount News and a timely Canada Carries on feature "Target Berlin". At Saturday matinee the closing chapter of "The Batman" serial will be exhibited.

Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"What a Woman"

Couple the name of the screen's sprightliest comedienne, Rosalind Russell, with that of its most artful and droll comedian Brian Aherne; and its newest sensation, Willard Parker, with 6 feet 4 inches and 200 pounds of charm, put them into a scintillating story and the movie-going public should expect entertainment of the highest order.

Since these three are in Columbia's "What a Woman" opening at the McCarthy theatre on Saturday and advance reports say "It's the sprightliest, gayest, most enchanting comedy in years" that same public's expectaton undoubtedly will be fulfilled.

"What a Woman" is all about Carol Ainsley, Rosalind Russell) a high-powered artists' representative, and her attempt to find and sell a movie company a new star to play the tile role in "The Whirlwind," the year's top, best-seller novel which she herself just sold for a picture. It's no easy task. But she must succeed because she has built a big reputation for herself and has staked it all in an advance publicity campaign which has the whole nation agog.

Trailing her every frantic step is one Henry Pepper (Brian Aherne) ace magazine interviewer who is writing a so-called "profile" of her and claims the only way in which he can do justice to her volatile and complex character is to be with her during practically every waking moment.

The idea of having Brian around like that would be enchanting to most women but not to Rosalind. He gets in her hair and, although she doesn't realize it, into her heart.

She thought her troubles would cease when she had found her "he-man" for the "Whirlwind" but they just begin. The one she picks is a college professor (Willard Parker), the author of the book. He's not easy to handle. While he's not the absent-minded professor type, he's shy and he's not a very good actor. Under Henry Pepper's guileful ministrations, however, this professorial shyness soon disappears and the wolf in the professor roves the range. That seems to make him a better actor as well as a suitor.

The yarn of how this threesome solves its difficulties and untangles itself into the proper twosome for the final clinch is said to contain the funniest, merriest and liveliest situations its stars have ever gagged their way through.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Let's Face It"
(Bob Hope)

The film version of the Cole Porter musical, "Let's Face It", that wowed Broadway, is now wowing audiences at the Capitol Theatre where it was presented last night. The Paramount picture co-stars Bob Hope and Betty Hutton, the happiest comedy combination seen in a long time.

The two stars caper and cavort in this saga of a soldier-boy's off-duty dilemmas in a way to make you forget everything but the good time you are having. There's music in the right places—some of the Cole Porter stage show tunes and one original, written by Sammy Cahn and Jule Styne, called "Who Did-I Did! Yes, I Did!" The Hope gags are there a-plenty; in addition some high-hitting Hutton contributions, plus the comedy talents of Dona Drake, Cully Richards, Eve Arden, ZaSu Pitts, Marjorie Weaver and Raymond Walburn.

The supporting cast is an excellent one and special mention must be made of the comedy talents of Eve Arden, ZaSu Pitts and Phyllis Povah who are very funny as romance-hungry wives. Miss Arden played the same part in the stage version.

"Blazing Guns"

Western picture devotees— in fact, any type of film-goer —will find a neat package of entertainment in Monogram's "Blazing Guns", latest in the Ken Maynard-Hoot Gibson series, now at the Capitol Theatre.

The "Trail Blazer" series of westerns, featuring Maynard and Gibson, has earned a reputation in the past several months as the banner entry in its field. "Blazing Guns" will do much to boost this reputation as it is certainly the best of the series and can hold its own with any competition.

The success of any western is based on its action and the speed with which it moves, and in both these departments "Blazing Guns" is a standout.

A colored cartoon and the serial "Secret Service In Darkest Africa", complete the big double attractions.

Toronto —(CP)— Coach Happy Day of the N.H.L. Leafs announced last night the temporary acquisition of Norman (Bud) Poile, rookie star of the team last season, while awaiting transfer from Canadian Army to R.C.A.F. Poile had been granted permission to play until he re-musters.

Epsom, England —(CP Cable)— The boxing championships of the Canadian Army Overseas will be decided here tonight with 45 contestants qualifying in the seven weight divisions. Many of last year's champions and contenders will be missing because they are fighting in Italy. An entry in the heavyweight class is Gnr. Jack Billings of St. Mary's, Ont.

Winnipeg —(CP)— Leo Johnson, ace skip from the Winnipeg Strathcona Club, won the British Consols trophy, emblematic of curling supremacy in Manitoba, last night when he defeated Bung Cartmell of Glenboro, Man., 16-6 in the final game of the competition at Manitoba's 56th annual bonspiel.

Vancouver —(CP)— Coley Hall, Vancouver sports promoter charged with assaulting Carl Robertson, sports editor of the Vancouver News Herald at a hockey game here last week, yesterday was remanded for one week. Hall is alleged to have assaulted Robertson after the sports writer published a story saying Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, former professional hockey player, was ineligible to play with Vancouver St. Regis in the Pacific Coast League finals. Hall claimed the story cut the gate at Schriner's first game by $1,000.

The Red Carnation

By Burton Stevenson

CHAPTER 14

"Fancy any man forgetting that?" smiled Tony. He was feeling better. She hadn't twisted the truth, after all. "What was the doctor's name?" the columnist asked

Just then a car honked from the curb. "There's the taxi,' he said. "Goodbye. I'll be seeing you soon."

"If I don't, you'll be hearing from me" Leda warned.

It was nearly eight o'clock when Tony got back to his apartment. "As soon as you hear me getting out of the bath," he said to Clarence, "I want you to put in a call for Professor Walter Babcock, at Williamsburg, Va. Here, I'll write it down for you."

"Yes, suh," said Clarence, and took the address.

Three minutes later Tony, relaxing in the warm water, closed his eyes and meditated upon the events of the afternoon.

There had been much progress, starting with the discovery of that wax cylinder in McKibben's safe: A woman, hoarse with emotion . . terrified because her child was growing to look more like its real father every day . . .

Blackmail, of course, had been McKibben's game, but where had he obtained the cylinder, and whose voice was recorded there? A distinctive voice—a cultural voice. Tony was certain he would recognize it . . .

But to whom had the woman been talking? To whom would any woman tell a thing like that?"

Somebody with a dictograph, who had turned it on and recorded the confession. It was an appeal for help. The appeal of a patient to her physician. A patient in deadly torment. Mental torment.

Again there was the glimmer of an idea at the back of his head.

And then it came. The woman had been talking to a psychiatrist.

Dr. Jerome Metcalf was a psychiatrist. Also, he was a friend and neighbor of Jack McKibben.

Tony's eyes were open now. He was sitting bolt upright, with a faint tingling shooting along his spine.

"Could it be that he had found the answer?

Could it be that Metcalf had dictograph attached to his desk? That he recorded his patients' confessions? That he and McKibben had been working together?

Of course. That was it. That explains everything.

He lay back in the tub again with a sigh of satisfaction.

One thing was certain—he must see Metcalf.

Just as he was getting into his bathrobe, Clarence tapped at the door. "I's got youh party, suh," he said.

Soon Tony was talking to Professor Babcock. He briefly described the situation, told him of the police order postponing the funeral. "I'll let you know as soon as things are straightened out up here," said Tony and hung up.

He had dinner at the Colony and then started on his tour of duty. An hour later, at Lindy's, he ran into Herschel Schneider, just saying goodbye to a man and two women who evidently had been his dinner guests. Schneider was always good for a paragraph, provided he had time to talk, so Tony lingered at his table until he came back from taking his guests to the door.

"Got a few minutes, Herschel?" he asked.

"Of course; sit down," and Schneider dropped wearily into a chair. "I'm tired," he went on. "Been working too hard."

"Another tough case on?"

"It isn't that," and the lawyer passed his hand over his face. "Getting old, I guess. Waiter, clear off this table and bring some fresh coffee and a fine maison. You'll have one too, won't you, Tony?"

"No! That was just a Washington politician and his family seeing New York. He's helping me with a little deal down there."

The coffee had arrived and Schneider took a long swallow of it, hot and bitter. Then he picked up the big brandy glass and cradled it tenderly in his hands.

"What's eating you?" he asked. "You look sort of worried yourself."

"Have you been reading about this McKibben case?" Tony inquired.

"A little. What do you make of it?"

"Not much," Tony confessed, "but I'm beginning to get a glimmer or two. Maybe you can help me, Herschel—you're an expert at these things."

"I don't know anything about this case," Schneider objected. "But fire ahead."

"You knew McKibben, didn't you?"

"Yes, I knew him. Not very well. He helped float the bonds for that apartment house he lived in. I've got a penthouse there as you know."

"So I've heard," Tony nodded. "Would you call McKibben clever?"

"Clever? No. But he could put up a good bluff—which is all that's needed sometimes. He's been slipping ever since his wife kicked him over."

"Were you one of his customers?"

"No!" Schneider snorted.

"Did you ever notice his white carnation?"

"Everybody did. I noticed in your column that you made quite a point about it being changed to red. That must have been a twister for yu."

"It was, but I cleared it up this afternoon," and Tony outlined the stories which the two Terry children had told him.

"Extraordinary!" the lawyer commented. "So that boy was actually in the next room when McKibben was shot. He had a close shave."

"You think so?"

"Of course. Any man who commits one murder won't hesitate to commit another to cover it up. It's a good thing young Terry stumbled before he ran into the bedroom. If he hadn't, you'd have had two murders to solve instead of one. It would probably have been called murder and suicide, what with young Terry running McKibben down."

"What I can't understand, Herschel," said Tony, "is why the murderer went to all that trouble to make it look like suicide after the carnation had been changed. He must have known that the red carnation would give him away."

Schneider turned this over in his mind for a moment. "I can see but one answer to that," he said. "He didn't know that it had been changed."

"But if he was looking out at young Terry from the bathroom."

"Terry probably had his back to him, so the killer couldn't see what the boy was doing. Maybe he just thought Terry was feeling McKibben's pulse, or something like that. Anyway, before he had time really to think about it, somebody rang the bell and the boy went out and slammed the door after him. Believe me, the only thing that fellow would be worrying about was how to get away from there."

"He had to fix that suicide setting first."

"He didn't stay to do that," said Schneider. "He wouldn't be sure that Terry wouldn't give the alarm and he didn't know who it was rang the bell. My guess is that he got out of the apartment at once, and only came back when he was sure that nobody had heard the shot and that no alarm had been given."

"He would run a lot of risk dodging in and out like that," Tony objected.

"Not at that time of night. He'd reconnoiter first, of course."

"He'd certainly have been seen if he came out right away," Tony pointed out, "for Terry and his sister were sitting on the stairs right opposite the door."

"How long were they there?" asked the lawyer.

"Two or three minutes, anyway. The boy was so upset he couldn't walk."

Schneider shook his head. "I can't see that fellow in there three minutes, or even one minute," he said.

"Neither can I," Tony agreed. "I don't believe he used the door at all to get in and out of McKibben's place. My theory is that he swung himself down to the terrace from one of the windows above it. What you've said just about proves it."

"He'd have to be an athlete," Schneider objected.

"No, he wouldn't. It would be easy. All he'd need would be a rope ladder about fifteen feet long—even a knotted rope would do. He could have climbed back up and waited to see if there was an alarm and then gone back down and finished the job."

"One apartment is vacant. It belongs to Dudley Graham, a nephew of yours, I believe."

"Yes, it would," Schneider agreed.

"Who has the other apartment?"

"Dr. Jerome Metcalf, the psychotherapist. Do you know him?"

"Oh, yes, quite well. But I don't see what motive he would have . ."

"He's tangled up in the case in several ways. He's the doctor who was treating Lawrence Terry. It was he who introduced Terry to McKibben and advised him to let McKibben look after his investments. He was one of McKibben's customers and so probably had no cause to love him. And, finally, I have reason to believe that he and McKibben were in some sort of racket together. I can't prove it yet, but I'm going to see Metcalf tomorrow, and maybe I can trip him up."

"I'm afraid you'll find him too clever to be tripped," said Schneider to Tony. "But it's certainly worth trying. I understand of course that there's only one sort of racket which they could be working together, and that's blackmail, but Metcalf hardly seemed to me the sort of man to lend himself to anything like that. I confess I never liked him, but he has a good reputation and a fine practice. He must make at least fifty thousand a year."

"Have you ever been in his office?"

"Oh, yes, several times. He treated a niece of mine very successfully, and I went to talk to him about her. She's not really my niece—she's the wife of Dudley Graham, mentioned by you a minute ago. Metcalf impressed me as knowing his business—if you can call it a business. Most of his patients are rich middle-aged women who imagine they have something the matter with their nerves. Of course," Schneider went on, "all that is really the matter with most of them is that their husbands seem to have lost interest in them."

After a pause, Tony said, "I think you're right about the murderer going away and then coming back. For one thing, he went into the other bedroom to see what had happened there and straightened the rug Terry had tripped over. But there was one thing he forgot to do."

"What was that?" Schneider asked.

"There was no powder stains on McKibben's hand," Tony explained. "The paraffin test showed that. When there aren't any stains the presumption is that the hand did not fire the pistol. Powder marks can be made in framing such a seeming suicide." And the columnist described the technique of such a frame-up.

"That's possible," commented the lawyer, then grinned. "If I ever have occasion to kill a man and make it look like suicide, I'll consult you perhaps for the details." He added with a smile. "Anything else you wanted to ask about?"

"Just one thing. You had a table close to McKibben's at Max's Monday night?"

"Yes—you saw me."

"Who was it that came up to McKibben's table and called him a swine?'

"Oh," said Schneider, "that was after I left. But I heard about it, and I happen to know who it was. It was Stuyvesant Bradford. Know him?"

Schneider nodded. "That's the man—the perfect husband. His devotion has been especially marked since their baby came a couple of years ago—after all hope had been abandoned."

SEVEN ESCAPE AS FIRE DESTROYS FARMHOUSE

Galt, Feb. 17. (CP) — Seven people, including a mother and her week-old baby, escaped during the night when fire destroyed the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Moffat with $5,000 damage, near Roseville.

Occupants of the house, who were asleep when the alarm was given, were Mrs. Edward Deadman, her baby and a two-year-old daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. Moffat and their two children. Mrs. Deadman was awakened by smoke and roused the others.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was shaking her head over the news on the radio, saying to pop if this war is ever over I suppose the end will be worth waiting impatiently for, because at least it will mean the end of dictaters thank goodness.

The trouble with most dictaters is most of them are self made and they've done a bad job on themselves, pop said. In these days of modern education every dictater should have a diploma from a good school for dictaters before he's permitted to appoint himself, he said, and ma said, How rediculous.

How so? pop said. A scientifically educated dictater should be able to figure out the exact number of ash trays necessary for the exact number of cubic feet in every home, and whoa betide the woman who provides even one ash tray less than the dictated number, he said, and ma said, That's all very nice no doubt, but where there's sauce for the goose there's invariably a gander, and even in this age of accurate rocket guns and marvellous bomb sights there are still entirely too many men who would continue to strew ashes all over the table top even with ash trays to the right of them and ash trays to the left of them, and you're the very glaring example who would head the list, so the first thing you knew you'd be looking through the bob wires of a cheerless concentration camp.

By gollies there's more to this thing than I thought, pop said, and I said, Well if we did have a scientific dictater the first thing he ought to dictate is a more scientific way of getting educated so a fellow wouldn't have to get up and go to school while he's still sleepy and sit there trying to learn at the very hardest time of the day to think, before his brain starts to work good like it does in the afternoon when school ought to really start.

Sounding like a good idea, but the main result of it was to remind pop and ma to both tell me to get started on my homework.

Most Ontario Cities Pay Their Aldermen

By the Canadian Press

Most Ontario cities pay their aldermen for their services, it was shown today in a survey by The Canadian Press, the amount ranging from $4.50 and $5.00 a meeting in smaller cities to $1,200 annually at Toronto.

Of the 26 cities from which replies were received in the survey, only four—Kingston, Brockville, Port Arthur and Fort William—do not make any honorarium payment to aldermen.

Toronto pays the largest sum with its $1,200 a year while Hamilton and Ottawa each pay $500 annually and Windsor $400 annually.

However, in most centres renumeration is at $5 a meeting. One exception is St. Catharines which now pays $4.50, a reduction from the $5 paid there from [illegible] to 1933.

Brantford pays $5 a meeting but there is a ceiling of $200 a year. At Niagara Falls, Welland, Stratford, Kitchener, North Bay and Sudbury the $5 is paid for both regular and special meetings. St. Catharines, St. Thomas, Belleville, London, Peterborough, Guelph, Woodstock, Sarnia, Galt and Chatham either pay only for regular meetings or did not specify whether payment was for both regular sessions.

Cities which pay their aldermen have had the system in effect for varying times, some since 1919 and others having adopted the plans as recently as 1939.

Finland Might Go Out of War Under Armistice

Stockholm, Feb. 18 (AP). — The newspaper Dagens Nyheter, attributing its information to private sources, says the Germans in northernmost Norway are preparing for arrival of additional Nazi forces, possibly from Northern Finland.

The newspaper, which said the report suggested German evacuation of northern Finland, also said the Nazis were strengthening defences along the Pasvik river separating Norway and Finland.

In an additional discussion of peace possibilities for Finland, the Swedish Communist newspaper Ny Dag said the Helsinki government might get out of the war under an armistice that would leave conditions of a permanent peace to joint Allied settlement after the war.

"If Finland will break with Germany and declare that she will make peace, then it is clear to us that Finland can discuss conditions with the Soviet Union."

The newspaper said a change in the Finnish government was not a Russian condition, but pointed out that the Russians undoubtedly would demand return of the Karelian Isthmus, now held by Finnish troops.

Eden Says Germany, Other Enemy Nations May Be Dismembered

London, Feb. 18 (CP).—Germany and other enemy nations can expect to be dismembered after their defeat, Foreign Secretary Eden indicated in Commons today.

The Atlantic Charter clause which opposes territorial changes not in accord with freely-expressed wishes of the peoples concerned, is not regarded as applying to enemy countries, he said in reply to a question.

Meanwhile, Russia's proposals for handling a defeated Germany were reported to have been presented to the European Advisory Commission. British and American views have already been given the commission, which acts in an advisory capacity to the big three allied governmentts.

A tight lid of censorship has been placed on all proceedings of the commission.

Some to Find 1943 Income Tax Higher Than They Expected

Ottawa, Feb. 18 (CP).—Some persons may find they will have to pay more income tax this year than they had expected because, in certain cases, 95 per cent of the tax may not have been collected at the source, a finance department official said today.

The 1943 income tax tables were designed to permit collection of 95 per cent of the tax at the source, but this has not been possible in all cases.

For instance, 95 per cent might be collected at the source from a person with a low income at the bottom of an income bracket, but might not be collected from a person with a higher income in the same income bracket, the official said.

WALL STREET

New York, Feb. 18. (AP)—Light profit cashing in rails skimmed the cream off the stock market today without souring sentiment to any great extent.

Many Wall Streeters trimmed accounts for the coming weekend and holiday while others adjourned to await outcome of the battle of Truk in the Pacific and European war developments. Dividends, actual and potential, continued as the main buying inspiration for favorites.

Prices began to slip after a fairly steady opening and lower trends ruled near the fourth hour.

Canadian issues were weak. McIntyre, Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines and Lake Shore all registered fractional losses while Distillers Seagrams was unchanged.

Railway issues had to contend with the warning of President Brown of the Lehigh Valley that operating costs on all fronts must be cut drasticaly in the post-war era if the carriers are to compete successfully for a reduced amount of traffic.

HOGS

Dressedweight: Barrie, Stratford and London $17 delivered, Hamilton $17.05 delivered, Hull $16.95 delivered.

7 U.S. Navy Planes In Separate Accidents In U.S. Last Night

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP). — A series of separate accidents in the general vicinity of Washington took a toll of seven United States navy planes and an undisclosed number of lives last night.

Two persons were killed and four injured in one crash involving a twin-engined transport near Gaithersburg, Md.

Three planes of a squadron of six crashed near Montross, Va., a Navy announcement said. A fourth crashed near Quantico, Va. The other two landed safely.

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 18 (AP).—Six men were believed killed and an estimated 30 burned when a four-engined United States Navy bomber crashed into a Navy barracks and burst into flames on the trans-bay Coronado Strand, late last night, Coronado police reported.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J S McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost. If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

Vandals Smear Doors and Walls Of Cathedral

New York, Feb. 18. (AP)—Doors and stone walls of St. Patrick's Cathedral in midtown Manhattan were found smeared today with designs crudely drawn with brig red paint.

Police said the designs were in the shape of question marks with diagonal lines running through them. Other observers said the designs resembled the hammer and sickles emblem of the Communist Party.

Roman Catholic Church officials and police hastened to the building, at 50th Street and Fifth Avenue, upon discovery of the deed.

In recent weeks vandals have inflicted damage on religious centres in other sections of New York. Gravestones have been overturned in cemeteries and churches entered and desecrated.

Two 12-year-old boys were blamed by police last night for $16,000 damage to the Bayside All Saint Episcopal Church. The youngsters carried a snowball fight into the church, police said, finally pitching hymnals and Bibles at each other and breaking windows, light bulbs and altar adornments.

ALLIES SMASH 60,000-MAN ATTACK AT ANZIO

Sea-Air Triumph Over Japanese at Truk Indicated

5th Army Tightens Ring at Cassino By Taking Station

Powerful German Assault Knocks Hole In Line But Allies Soon Plug Breach

DESPERATE FIGHTING

By KENNETH L. DIXON
(AP War Correspondent)

Naples, Feb. 19 (AP). — Allied forces are holding their lines intact on the battle-churned Anzio beachhead after smashing back attacks by four full German divisions — 40,000 to 60,000 men—in the strongest Nazi counter-blows yet delivered, Allied headquarters announced today.

The 5th Army on the main front to the southeast, reinforced by New Zealand and Indian troops, tightened a ring on Cassino from the northeast, northwest and south, winning two heights west of Mount Cassino and reaching the railway station south of the town after throwing 50,000 shells into the ruined stronghold.

The powerful Nazi assault south of Rome knocked a hole in the Allied line near Carroceto, ten miles north of Anzio, but 5th Army tanks and infantry struck back in several successful local counter-attacks, "causing heavy casualties to the enemy" and making some progress.

An Allied officer said that "unlike previous enemy attacks this is obviously the fullest-scale effort to throw the Allied forces back into the sea."

Attack With Great Fury.

Front dispatches said the Germans were attacking with even greater fury today, and that Allied troops were defending their lines in the grimmest fighting. The Germans were spraying the whole area with shellfire.

The German communique asserted the Nazis had advanced 2½ miles south of Carroceto, or within 7½ miles of Anzio. The Germans claimed that they were still holding the Cassino railroad station, but the Algiers radio said Allied troops had occupied it.

The beachhead battle — which may be one of the most decisive of the war—was apparenttly in its crucial stage.

Withering 5th Army fire took a heavy toll of the attackers and Allied warships and planes aided the defence.

The Germans also attacked elsewhere along the Cassino front, failing to gain, and suffering heavy losses.

Senator Pepper Blasts Republicans

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Feb. 19 —(CP)— Republicans, Anti-New Deal Democrats and plain Isolationists are blasting the Roosevelt regime in attacks which Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.-Fla.) declares are identical with those which destroyed the League of Nations and elected Warden G. Harding, Republican, President in 1920.

Republican leaders of that day, Pepper said in a brief, blistering Senate address this week, "bear upon their souls the penalty of a war which has consumed another guiltless generation of men."

Now, he said, they are attempting to regain power with vague promises of international co-operation, as they did in 1920. Harding, promising international co-operation, abandoned the League immediately after his election, Pepper declared.

Anti-administration groups have been having it pretty much their own way because no candidate is campaigning for the Democratic nomination.

President Roosevelt and his chief aides, called by their critics "The Palace Guard," are being attacked for autocracy, defiance of the Constitution, spendthrift generosity to other countries, and with responsibility for virtually everything that is not perfection in the United States.

Because Democrats—and the public in General—appear to take it for granted that Mr. Roosevelt will eventually be the only Democratic candidate for nomination, or that he will be nominated in any event, there is little pre-convention speech-making.

Catholic Teachers Federation Agreed Upon

Belleville Teachers Are Represented at Conference in Ottawa

Ottawa, Feb. 19 — (CP) — The formation of a Federation of Roman Catholic teachers in Ontario was agreed upon in principle at a conference Friday attended by religious and lay teachers from Ottawa, Toronto, Kingston, Peterboro, Belleville, Cornwall, Alexandria, Windsor, Mattawa, Pembroke and London. The conference continues today.

Rev. V. Priester of Toronto, Director and Secretary of the English Catholic Education Association, said "Teachers have been real heroes right down the history of Catholic schools, and have stood by their task even though in some cases they have received less than half the salary paid for equivalent positions in public school."

Very Rev. Joseph Scannell, Provincial of the English-speaking Oblates, said that if ever Catholic education was to succeed in Ontario it would be in proportion to the strength displayed by Roman Catholic teachers.

J. J. Connolly, guest speaker and executive assistant to Navy Minister Macdonald, stressed the importance of religion in education.

U.S. Army Bomber Believed Lost In Lake Ontario

Syracuse, N.Y., Feb. 19 — (AP) —A missing United States bomber was feared lost in Lake Ontario today after Coastguardsmen reported hearing a multi-motored plane headed toward the Canadian shore.

Coastguardsmen at the isolated Gallups Island station in Lake Ontario and at the Oswego station 50 miles west reported hearing a roaring noise overhead but because of the storm were unable to identify the plane. Provincial police at Kingston, Ont., and R.C.A.F. authorities at Picton, Ont., said they had no reports of the missing plane.

The bomber, with a crew of 8, flew here from Westover Field, Mass., yesterday circling over Syracuse municipal airport for an hour where it reported it was running out of gas and unable to land because of poor visibility. The Commanding Officer at Westover Field ordered the crew to bail out.

Planes from the Rome Army Air Field braved the storm to assist in a fruitless day-long search yesterday. Forest Rangers, game protectors and State police in this vicinity were asked to participate.

GLAD HE CALLED

Memphis, Feb. 19 (AP)—B. M. Lay called his draft board at Jacksboro, Tenn., to inquire about his draft status. The official asked his name and other details, then added: "Glad you called. All our records were destroyed by fire last December. We will let you know about your new classification."

Destroyer, Two Corvettes and 12 Jap Merchantmen in Convoy Sunk

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 19 — (AP)—Twelve Japanese merchantmen rushing oil and supplies to bolster the hard-hit bases of Rabaul and Kavieng were wiped out with an escorting destroyer and two corvettes during a three-day attack by Allied bombers northwest of New Ireland, headquarters announced today.

Only two merchantmen eluded the explosives of the bombers which from Monday night until Wednesday morning destroyed 36,500 tons of merchant shipping in the attack and exacted a heavy toll of life aboard the vessels.

Bound south from Truk, the convoy was spotted off Mussau Island Monday night. By midday Tuesday, half of it had been destroyed. Wednesday morning, bombers flew as low as the top of the masts to blast seven more ships within an hour near New Hanover.

One corvette blew up. Five 2,000-ton cargo ships went down with all their personnel.

A 7,500-ton tanker, upon being hit, was transformed within a matter of minutes to nothing more than a spot of burning oil on the water. An 8,000-ton tanker also was sunk.

The destroyer was eliminated early in the attack. Other ships wiped out included a 6,000-ton transport (the type of this vessel indicates it was carrying troops), three 1,500-ton cargo ships and a 500-ton freighter.

No loss among the attacking planes was reported.

POSITION OF NAZI GARRISON GRAVE AT KRIVOI ROG

Russians Outflank City In Dnieper Bend; Also Draw Closer to Pskov in North

MASS AT KHERSON

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Feb. 19 — (AP) — Red Army forces struck vigorously into the shattered ranks of Nazi Field Marshal Fritz Von Mannstein's troops in the Dnieper Bend today while on the northern front the battle drew nearly nearer the key rail city of Pskov, following the capture of Staraya Russa south of Lake Ilmen, 100 miles to the east.

The next objectives for the Ukrainian armies of Generals Konev, Vatutin and Malinovsky, which apparently now are joined, are the cities of Krivoi Rog, great iron ore centre in the southeastern Ukraine and Kherson, 90 miles south of Krivoi Rog at the mouth of the Dnieper River.

Krivoi Rog already has been outflanked and dispatches said that the position of the German garrison there is extremely critical.

At Kherson, Russian forces already are reported massing on the banks of the Dnieper opposite the city ready to launch an all-out attack.

Capture of Staraya Russa and the railroad town of Shimsk, 30 miles to the northwest, together with the towns and villages between, placed the Red Army in a three-armed operation against Pskov. Russian troops as a result are now able to drive on the "key to the Baltics" from the east, northeast and north.

Already the German garrison at Pskov is running the risk of a Russian drive across the narrow isthmus between Lake Peipus and Lake Pskov to cut the trunk railway connecting Pskov and Riga, Latvian capital, 165 miles to the southwest on the shores of the Gulf of Riga.

R.C.A.F. Mosquitos Down Messerschmidts

London, Feb. 19 — (CP Cable)— R.C.A.F. Mosquito bombers on an intruder patrolling operation last night destroyed two Messerschmidt 410s over an enemy base in Northern France, R.C.A.F. headquarters here announced today.

Both enemy planes were credited to Flt. Lt. Bob Kipp of Kamloops, B.C. His pilot was FO. Huletsky of Montreal.

The victories came near Juvincourt in Northern France, and were scored against planes returning from last night's raid on London.

It was the 13th operational flight for Kipp and Huletsky who, according to schedule, should have been on leave two hours before they shot down the Nazis.

LAST OF FAMILY DIES

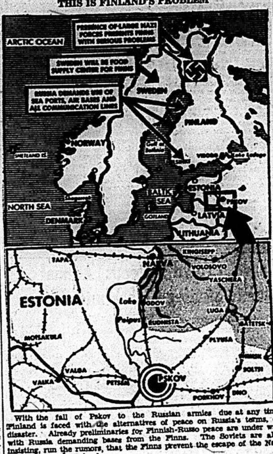
Kingsville, Feb. 19—(CP)— Lyle Bailey, 27, unconscious since Monday, as a result of monoxide poisoning, died in Leamington hospital early yesterday. Bailey was found in the bedroom of his small cottage near here. His wife and their two children were found dead in the same room.

THIS IS FINLAND'S PROBLEM



With the fall of Pskov to the Russian armies due at any time Finland is faced with the alternatives of peace on Russia's terms, or disaster. Already preliminaries for Finnish-Russo peace are under way with Russia demanding bases from the Finns. The Soviets are also insisting, run the rumors, that the Finns prevent the escape of the Nazi divisions now in Finland.

400 LIVES LOST WHEN EMPRESS OF CANADA WAS SUNK

Sharks and Barracuda Account for Most of Those Who Died

TORPEDOED YEAR AGO

Vancouver, Feb. 19 (CP). — The Empress of Canada, peace-time member of the White Fleet of the Pacific that connected Canada with the Orient, lies torpedoed off the coast of West Africa.

Loss of the former Canadian Pacific Steamships luxury liner with 400 of her passengers and crew was publicly confirmed here yesterday, a year after she went down off Freetown, West Africa. An Italian communique claimed the sinking March 14, 1943.

It was the eighth known loss of C.P.S., heaviest hit of all Canada's steamship lines as far as tonnage is concerned. The 21,000-ton ship was second only to the Empress of Britain among the company's announced losses.

The Canada was carrying troops and navy personnel, Italian prisoners and Greek and Polish refugees when she went down, and sharks and barracuda, with which the sea abounded, brought about most of the deaths.

Captain George Goold, last man to leave the ship, and 18 members of the crew came from Vancouver. They have been back here since on leave and told of the sinking, but public release of it could not be made until yesterday.

Fired Single Torpedo.

The submarine fired a single torpedo that stopped the Canada, burst a fuel tank and flooded the water with oil. Then the sub surfaced and her commander, speaking in English, said he would give those aboard time to get away from the ship. Some time later a second torpedo exploded in the Canada and she went down in 10 minutes.

There had been plenty of lifeboats and rafts aboard the former queen of the Pacific, but some rafts and boats jammed as they were hurriedly lowered in the darkness. Those who got away safely were spotted 15 hours later by a Catalina flying boat, and picked up the day after that by a destroyer.

Pride of Pacific Fleet.

The second torpedo ended the 22-year-old career of a ship that came off the ways in Glasgow and became the pride of Canada's Pacific fleet. She became famous in 1923 when she was the first ship to reach Yokohama after the Japanese earthquake.

FIRST SESSION OF 21ST LEGISLATURE MOMENTOUS ONE

Some Political Quarters Predict One of Liveliest Sessions

HOW PARTIES STAND

Toronto, Feb. 19 (CP).—The first session of Ontario's 21st Legislature opens Tuesday and some political quarters predict it may go down as one of the liveliest since the stormy days when Mitchell F. Hepburn was premier.

The political significance of the session will be unprecedented in Ontario at least, and for three reasons:

1. Premier George Drew's Progressive Conservative Government goes into its first session since its election last August, in the minority, commanding at most only 35 votes in the 90-member house.

2. The session marks the "big" test in Ontario for the C.C.F. party which under the leadership of young, law-schooled E. B. Jolliffe, forms the official opposition for the first time with 34 seats.

3. Fate of the government depends on the attitude of the 15 Liberal members under former Premier H. C. Nixon, who hold the balance of power.

Liberal Attitude.

While Mr. Nixon, dean of the House with his 25 years consecutive service as member for Brant, has made no statement, the Liberal attitude was defined at a recent caucus of members-elect and candidates defeated in the election. The caucus decided, it was announced, to support any legislation the Liberals consider is in the best interests of the province.

However, Premier Drew says he will not cut his political cloth to fit any Liberal pattern.

"I believe our program of legislation meets with the confidence and trust of the people," he said last Saturday in an address at London, Ont. "Regardless of any political expediency, we intend to present the legislation we intended and leave it to the legislature to decide. We will not condition our legislation upon expediency but will stand or fall on the program we have mapped out."

Drew's Confidence.

Jolliffe, whose C. C. F. Party elected only one member in 1934, is reticent about his party's position.

"Not having seen any of the government's proposed legislation it is not possible for me to make any comment at this time as to what

LONDON GIVEN FIERCEST RAID SINCE 1940-41

Three Churches, Two Hospitals and Number Of School Buildings Hit by Bombs

HEAVY BARRAGE SET UP

London, Feb. 19 (CP)—Three waves of heavy and medium German bombers last night gave London its fiercest raid since the 1940-41 attacks, and long after the thunderous anti-aircraft barrage had died away fires glowed red against the sky as search parties dug through wreckage for victims.

No immediate estimate of casualties was available, although they apparently were high.

Tons of high explosives and thousands of fire-bombs showered down, hitting at least three churches, two hospitals, a number of school buildings, a hotel, a large suburban store, and many apartments and rows of homes.

The barrage of anti-aircraft fire was the heaviest ever thrown at enemy raiders.

Fighter planes rose to chase the invaders. At least two were shot down by patrols over raiding bases in Belgium and northern France, but there was no report immediately of the number bagged over Britain.

The last London raid Feb. 13 cost the Germans nine of a force considerably smaller than that used last night.

Came in From Northwest.

The waves of the raiders roared in from the northwest. A third quickly followed. Once over London, the Germans scattered and showered their cargoes over half a dozen districts, at many times darting singly through the heavy barrage.

A group of soldiers who watched the raid, which lasted approximately an hour, said it was "the most terrifying spectacle we ever saw. We don't see how those German pilots up there could stand that barrage."

In another district pajama-clad American soldiers used sandbags to smother incendiaries which showered the neighborhood of an American Red Cross Club.

Apartments Blasted.

High explosives blasted a block of apartments, a church and an unused hospital in one section. A

Firm Beachheads Established by U.S. Troops at Eniwetok

Last Lifeline For By-Passed Japanese Garrisons in the Marshalls

PONAPE ATTACKED

By CHARLES H. McMURTRY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Pearl Harbor, Feb. 19. (AP) — United States army and marine invasion forces, quickening the tempo of the Pacific Allied offensive, battled Japanese today for Eniwetok in the western Marshalls while confirmation of an indicated sea-air triumph over the Japanese base of Truk was awaited here.

Firm beachheads were won Thursday at Eniwetok, last life-line for by-passed Japanese garrisons throughout the Marshalls, while guns of battleships thundered a protective barrage and carriers supplied air cover. The assault forces then moved in strength against enemy pillbox defences already battered by repeated plane attacks.

The day before, at Truk, 750 miles southwest of Eniwetok, an American armada sent hundreds of bombing planes to open the first attack of the war on enemy fleet concentrations in the heavily fortified base there. Although radio silence since has shrouded the perhaps prolonged action, Navy Secretary Frank Knox said confidently in Washington "I think this attack was a victory".

First Attack on Ponape

Two days prior to this thunderbolt stroke, a big force of land-based Liberators dropped 55 tons of bombs in the war's first attack on Ponape, Gibraltar-like enemy fortress in the eastern Carolines, 400 miles east of Truk.

Less than two weeks ago, sea, air and ground forces overwhelmed the worlds' largest atoll, Kwajalein, 570 miles east of Ponape, to imperil at one stroke the thousands of Japanese in the Marshalls over a mid-Pacific area 800 miles square.

As at Kwajalein, invasion forces moved far behind many other fortified Marshalls bases when they struck at Eniwetok. The Atoll, 400 miles northwest of Kwajalein, has at least one and possibly two or three airfields and several seaplane bases scattered among its 30 islets as well as reep lagoon anchorages.

Nimitz Makes Announcement.

"The capture of Eniwetok atoll has been undertaken by forces of the Pacific ocean areas", Admiral Chester W Nimitz announced yesterday in the first disclosure of the new operation.

(Tokyo radio spoke of "fierce fighting" at Truk and said the attack was part of "persistent activities aiming at Tokyo on our Japanese mainland".)

Secretary Knox said the Truk assault "was an air strike by carrier-based planes" and suggested there was no present plan to invade that massive naval base, where scores of Japanese warships were spotted recently by reconnaissance fliers.

MONTREAL HOPES FOR TRAM STRIKE SETTLEMENT SOON

4,000 Tramway Operators Out Caused by Jurisdictional Dispute

SOME SUSPENDED

Montreal, Feb. 19 —(CP)— Montrealers got to work as best they could today—or stayed at home in the warmth—as more than 4,000 striking tramway operators remained away from work in a tangled jurisdictional dispute.

Not a tram or bus moved this morning, with the next step in the walk-out apparently awaiting result of a meeting of strikers in Atwater Market. An attempt was made to gather the workers at the market last night but it came too late and only a few hundred men turned out.

The strike that disrupted the city's transportation service for the second time within a year started on a small scale yesterday afternoon when members of a Canadian Congress of Labor Affiliate refused at one East End carbarn to operate cars with members of an American Federation of Labor Affiliate.

The company suspended those who refused to work, and the stoppage spread quickly throughout the city, operators having as their avowed objective the reinstatement of the suspended men.

Denied Responsibility.

Officials of the C.C.L. denied any responsibility for the walk-out and in a statement said that responsibility rested with the company for not signing a new agreement creating a closed shop for the C.C.L. It appeared probable that the matter of the closed shop was the basic cause of the trouble, with the suspension of a few men merely the spark that set off the strike. The company later offered to reinstate the men, but the strike continued.

Prison Camps Better Than Germany If Russians March in Say Prisoners

Ottawa, Feb. 19 )CP).—Nazi soldiers captured in Sicily and Italy would rather be in British or Canadian prison camps than in Germany if and when the Russians march in, three Canadian naval ratings believe.

This opinion was given authorities at a British port by Able Seamen Jean Kroon, 22, Standard, Alta.; Lloyd Evans, 20, Ottawa, land stoker Thomas Fawdry, 23, Harrow, Ont., who now are en route to Canada on foreign service leave after engaging in combined operations in both the Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

"One day we found ourselves crossing the Strait of Messina with our landing craft loaded down with 'Van Doos' (Royal 22nd Regiment, Quebec)," said Evans. "We had come up the Sicilian coast from Augusta and were bound for Italy.

Landed Under Barrage.

"My craft was ferrying the Carleton and Yorks," interposed Kroom. "We landed those Canadians at Reggio under a tremendous covering barrage from our batteries operating on the Sicilian side. We had no opposition until later that day when a few bombers came over.

"We suffered a few casualties, but in most cases the Canadians suffered from dysentery. Conditions were terrible, both in Sicily and Italy. We had to feed the Italians whose food had been looted by the retreating Nazis. They served us with some wine which they had hidden from the Nazis whom they hated with hatred I didn't think was possible."

One day in Sicily they underwent 39 raids in 72 hours, Evans said.

Fawdry's craft landed units at Syracuse.

"We were ordered to follow our troops along the coast of Sicily lest things should go bad for them and an evacuation be necessary," Fawdry said.

Ferried Jerries To Africa.

"When things started to go well in Sicily, we were detailed to ferry hundreds of Jerry prisoners to North Africa." They were very sullen fellows on the whole, but those who did talk were glad to be out of it. They said they hoped the British could reach Germany before the Russians got there. They knew the campaign in Russia was going badly for them because some of them had fought on the eastern front."

"That's what they told us, too, when we spoke to them on the beaches," interjected Kroom and Evans.

"From North Africa we ferried gasoline and supplies to Sardinia," continued Fawdry. "That was after the Italians had chased the Germans off that island. A short time later we bore a Western Canada infantry regiment across the Strait of Messina to Reggio. That was on the morning the invasion of Italy opened.

Had Stiff Fight.

"Next morning we made another landing north of Reggio. This time we brought in the Yankee Rangers and they had a very stiff fight. For a time it was touch and go with them."

Fawdry's craft was then ordered back to Sicily and from there they went to Naples where they landed more troops, both in the city, itself, and on the beaches to the north.

All three Canadian ratings eventually landed in hospital, Kroom suffered a severe attack of jaundice and Evans was hit by a winch handle at Messina while preparing for another engagement. Fawdry suffered an infected arm after leaving Italy and met with his companions in the North African hospital.

SIR WM. MULOCK THANKS W. C. MIKEL FOR HISTORY OF CITY

"I have to thank you for your book—"The History of Belleville"—a most interesting work.

"Many of the names of those published in the book were public men, some of whom I have known. The photographs are very good indeed, some of them bringing back to me memories of the House of Commons during my membership.

"You have been a very industrious man and have made yourself most useful to your fellow citizens. I don't wonder at their attachment to you.

RELIANCE EMPLOYEE ASSISTS DOG TO SAFETY

Gratefulness of a dumb animal to a helping hand which rescued it from a place of danger was demonstrated Friday at noon by a near-exhausted police dog, which was seen struggling helplessly in the water of the Moira river in a small open spot in the ice behind Consolidated Optical plant on Coleman Street. Returning to work at the Reliance Aircraft Jack Raycroft noticed a crowd gathered on the river bank and investigating saw the dog struggling in the water. He approached the near-exhausted canine on the ice and succeeded in pulling him to safety with the dog showing his gratitude by an offer of friendship as he followed Mr. Raycroft to work.

TAKES BETTER PART OF WEEK TO CUT TREES

For four men to spend the better part of a full week in cutting two trees into cordwood may seem like rather slow work, but when it is realized the trees were over three feet across the stump and the smallest contained over five cords, the story seems better to hold water.

The two trees in question were on the farm of Mr. Dave Thrasher, well-known Sidney Township farmer and were cut for fuel wood purposes. Both hard maples, the trees were 40 inches and 36 inches in diameter, the smallest taking almost two hours to saw down. Mr. Thrasher admitted that as the trees were perfectly sound, they would have made splendid hardwood flooring, but "we needed the wood," he said.

Capt. J. E. Rathbun Dies in Trenton In 82nd Year

Owner of One of the Oldest Coach Lines in Ontario, Established in 1897

Trenton, Feb. 19—With the passing of Captain Jacob Edgar Rathbun, who died at his home 148 Victoria Avenue, Trenton, on Thursday, February 17th, 1944, in his 82nd year Trenton lost one of her best known and most respected business men.

He was born in Smithfield on Oct. 14th, 1862, and the early years of his life were spent in farming at Deseronto and in Prince Edward County. Coming to Trenton in 1897 he bought the Asselstine Livery and Stage Line between Trenton and Belleville, which was operated by horse stage until 1918. A motor coach service was added with the advent of motors and has continued from that date as one of the oldest coach lines in Ontario.

During his early years at Deseronto Captain Rathbun operated horse driven, and later steam ferry boats across the bay; and, prior to the building of the Bay of Quinte Bridge at Belleville, he operated the last ferry boat service from Prince Edward County to Belleville before the bridge was opened for traffic.

Once Owned Varuna.

Passing from ferry boats his activities on the Bay of Quinte waters broadened, and, obtaining his first class Mate's papers and later his Captain's papers under the late Captains Hicks and Port he finally became owner of such popular boats as the steamers Varuna, Brockville and Rideau Queen. Everyone who was a child in those days will long remember the joyous summer excursions, which he conducted on these boats from Trenton, Belleville, Napanee, Picton and Kingston to various Bay of Quinte ports from Presqu'Ile Point and Twelve O'Clock Point, to Alexander Bay on the St. Lawrence. Of particular interest were the weekend excursions during the summer months from Brighton harbor and various Bay of Quinte ports to Thousand Island Park in the St. Lawrence River. These trips attracted visitors from far and wide and are long remembered as the outstanding Bay of Quinte trips.

Owned a Shipyard.

The boats were usually quartered in Trenton where Capt. Rathbun owned a ways and shipyard where winter lay-up and repairs were effected. In this yard McMurchie Bros. built several ships for various owners including a ferry boat still operated by the Toronto Island Ferry.

Freight services were also operated from South Bay and Port Milford as well as Bay of Quinte ports.

Associated with Capt. Rathbun for many years on these boats was 1st mate Fred Jarrell now residing at Belleville, and chief engineer James Walker now residing at Trenton.

Capt. Rathbun was keenly interested in the growth of Trenton, and served twenty-six years on the school boards of the town, both public and high school. During this time the new high school was erected.

Capt. Rathbun was a life member of the Trent Lodge No. 38 A.F. & A.M. and Belleville Preceptory.

He was a member of King Street United Church being an honorary member of the Board of Sessions for several years.

His devotion to church and family was outstanding in his life. He was a man of extreme patience and fortitude, notwithstanding nine years of blindness. His genial personality won for him the esteem of life-long friends and acquaintances.

Surviving are his wife, the former Lena Solmes, a son Grant at home and a daughter Mrs. Kenneth Crews of Trenton, and two grandchildren.

Funeral services were held from King Street United Church on Saturday at 2.30, with Rev. J. D. Martin officiating and entombment was made in Belleville Mausoleum.

Buy Your Share in "Our" Corvette "BELLEVILLE"

Belleville has come through as expected in the support of the campaign to raise sufficient money to sponsor her own corvette and before the final day of the period set the objective was reached. Since the last publication of figures $423.70 have been received by the committee treasurer bringing the total amount to $3,485.55 by three o'clock Friday afternoon. The decision to adopt the H.M.C.S. "Belleville" following her commissioning meant an increase in the total amount to be asked for from the public, an amount which will undoubtedly be obtained. When the public fully realises the purpose of this fund, that it will be used to furnish men and officers with clothing that will keep them warm when their duty carries them to far northern waters, additional comforts that will make their life aboard more ideal than it otherwise would be, there will be a continuing flow of money coming into the fund.

Although the campaign officially closes with the tag day appeal, persons or industries wishing to contribute to this cause may still send their donations. The severe sub-zero weather in the city may tend to reduce the expected results from the tag day, and the committee extend their thanks and sincerest appreciation to those ladies who were on the streets during the coldest part of the morning, and also to those who volunteered their services later in the day.

The following list of persons, business firms and stores, having contributed most generously are extended the thanks of the committee for their generous donations:

Large Crowd Attends Annual Quinte Skating Club Winter Show

Twenty-five hundred enthusiastic spectators thronged the Hume Arena Gardens on Friday night to witness the annual Quinte Skating Club winter show under the direction of Mrs. Olivia Weese. In attendance was the B.C.I.V.S. band under the leadership of Geo. N. Maybee which played appropriate skating numbers for the participants of the revue on the occasion. Each and everyone of the picturesque "drama on ice" took his part well and gave proof of excellent training and management. From the oldest performer to the very youngest, nothing seemed to daunt them, but they displayed perfect confidence in themselves and in their silver blades.

But one almost invariably steals the spotlight in any review, and this one was no exception. It was none other than little Miss Vi Vi Smith, guest star from the Toronto Skating Club who verified unusual mastery, for one so petite, of her skates—of the ice itself. Confident, smooth, agile, rhythmic, graceful, she appeared at perfect ease and wholly in her glory, both mentally and physically, as she glided over the ice. And even in the most delicate and intricate motions, her style could be termed as "champion".

Local talent also performed admirably on the occasion. Mentioning a few of the outstanding participants in the carnival were Bill Davies who received loud applause both in his solo exhibitions and with his partner, Miss Barbara Bews. Clare Ridley was another who proved his fine skating ability in his single performance and in a comic number which received a great number of laughs from the spectators. And while on the subject of comedy acts, the name of Jack Dickens should not be forgotten, who turned in his usual round of humorous enactments as the beginner experiencing the new art of ice skating.

For the first part of the program the surface of the ice was transformed into a world of fairyland, when the old tale of King Cole was enacted with all its color, grandeur and pomp, illustrated by the setting and the costumes of the members of the cast. The person of the king himself was taken by Mr. Douglas Bews; the king's trumpeters by Nora Flurey and Terry Meagher; the blue bells by Ruth Watson, Kennan Casey, Carolyn Adams, Marie Keddie, Judith Taylor, Nancy Casey, Kathleen Mills, Jane Slavin, Joan Ireland, Mary Jane McNally, Patricia Brearley, Patricia Smith, Mary Pattrick; the daisies by Kathleen Morrell, Beth Wilbur, Joan McLaurin, Jill Hince, Mary Lee Fox, Marie Lampros, Rosemary Logan, Joyce Miles, Barbara Ireland, Shirley Domenico, Sheila Cathers, Frances Jean Pinkle, Wilma Graham, Ann Robertson, Marilyn Gariepy; Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary, Betty McNally; Boy Blue, Louise Pattrick; King's Guards in Review, David Bews, Donald Lockyer, Jim Hill, Bruce Ervin, Barry Kells, David Scott; Jack and Jill, Nancy David, Marilyn Andrews; Humpty Dumpty, Jay Howard; Miss Muffet, Shirley Fox; The Spider, Robert Brearley; Queen of Hearts, Olivia Weese; Knave, Louise Pattrick; Jester, Joyce Cooper; The King's Own, Barbara Bews, Bill Davies; Scullery Maids, Margaret Williams, Connie Maker, Norah Flurey, Louise Pattrick; King's Jester, Joyce Cooper; Blackbirds, Margaret Williams (mother bird), Wallace Muir (scarecrow), Donna Flynn, Mary Domenico, Beverley Buck, Sylvia Youdale, Joan Toms, Patricia Kelett, Joan Kay, Marilyn Kerr, Hilda Ridley, Theresa Callaghan, Carol Wishart, Elspeth Wishart, Betty Holway, Shirley Howard, Maureen Upper, Mary Ann Emery, Elinor Bernstein, Barbara Mascaro; Pipe Bearer, Bill Davies; The Fiddlers Three, Jack Dickens, Roy Ridley, Wallace Muir; Swing Waltz, the club.

At the conclusion of this, the remainder of the program was brought to a close with the following numbers:

Single, Bill Davies; comedy, Mike Ridley; double, Louise Pattrick and Betty McNally; double, Barbara Bews and Bill Davies; single Vi Vi Smith (Toronto); The Smoothies, Bill Davies and Olivia Weese; single, Connie Maker; Jergen and Charlie, Bill Davies (Jergen), Nancy David (Charlie).

Mr. Kells then pointed out that the average number of pupils per teacher at Q.A.S. was 37, at King George 42, at Q.M.S. 38, and at Q.V.S. 38, excluding the kindergarten classes attaining the required 95 per cent attendance for the month of January were Miss Lillian Hart's and Principal C. I. Frederick's class.

Mr. Kells commended the work of the Junior Red Cross activities and the promotion of the sale of war stamps. In January stamps valued at $1,004.50 were sold through the efforts of the public school students, an average of nearly 66c per child. During the month between 2 and 3 tons of magazines were collected in the schools.

Owing to illness eight teachers lost a total of 36 1-2 days during January, added Mr. Kells, who will attend the Eastern Ontario School Inspectors conference at Peterborough on Feb. 25th.

Mild Epidemic of 'Flu.

Mrs. Watt, the public school nurse, reported there was a mild epidemic of stomach 'flu among some of the pupils of two schools, but the attacks were not serious.

During the month of January, the school nurse made 317 vision tests and found 25 new defects, ten of which were referred to the Kinsmen Eye Clinic. The Rotary Club was also asked to assist in one emergency surgical case. Mrs. Watt also made 83 home visits and rendered 126 First Aid treatments.

Enrolment at the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School for the current month is 708, according to the report submitted by Principal W. S. Turner. Of this number 329 are boys and 379 girls. The Collegiate enrolment was announced as 489. Principal Turner also announced that 26 classes in the B.C.I. & V.S. had attained over 92 per cent attendance during the month of January despite sickness. He also requested the Board to provide a pianist to accompany pupils during gymnastic classes.

New Lighting System.

With J. A. McIntosh in the chair, when the Board went into a committee as a whole, H. B. Fetterly moved the adoption of the Advisory Vocational report that included a recommendation of the purchase of a new fluorescent lighting fixtures to be installed in the machine shop at the Collegiate at a cost of approximately $700.

Under Collegiate Management B. C. Sisler moved the adoption of a motion to install foot baths in the boys' and girls' dressing rooms adjacent to the Collegiate gymnasium. When an application for the use of the Collegiate was read from the Trail Rangers, E. E. Follwell asked what accommodations were available. "We have found out that a building adjacent to Bridge Street Church can be had for these boys," replied Mr. Fetterly. "If this does not materialize why not try procuring the basement at the Kiwanis Centre"? suggested J. A. McIntosh, when it was learned the Collegiate premises were being utilized to the fullest extent. The matter was left to a committee named.

Accepted Gifts.

W. J. Harrison moved the adoption of the Public School Management report that included a motion to accept the gift of Bibles from the Gideons, that are now available in public schools. This report also included a recommendation to the Board to assume 50 per cent of the cost of radios to be installed in Queen Mary and Queen Victoria schools for educational purposes.

The committee also expressed willingness to co-operate with the Board of Health in the setting up of a generalized health program in the city of Belleville.

Under the heading of Property and Supply Mr. Fetterly moved the adoption of a measure to secure full information regarding the cost of a new heating unit for Queen Mary School, as the present unit is not satisfactory. Chairman Carl Crosby then advised the Board that an additional janitor, capable of attending the heating plant at the Collegiate Institute, would have to be secured. This matter will be dealt with at a special meeting on Monday night. E. A. Geen moved the passing of all financial accounts.

When it came to the matter of inquiries Mr. Sisler asked why Collegiate form parties couldn't be held in the Collegiate building. "I am told form parties are being held downtown in rooms. Everybody else can use the Collegiate, why not the students", continued Mr. Sisler.

Principal Glad to Concur.

"I would concur and approve in this matter providing adequate supervision is applied", replied Chairman Crosby. At this point Principal W. S. Turner, of the Collegiate, assured the Board that matters in his school would be glad to concur in such a measure.

Upon recommendation the Board as a whole went on record as approving form parties, if the masters and students desire, and such shall be held under the supervision of Mr. Kells and Mr. Turner.

A temporary janitor for Queen Mary School had to be engaged owing to injuries sustained by the regular caretaker, Mr. Carter.

SCALA THEATRE IN LONDON TAKEN FOR U.S. TROOPS

Shakespeare Company Have Just Opened Series of Plays of Great Dramatist

QUESTION IN COMMONS

London, Feb. 19 — (CP Reuters) —Shakespeare has received notice to quit the Scala Theatre in London which, under a War Office requisition order, is to be taken over on March 1 for United States troops.

The decision was made known a little more than 12 hours after the curtain had fallen on the opening night of a series of Shakespeare plays—the first that had been seen in wartime London for some time.

Donald Woolfit, who was producing the plays at this theatre in the heart of Soho, said "six months of work went into the production. Thousands of pounds are involved, and when I walked into the theatre today I was suddenly presented with a requisitioning order.

"Ours is a non-profit-making organization formed in 1937 and we are furthering the effort to present Shakespeare, the national poet, to the nation.

"It is the first time that a theatre in full production has been closed for military purposes."

The Minister of War, Sir James Grigg, is to be asked in the House of Commons why some other buildings could not have been taken over and whether he will reconsider the decision.

Spaniel Credited With Saving Family By Lusty Barks

Toronto, Feb. 19 — (CP)— A little cocker spaniel named "Button" barked lustily last night until overcome by smoke when fire broke out in the Melrose Avenue home of Albert Williams and his alarm was credited with saving the Williams family of three from being trapped.

Williams said the dog kept on barking despite commands to keep quiet, and Williams rose to find the house full of smoke. He told his wife and his mother-in-law, Mrs. H. Capewell, to get out quickly and then he found "Button" collapsed on the kitchen floor. Williams carried the dog to the outside where the fresh air soon revived him.

Firemen confined the fire to the basement of the house.

180,000 Jews In Holland Are Wiped Out

London, Feb. 19 —(CP)— Nearly the entire Jewish community in Holland—numbering 180,000 persons—has been wiped out by the Germans, a document smuggled out of that Nazi-occupied country into Netherlands government hands indicates.

The government here is compiling from the document a catalogue of German atrocities leading to the mass extermination through outright killing, sterilization and deportation.

It is believed some hundreds of Jews have managed to exist underground. At the war's start, Holland had some 120,000 Jews, and another 60,000 persons of Jewish strain.

Lights Coming On Again

Lights have come on again after having been off since the outbreak of war on the flagstaff on the Peace Tower, Ottawa, one of the signs that risk of enemy air raids has evidently passed. During the war the flag has flown night and day over the tower. The significance of the lights is that they indicate that the legislators are in session. This step should inspire every one with the realization that much has been done towards winning the great struggle against the forces of evil and that with continuance of the same zeal and patriotic spirit the term of the war will be shortened and the lights come on again all across the world.

This is an encouragement that the work of the past four years into which most persons have thrown all their energy has brought the world nearer the goal for which the world fights and yearns—the end of Nazism and Japanese imperialism and militarism.

Field Marshal Smuts at Capetown on Thursday voiced similar sentiments and the great hope and quiet confidence and resolution which inspire the peoples of democracy. "We have been through the four worst years of war and can now look forward to the end in the not distant future," he said, and added, "Not that we must be allowed to imagine the war is by any means over. Big battles are still ahead so the spirit of sacrifice should be maintained until the end.

"We hope the war will be over very soon and the government is now busy organizing the great task of demobilization."

Everyone wants to be in the struggle for right and freedom in these days when the time draws near when the death blow will be given tyranny and the Hitlers, Tojos and their war machines and the evils that are in their trains will be swept away by the whirlwind of United Nations' victory.

Kreisler to Broadcast

Lovers of music broadcasts have a great opportunity in store during the coming summer. The great master of the violin, Fritz Kreisler, is to make five broadcasts. He has long withstood appearance before the microphone but has at last decided to play. He will have as audience the greatest number an artist could have, the world. When he plays many millions on millions will remain in their homes to hear the charm of the music of this great virtuoso and composer.

Musso Cringes for Recognition

Mussolini has decided he has found a race that understands his "high" sense of honor and loyalty of his "sacred alliance" to the German Fuehrer in having his son-in-law, Count Ciano, executed, not for booting him out of office but for the "treachery" to his brother in the Axis, Adolf Hitler. That was, he tries to infer, the hardest thing of all, something he could not forgive Ciano for, knocking out the props from under the fine spirit of comradeship between Hitler and Mussolini.

The race that Mussolini has found is the Japanese. So he told a Japanese reporter. Of course it made no difference that the Japanese are of the same race as the Nipponese soldiery who committed the most horrible cruelties against prisoners of war in Bataan.

Mussolini, in his thirst for exaltation of himself before men, in bespeaking for himself a place of honor according to the Japanese militarist code, was doing just what he did all the way through his climb to the tottering prominence he occupied in Italy through the backing of Fascists. For the world's champion and most ignominious boaster to crawl into recognition in Japan, is surely the depth of degradation. Still aspiring to seek recognition from even a Japanese reporter so that he might carry the Mussolini fame to Nippon is perfectly ridiculous. The Japanese Imperialists who ignore everything that is true and good would disregard him as a failure of the worst kind because he lost out. The Japanese would meet him with the same grin signifying their "superiority" to all the rest of the world in treachery and in inventing atrocities.

Of course Mussolini can see that Hitler has no longer any use for him as a wash-out who cannot be squeezed like a lemon to give further aid to Germany. Tojo of Japan would only brush the servile cringing Mussolini out of his way. It is right that this should be the fate of the man who played a fool's and traitor's part for self. And Hitler and Tojo will by the same or other ways come to the end of their tether when no man will recognize them any more than today men are casting an eye of sympathy on a slobbering, prattling and now infantile Mussolini.

The very names of "honor" and "sacred alliance" on Mussolini's lips disgust the sober sense of mankind.

Mummie, Look!

(London Calling)

"Mummie, look! They've put great big lights on in our street!" Clustering in the doorway of their little home in Malpas Road, Brockley, in Southwest London, Sheila (aged seven), Doreen (three), Terry (three), and Michael (eight) gaze upwards at the 400-watt lamps that have suddenly lit up their street. They'd seen nothing like it before, at least not that they could remember. What a day it will be for British children when they can buy candy without coupons, go to the store and buy oranges and bananas, and grapes; have currants in their buns. Yes, the war has hit the children hard. But they are getting ready for The Day: in Malpas Road at dusk that evening the electricians were trying out the street lamps, ready for the moment when Prime Minister Churchill orders: "Put on the lights of London."

Alcohol Yield From Evergreens

(Newsweek Magazine)

The lumber industry is just opening its big guns on the alcohol situation, and the explosion is likely to make big Washington news soon. The lumbermen are plugging their process (an improvement over the Germans) to produce potable alcohol from waste wood more cheaply than from molasses. And their position has been born out by year-long U. S. Forest Products Laboratory experiments which proved that all of U. S. woods are adaptable to the process. The highest yield comes from evergreens, with one ton of waste yielding up to a half-ton of sugar which finally is fermented into alcohol. Lumbermen insist the WPB is giving them a run around because the alcohol industry doesn't want to move converter plants from the East to the South and Northwest, where the wood waste is available. In view of the grain and liquor shortage, they believe this indefensible.

A Worthy Gift

(A Letter in New York Times)

According to a recent story in The New York Times, "Plasma is almost as necessary as food and has become almost routine in the treatment of battle casualties."

But you cannot buy plasma like a war bond, nor can it be collected like waste paper. It must come from the veins of the people. And our only reward is to be clothed in the warm gratification that comes from doing a good deed. If we're able-bodied and healthy, we can make no greater personal contribution to the war effort than to donate a pint of blood regularly to the Red Cross. Blood plasma saves lives—keep it flowing to the front.

He Got Soft Drinks

(Union Signal)

An English army chaplain was told that the officers' mess did not have soft drinks. "Well," was his reply, "you'll have to get some for me." Soft drinks were installed and now more than half the men enjoy them.

Ill blows the wind that profits nobody.

FIRST SESSION OF

kind of a reception it will get," he said this week in an interview.

The tangled political situation dates back to Oct. 21, 1942, when Mitchell F. Hepburn resigned as liberal premier after having held office since July 10, 1934. He named Gordon Conant as his successor as Premier, and remained in the cabinet as provincial treasurer until March 18, 1943 when his resignation from that office was accepted.

Six weeks later Mr. Nixon was named liberal leader at a provincial convention. Mr. Conant did not contest the leadership because of a sudden illness and later turned the premiership over to Mr. Nixon.

Progressive Conservative Strength.

Mr. Nixon remained in office until his defeat in the election last Aug. 4 when his party won only 15 seats compared with 38 for the progressive conservatives, 34 for the C. C. F., two labor-progressives and one independent liberal—Mr. Hepburn.

However the progressive conservative's effective strentgh has been reduced by three due to the appointment of J. J. Stewart, member for Toronto Parkdale, as speaker, the absence overseas of Hon. Capt. the Rev. A. W. Downer, member for Dufferin Simcoe, and the death last week of Wallace Welsh, member for Haldimand-Norfolk where a by-election will be held March 20.

That leaves Premier Drew's administration with but 35 votes when they go into the session Tuesday, against 36 for the C. C. F. or against a combined opposition of 52. Under legislature rules, the speaker can cast the deciding vote in the case of a tie.

WRITER PESSIMISTIC

Toronto, Feb. 19—(CP)—Quentin Reynolds surprised Toronto newsmen last night with a one-hour informal chat in which he said a European invasion across the channel was so difficult it might never happen. In the Toronto Press Club inaugural meeting before a public address at Maple Leaf Gardens, the American Magazine writer said his findings on German defence plans were so pessimistic they would not stand publication.

"This world is wild as an old wives' tale,
And strange the plain things are,
The earth is enough and the air is enough
For our wonder and our war".
—By G. K. CHESTERTON.

Oxen are often called "dumb", but they are smart enough in some ways! For one thing, they have an uncanny feeling of direction which suggests a sense unknown to man. One hundred years ago it was recorded that oxen travelled 40 miles and more heading all the while for former homes. Such journeys, through bush country where man without a compass, would probably have been bewildered and lost, have aroused amazement. . . . The loss of runaway oxen was a decided misfortune to the pioneers who used the animals not only for ploughing but also for log-hauling, stump-raising and other labor requiring brute strength.

Once the refugee oxen had been returned to their rude shelters, the settlers feel free to go about their daily tasks and to enjoy their infrequent dissipations. One of the favourite sports, in winter-time, was fishing through the ice. This required great patience. The Indian was particularly adept, and was in fact the white man's instructor in the art. First he made a hole in the ice with his tomahawk. Then he placed himself on hands and knees and draped a blanket over himself in such a way that it darkened the water below, in the opening he had made. This ruse prevented the fish from realising his nearness. In this position he often waited for hours. When he had caught a glimpse of flashing fins he struck fast and furiously with his spear, almost always with deadly precision. Maskinonge so "bagged" were declared, in annals of a century ago, to be more delicious than those caught later in the season.

Meanwhile, away up North, the Eskimo is also out angling—but for seals, not fish. His is an even more tedious and nerve-wracking job than that of the fisher described above. He has marched out onto the frozen wastes. His keen eyes have searched for the holes that the seals have kept open from below with breathing. Having, chosen a hole at random, the Eskimo has built a snow wall and parked himself in its shelter. He has let down a spear into the hole, knowing that any movement of this weapon will signal the arrival of a seal. A quiver against his hand. . .and in a split second the Eskimo has cast downwards a harpoon with detachable head which is attached by a rope tied to one leg.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Do We All Need Extra Vitamins?

Today we are all more or less acquainted with the value of vitamins as we see vitamin A correcting eye disease, vitamin B correcting nervous ailments and poor appetite, vitamin C preventing scurvy, vitamin D preventing rickits. Thus it is safe to say that vitamins are the most important discovery in food and nutrition for many years past.

There is one point, however, that many of us forget and that is that vitamins we need in the daily food done their part in preventing ailments and preserving health. It is only the discovery of them that is new or recent.

The second point we may not know is that most of us get all the vitaminsc we need in the daily food we eat, providing in addition to meat, bread, and potatoes, we get milk, butter, green vegetables and fruits. There is really no need for us to take extra vitamins.

In the British Medical Journal, Drs. G. N. Jenkins and J. Yudkin report their results in testing 178 school children aged 11 and 12, about half of whom had received extra vitamins daily at school for one year. The extra vitamins were 5,000 international units of vitamin A, 1 mg of vitamin B1, 25 mg of vitamin C and 500 international units of vitamin D, these amounts being about one half the total daily requirements.

What were results obtained? No difference was found between those that had received the vitamins and those who has not, in pulse rate, lung expansion, breath holding test, gain in height and weight, and amount of iron in the blood.

Why were there no differences between those who were given the vitamins and those who received no extra vitamins? In the opinion of these investigators and others it was because the children tested had been well or properly fed before the extra vitamins were given.

If you have no infection present but are nervous, shaky, have rheumatic pains, are losing weight, cannot sleep, in other words are not enjoying health, there is nothing that will bring you up quicker than extra vitamins properly prescribed.

If you are well, however, there is no need for extra vitamins to prevent illness.

London, Feb. 19 — (CP) — The Daily Mail said today that, although Britain is at war with Finland, she is ready to facilitate in every way peace efforts now being made by Finland. The express added that Britain would even place an airplane at the disposal of negotiators for a flight to Moscow.

Members of House Ask Expanded Research Facilities for Agriculture

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Feb. 19 (CP).—Expanded research facilities for agriculture provided the dominant theme in a five-hour airing of farm problems in the House of Commons yesterday. The purpose for which members wanted more scientific study was to develop new uses for farm products and improved methods of production.

Replying to the suggestions which came from different quarters of the House, Agriculture Minister Gardiner pointed to $200,000 in last session's estimates for pilot plants and other facilities, not all of which has been spent, and to $325,000 in national research council estimates for the coming year earmarked for agricultural research.

Gordon Ross (L., Moose Jaw) who advocated a research program last session was not satisfied. He wanted an immediate start on a laboratory to be specially devoted to agricultural research and separate from the National Research Council.

T. C. Douglas (C.C.F., Weyburn) advocated the spending of $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 on research either under direct government auspices or as assistance to co-operative organizations which were prepared to undertake the work.

Range Over Whole Field.

The discussion which took place on agriculture estimates ranged over the whole field of farming, from the price of hogs, sugar, steers and wheat to prospects of future markets. It included a few critical remarks on Mr. Gardiner's travelling expenses and a response and a few arguments on what members were farmers and what were not.

At the opening, the House set up the Defence of Canada Regulations Committee, a regular wartime feature charged with reviewing the special regulations and their application and, on motion of Howard Green (P.C., Vancouver South) gave the committee power to go into a study of naturalization and deportation law and procedure.

The small non-war estimates of the defence department, totalling just over $41,000 were approved quickly.

Finance Minister Ilsley announced the existing tax concessions on beet sugar production, amounting to rebates of one cent a pound of the excise tax would continue but no additional assistance would be given.

He also announced a modification in the recently announced rule limiting the amount of tax exemptions for charitable donations to permit corporations to receive exemption on gifts up to their average for the two years prior to the start of the 100 per cent excess profits tax. If they make larger donations the exemptions will not apply.

Clashes With C.C.F.

"I urge the minister and the government not to let the session pass without a substantial amount of money being set aside for agricultural research purposes," he said.

Mr. Ross, who operates a large farm, clashed with C.C.F. members several times and Mr. Douglas at one stage suggested Mr. Ross was a grain broker. Mr. Ross denied this and Mr. Douglas said in any case Mr. Ross spent a lot of time in a brokerage office.

"I may have done that and the honorable member might have learned more about the business if he had," said Mr. Ross.

"I know a lot about the farmers who were 'broke' after coming in contact with the honorable member's brokerage," punned Mr. Douglas.

Mr. Douglas, who is a clergyman and Saskatchewan C.C.F. leader and frequently twitted by Saskatchewan Liberals with speaking on farm problems without being a farmer, turned on Mr. Gardiner.

"I make no apology for not being a farmer," he said. "The Minister of Agriculture is not really a farmer either. He supports a farm. He does not make the farm support him."

Gardiner Hits Back.

"The farm would support me better than anything you have ever done supports you," retorted Mr. Gardiner.

Later, in a clash with W. Bryce (C.C.F., Selkirk) over the price of cattle Mr. Gardiner said some people tried to make out he was "just a poor school teacher" but he could go on the Regina market and pay a cent a pound more for a steer than Mr. Bryce could pay, take the steer to his farm, feed it his own grain and make more money on it than Mr. Bryce could.

The point of Mr. Bryce's criticism was that at present prices it did not pay to buy steers, feed and finish them and market them. Mr. Gardiner said commercial feeders finished only 10 per cent of Canadian beef.

It was getting harder for them to make a profit because more farmers were finishing cattle raised on their own farms with their own grain. In this connection he said it would be a good thing if local markets for livestock were established which would avoid the cost of shipping cattle in to large markets and shipping them out again to other farms for finishing.

MONTREAL HOPES

A company statement said that the situation "seemed to be one calling for definite and affirmative action by constituted authority."

Two weeks ago the Provincial Government passed legislation making strikes and walk-outs in public services, including tramways, illegal. The legislation provides for fines up to $1,000 for those leading such a strike, and fines of from $10 to $50 a day for those participating. Union leaders met with company officials last night and the company reported that Paul Marquete, C.C.L. organizer, had said he would try to get the men back to work.

Want Closed Shop.

The men who were at Atwater Market during the night, however, said that they were expecting to remain out until they had gained a closed shop for the C.C.L. Thus the strike showed a tendency to follow the pattern of the 60-hour stoppage of last March, which started with a dispute over a bonus payment and ended with recognition of the C.C.L. as bargaining agent for the workers.

LONDON GIVEN

number of homes were demolished in another district, burying many of their occupants. A church and homes were hit in still another district. Houses along four streets in a northwest suburb was set ablaze. A number of British service women were killed or injured when a bomb damaged a hotel in which they were billeted.

Rescue workers in another section toiled until dawn by the headlights of automobiles digging survivors out a badly-smashed row of dwellings. Eight were taken to hospital. Five others were feared dead.

It was announced yesterday that in a recent raid German fire-bombs showered around the Houses of Parliament and Westminster Hall in the heart of London. A fire broke out in Westminster Hall, but the historic government buildings had "an amazing escape", the announcement said.

This historic group of buildings had been free from raids since May 10, 1941. At that time Westminster Abbey was set ablaze, Big Ben was hit, and the House of Commons chamber was heavily damaged.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

"Mascot," a person or thing supposed to bring good luck, was originally French slang, perhaps from Provencal "masco," a sorcerer. It was popularized by Audran's opera, "La Mascotte," first produced in 1880.

Turkish soldiers are sometimes called "janizaries." This term is from two Turkish words, "yeni," new and "cheri," soldiers. The original janizaries were a body of Turkish infantry constituting the sultan's guard and the main part of the standing army. Most of the janizaries or "new soldiers" were composed of the boys of tributary Christians who had been kidnaped and brought up as soldiers by the Turks. The janizaries were abolished in 1826.

A committee of a state legislature which helps other committees expedite legislation is known as a "sifting committee." The U. S. Congress has never had such a committee, although the rules committee of the House of Representatives performs some of the functions of such a group.

When the moon is far to the north it is popularly called "a cold moon," because many people then suppose it to be a sign of cold weather. There is probably no relation whatever between the weather and the apparent position of the moon. The moon's motions are uniform and its position can be accurately computed for years and even centuries ahead. No such uniformity exists in regard to the weather.

The Dutch, French and English buccaneers and free-booters who hovered around the West Indies and preyed upon Spanish commerce in the 17th and 18th centuries called themselves "the brethren of the coast."

Women's Activities

W.C.T.U. MEETING

A well attended meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held on Friday afternoon with the president, Mrs. Denton, in the chair. The discussion regarding the convention to be held in May was left to the executive. Miss Reeves read a letter from the treasurer which was left to the finance committee. Clothing was donated to the Greek relief collection. Mrs. Ackerman led the devotional. In the absence of Mrs. Shortt, her helper, Mrs. Boyd, took charge of the Frances Willard program. Mrs. Farnsworth told of Frances Willard's grandparents going west in a covered wagon through a swamp which is now Chicago. The seed of ambition was planted early in her heart to grow and achieve. Scholarships helped her through college. When her sister was dying of consumption she said to Frances, "Tell everybody to be good." A position as a teacher in a college was refused by her that she might take charge of the W.C.T.U. work in Chicago.

Mrs. Baker told of the beginning of the temperance crusade through the influence and prayers of one woman which spread until one village was left free from the curse of intemperance for years. Her son, in telling her story, so stirred his audience that 300 men and women met and prayed every night, visiting the saloon until the proprietor said if others would stop selling he would. In Ohio cultured women filled the streets, praying and pleading for the temperance cause until in 60 days the liquor traffic was swept from 50 towns in the State of Ohio.

PLAINFIELD W.M.S.

The regular meeting of Plainfield W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Hall on Feb. 16, with an attendance of 25 members and 4 children. Mrs. Fred Hall, president, opened the meeting. The theme, "The Bible, the Common Possession of the World Church" was conducted by Mrs. Horace Palmer. Those assisting Mrs. Palmer were Mrs. V. Elliott, Mrs. Clayton Hall, Mrs. Fred Prindle, Mrs. Clarence Platt, Mrs. N. Wilder and Mrs. J. Collins. Mrs. H. Palmer gave a reading, "Why Should We Read the Bible?" Mrs. Fred Hall gave the Bible study. Six new members were added to the roll. Mrs. Fred Hall read a letter of thanks from Mrs. Clarence Hall and Mrs. Ed Emerson at the time of their mother's death. Treasurer's report was given; cash on hand, $17.95; flower fund, $3.65; collection, $4.24. World's day of prayer is to be held at Plainfield United Church on Feb. 25th at 2 o'clock. The Mission Circle was formed for girls under 25 years. The meetings are to take place the first Monday of each month. Mrs. Erle Denyes, group leader, then took charge. A poem was read by Mrs. Ralph Wilder. Mrs. Norman Hall, Sr., and Mrs. Jack Gow gave readings on India and China. Mrs. Erle Denyes read a very interesting letter telling of her son's trip to Palestine, which was much enjoyed by all. The hostess and her assistants served a dainty lunch and a social half-hour was spent.

HOLLOWAY STREET Y. P. U.

During the business period it was decided to make a contribution to the Corvette Fund and also to the Medical and Famine Relief Fund for India and China. Plans were made for a sleighing party to be held next Thursday, weather permitting.

The meeting was then turned over to Lois Liddle and her group. Assisting in the Worship service were Dorothy Mitts and Beverley Goodfellow. An interesting story on the origin of Valentine Day was read by Beth Robertson. Partners were then found by matching sections of valentines and contests enjoyed. Candy was served and the meeting closed with "Taps."

FRONT ROAD WAR WORKERS

The Front Road War Workers spent a very pleasant evening on Feb. 9th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Brown. The evening was spent in playing euchre, with the winners as follows: Ladies, Miss Hazel Greatrix, consolation, Miss Dorothy McDonald; Men's, Mr. W. Grey, consolation, Mrs. Gordon Acky playing as a man. The lone hand prize was won by Miss Hazel Greatrix and the door prize by Anita Brown. Tickets were sold on a cup and saucer.

On Feb. 17th, a social evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Whittle, Front Road, and in spite of bad roads, there was a very good crowd. Prize winners were as follows: Ladies, Mrs. J. Shaw, consolation, Mrs. Gordon Acky; Men's, Mr. Roy Clazie, consolation, Mr. E. Brown. Door prize, Jimmie Botting. Lone hands, Mr. Robt. Bell. A letter which was sent by Mr. Douglas McDonald from overseas, was read. The next euchre will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Botting.

Thoughtless Posture Brings Penalties in Figure Faults

By HELEN FOLLETT

SUPPOSE we take a backward glance? What about your back lady? Or don't you know anything about it? The next time you are out stalking dry goods, trying on a coat or frock, behold yourself in the full length, triple mirror. Take a survey, not only a front and side view, but a rear view as well. Figures change from year to year, especially after forty candles appear upon the birthday cake.

The wrong pose of the body is usually just thoughtlessness; the penalty is there in the form of rounded shoulders, maybe an ugly roll on the upper portion of the back. By making oneself tall, lifting the chest, holding in the abdominal muscles, the back will be straight and smooth with a neat nip in at the waistline. That practice has remodeled many a figure which would never have won a beauty medal.

Develop a Strong Back

Strong back, young body; weak back and one looks like sixty, even though one may be only thirty. Get muscles strong and resilient and the silhouette assumes pleasing lines.

Exercise These Muscles

Another exercise; place the feet far apart, clasp the hands together, bring them down between the knees. This is known as the wood chopping exercise. Good for the back, and it also normalizes the arms, slimmers down the waistline.

Muscles were made to use; they should have plenty of work to do. If you don't use them, they go to sleep, fat cells find them napping, and then you're in for a nice kettle of fish, dieting and everything.

Marguerite Chapman has a most graceful posture.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Father-in-Law Starts Ordering Her Around, When Husband is Not Present

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband is in the service. We have three children. The house we live in is owned by my father-in-law who lives on the second floor and not with us. He has never liked me, because I'm a different religion, but I was married in my husband's faith, and we are bringing up our children in that faith.

When my husband comes home on weekend leaves, his father is perfectly swell, but as soon as my husband goes back to camp, his father starts fighting and ordering me around, and says I'm not good enough for his son and says he's going to break us up yet.

I've been sick since a recent operation, and the doctor says I must have peace and quiet, but whenever this arguing starts I get sick. My husband doesn't know anything about this and he thinks everything is peaceful. Do you think I should tell my husband about the state of affairs the next time he comes home?

If, as you write me, your father-in-law quarrels with you to the extent of distressing you till you're nervously ill, the allowance given by the government and your husband will enable you to move and enjoy more peaceful surroundings.

At the same time this would probably distress your soldier-husband greatly. And as you have a separate apartment from your contentious father-in-law, why can't you overlook his shortcomings, remembering it takes two to make a quarrel? However, as the situation has become unbearable, better discuss it with your husband next time he comes home.

He Asked Her for a Photograph and Then Returned It

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I went on a blind date with my cousin and met an attractive service man. I knew he had a line, but couldn't help falling for it. He asked me to send him my picture and I paid $10 to have a beautiful sepia print made, framed it and sent it to him for Christmas. He returned it when he was about to go to another camp, saying he couldn't bear the thought of having anything so lovely in danger. That he really had no space for so large a picture, but he didn't ask me to send a smaller one. I'm in doubt what to do.

K. M. B.

He probably meant you to send him a snapshot, when he asked for a photograph, as soldiers really have no accommodation for a large framed photograph. And half the time they're kidding when they ask for pictures. Safer, my dear, always to send a snapshot.

Once Banned As Witchcraft—Pancake Tradition Survives

A thrifty French housewife probably started the custom of serving pancakes on Shrove Tuesday, in order to use up her dripping and lard before the Lenten season of fasting commenced. At any rate, in France, Shrove Tuesday, the day preceding Lent, has always been called Mardi Gras or "Fat Tuesday."

But whether the idea was French or not, the pancake custom was firmly entrenched in England at an early date. By the seventeenth century, ceremonial processions took place Shrove Tuesday at such fashionable boys' schools as Eton and Westminster—where the flipping of the first pancake was a solemn ritual. In private homes, custom insisted the wife or mother should fry the cakes herself. When one side was cooked, she was supposed to toss the cake in the air in such a way as to turn it over so it would fall back into the frying pan with the uncooked side down—a practice which required no little skill.

It is amusing to think that Cromwell and the Puritans of his day, looked askance at this innocent habit of serving pancakes on Shrove Tuesday — and suspected that witchcraft was afoot. One Seventeenth Century writer describes it thus: "There is a thing called wheaten flour," he writes, "which the sulphury necromatic cooks do mingle with water, eggs, spice and other tragical, magical enchantments and then they put it little by little into a frying pan, where it makes a confused dismal hissing like the Lernean snakes in the reeds of Acheron, Styx or Phlegelon."

Later on he bewals the fact that "this ominous incantation (the pancakes), the ignorant people do devour very greedily, but they have no sooner swallowed that sweet, candied bait but straight their wits forsake them and they run stark mad, with uncivil civil commotions."

Today, though people still continue to enjoy pancakes on Shrove Tuesday—a few serve them with ceremonial pomp and pageantry—and none feel compelled to rush wildly through the streets. On the contrary, most people sit back complacently after a feast of piping-hot, golden-brown pancakes—and the modern housewife feels well-satisfied she has given her family a nourishing and delicious treat that has been easy on her budget—whether it's Shrove Tuesday or any other day in the year.

Modern methods, too, have made the serving of pancakes an easy matter. Ready-mixed pancake flours cut the preparation time to almost nothing and the new-type griddle simplifies the rise. If you are not using the new greasless type of griddle, however, be sure to be very sparing with your fat. You'll make better-tasting pancakes—and it's an economy we shouldn't overlook these days.

Here are some recipes for those who are pancake-minded but want a little variety from that old-time favourite, pancakes with syrup and butter:

Apple Pancakes, (Makes 20)

2 cups prepared pancake flour
2 cups milk
1 beaten egg
2 tablespoons melted shortening
1 cup apples, cut in small pieces
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cinnamon.

Add milk, beaten egg and melted shortening to prepared pancake flour, mixing lightly. Batter should be somewhat lumpy. Fold in apples. Grease griddle lightly. Pour batter onto hot griddle using ¼ cupful batter for each pancake. Bake each side until golden brown, about 3 minutes for each cake. Put small pat of butter on each pancake and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar mixture. Serve immediately.

Buckwheats with Liver Sausage (Serves 5)

1 pound liver sausage
2 tablespoons fat
2 cups prepared buckwheat-mix
2 cups milk (or water)

Cut liver sausage in ¼ inch slices and remove casing. Brown sausage on both sides in the hot fat. If desider, onions may be fried in fat first. Serve hot with buckwheat cakes made according to directions on package.

Corn Pancakes

1½ cups prepared pancake flour
1½ cups mixture corn liquid and milk
½ cup drained canned kernel-type corn

To pancake flour, add liquid. Stir until batter is very smooth, then add corn. Turn into pitcher. Have griddle or frying pan heated and greased (unless of greaseless type). Pour batter as rounds, and when bubbles appear and break on top, turn and brown second side. Serve very hot with syrup and crisp sausages or bacon.

IF YOUR IRON NEEDS CLEANING

Nothing is more annoying when pressing that new print dress—or your husband's best white handkerchiefs, than to find your iron leaving a trail of dirty "footprints." When this happens, it is simple evidence of burned starch or other material on the surface of the iron. To clean your iron correctly and thoroughly, pull out the plug and let the iron cool. Then sprinkle a little salt on a sheet of waxed paper and run the iron back and forth till stains disappear. If your iron is badly discolored, apply silver polish with a slightly damp cloth, rinse well and polish dry, being careful not to get any water in the working part of your iron. Always remember to keep your ironing board cover clean with regular washings in soapy-rich suds. And a final hint—wipe off the face of your iron after every using.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Simmonds Honored by Neighbors, Relatives On 60th Anniversary of Wedding

Massassaga — On Monday evening of last week a large number of neighbors and relatives gathered at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Simmonds to honor them on their sixtieth wedding anniversary. The evening was spent in community singing and a social time enjoyed, after which Mr. and Mrs. Simmonds were asked to take their seats of honor. An appropriate address was read by Mrs. Alfred Hillman and Mrs. I. Nightingale presented them with an electric table lamp and Mr. Douglas Wallbridge with a beautiful mirror on behalf of the community. Both Mr. and Mrs. Simmonds very graciously replied and thanked everyone for the gifts. All joined in and sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." A lunch was served and everyone was treated to ice cream and chocolate milk. Mr. and Mrs Simmonds are both enjoying good health. After a very pleasant evening all departed for their homes wishing them many more years of happiness and health.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Widow's Signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A group of my friends and I have had many a discussion as to the proper signing of a widow and also the correct form of addressing an envelope to a widow. Some say that one should address the envelope to "Mrs. John Doe," and that a widow signs herself "Mrs. John Doe." Others say that a widow should be addressed as "Mrs. Mary Doe," and that she should sign all social letters "Mrs. Mary Doe." Which of the above examples is correct?

J. B.

A widow should use precisely the form of name she used when her husband was living. She is still Mrs. John Doe and we should address envelopes to her by that form of name. ("Mrs." should not be used before a first name.)

Her letters to close friends would naturally be signed with her first name only. Letters to people whom she doesn't know very well, but who do know that she is Mrs. John Doe, should be signed like this:

Very sincerely yours,
Mary Smith Doe

The third kind of letter she will write, business letters or letters to people who must be informed of her formal name, should be signed:

Very truly yours, (for business letters); Very sincerely yours (for others)
(Mrs. John Doe) Mary Smith Doe

Party for a Year-old Child

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me how I can arrange a party for my one-year-old child?

N. B.

You'll probably want to invite a few of your intimate friends who have babies of the approximate age as yours. And the hour of the party will be determined by the sleep-schedule of the babies; probably an early tea-hour will be best. Your concern for menu-plans for such small guests will have to be guided by what they are "allowed" to eat, but as a symbol of the occasion you might have a birthday cake, with one small candle, as the centrepiece of your tea or buffet table. (Enchanting to the eyes of the small guests, even though "forbidden fruit" for them!) Your menu for the mothers would appropriately be a simple tea menu: tea or coffee, small sandwiches, the birthday cake or any other kind of cake. No "entertaining plans" for this kind of party, which should not last much more than an hour, out of wise consideration for the "guest of honor"!

Who Pays the Bus Fare?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A boy friend of mine has asked me to go out with him. Since we are to travel by bus, don't you think it is entirely fitting that I pay my own bus fare? My mother and my friends disagree with me.

T. S.

I agree with your mother and your friends. Since this boy has asked you to be his guest, naturally he will expect to pay the bus fare for both of you. Although your impulse is a generous one, better not embarrass him by making this inappropriate suggestion.

MY RADIO LOVER

To Joel Kupperman

I fink he's just the feetest fing—
My crush—my air-wave lover!
And yet he's got another girl.
I think he calls her "Muvver."

My ears each Sunday night I strain,
To hear him answer quizzes.
I never knew a youngster's brain
So erudite as his is!

Yet one thing causes me dismay—
One drop within the cup!
Alas, I dread that bitter day,
When Joel will GROW UP!

Meanwhile, have all the thrills you can,
You Frank-Sinatra-swooners.
I'll take my Joel Kupperman—

It is foolish for a girl to waste so much time and artistic effort in rouging her lips before going to a party, these days. They'll get all crooked in the taxicab, anyhow.

CANADIAN ARMY BOXERS STAGE SLASHING BOUTS

Windsor Fighter Makes Final but Loses Due to Broken Hand

Epsom, England, Feb. 19—(CP)—A new crop of boxing champions flourished in the Canadian Army in the United Kingdom today but whether they equal the 1943 variety can scarcely be determined because some of the army's best mittmen are in action in Italy.

However, the full house which saw the 1944 finals in the Municipal Swimming Pool building here last night got plenty of action, including one knockout.

They saw these new champions crowned:-

Heavyweight, Tpr. Joe Main, Calgary.

Light heavyweight, Sgt. Jack Ennis, Windsor, Ont.

Middleweight, Gnr. Doug Marsh, Montreal.

Welterweight, Rfmn. Tom Settee, Prince Albert, Sask.

Lightweight, Pte. Russ McCarthy, Hamilton, Ont.

Featherweight, Spr. A. F. Butler, Kingsville, Ont.

Bantamweight, Gnr. Jack Billings, St. Marys, Ont.

Particularly crowd-pleasing was the bitter, bashing middleweight battle between Marsh and Tpr. Frank Egan of Windsor, Ont. None in the crowd knew that the Windsor scrapper fought with a fractured bone in his left hand. He fractured the bone, broken a couple of months ago, in the semi-final yesterday when he defeated Gnr. Alf Foster of St. Catharines, Ont. Egan kept quiet about that because the injury would have barred him from the finals.

The only knockout was in the heavyweight final when Main landed a hard one to the side of the head in the final round of his bout with Pte. Frank Nieviadomy of Bienfait, Sask.

The closes bout of the night was the lightweight final. McCarthy finally gained the officials' nod after solving the straight left which Tpr. Tim Doyle of Vancouver used effectively.

Detroit Wings Win Exhibition Tussle

Windsor, Feb. 19—(CP)—Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League last night defeated Toronto Navy representing Senior Ontario Hockey Association 9-7 in an exhibition game proceeds of which went to buy sports equipment for Windsor division of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve.

Veteran Syd Howe led Detroit with three goals, Don Grosso had two and the rest were distributed between Cully Simon, Carl Liscombe, Joe Carveth and Tony Bukovich. Four Windsor City League players appeared with the Toronto team.

BOB MONTGOMERY BELTED OUT BY DAVIS IN ROUND

TOAST OF TOWN

Four years ago he drew a lifetime suspension from New York rings, and a barrage of boos from the fans, for hitting Fritzie Zivic with a series of low blows.

Last night, his exile lifted since he returned from the army, he stepped back into Madison Square Garden's ring a 4-1 underdog to Bob Montgomery, Philadelphia's dusky star who until last November held the New York-Pennsylvania version of the lightweight title.

Davis used his left hand as an eraser on all the bad things the boys have been saying about him. He kayoed the Philadelphian in one minute and three seconds of the first round.

It was the quickest knockout in the history of Madison Square Garden, and it was the first time Montgomery had been stopped in his colorful career. Outside of that, there wasn't much to the scrap.

Davis caught bouncing Bob with a left hook to the head and sent him down for a four count in the first 15 seconds. Montgomery staggered to his feet, backed to the ropes under a flurry of blows, and finally took the full count as another left hook to the jaw connected.

Back on Nov. 14, 1930, Tony Canzoneri belted out Al Singer in 1.06 of the first round to take the lightweight title, for the former quick-finish record in the Garden.

Davis came into the ring at 142 1-4 pounds, five more than Montgomery weighed.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
(CP Staff Writer)

Toronto, Feb. 19—(CP) — The way Dink Carroll tells it, any Montrealer who comes out of a boxing or wrestling promotion without owing a couple of grand must be either a financial genuis or a swindler. Carroll, sports editor of The Montreal Gazette, puts the case this way: "There is a provincial tax of 12½ per cent on all professional sports ventures. This tax comes off the top and, after it has been subtracted, there is another federal tax of 20 per cent. Boxing and wrestling in the City of Montreal are subject to a still further tax of five per cent, levied by the Montreal Athletic Commission. In the case of boxing and wrestling much of the talent is recruited from the United States. The pay-off is in American funds so you add another 11 per cent. to the promoters' cost."

Greenhorn Gravy:

W. A. (Bill) Ripley of Indian head, Sask., showed up at the Regina bonspiel with three who had always curled together. Bill was a first-year skip. All he did was score 14 victories without defeat, and win the bonspiel's three top prizes. It was a feat unequalled in Regina since 1929.

Hemstitching:

H. Jackson, Detroit Red Wings' 26-year-old defenceman, turned professional with Chicago Black Hawks in 1936, at 18. He was doing all right until he was smashed over the shoulder by a stick one night in New York, playing against Americans. Muscles and ligaments were so badly mutilated an operation was necessary. The doctors thought he might never play again. But the next season, with 117 stitches in his shoulder, Jackson returned to hockey, languished in the minors for a time until the Wings' defence difficulties—gave Harold his chance this season.

Incidentally:

Joe Klukay, the Sault Ste. Marie boy who turned professional last season with Toronto Leafs, went home to the Sault on leave from the Navy last weekend and turned out with the Soo Tech. juniors against a Sudbury senior team in an exhibition. Klukay scored nine goals and assisted in five as the juniors beat Sudbury 20-15. . . . Among noted hockey players with service clubs at Camp Borden are Sandy Sandalack, of Regina, Lin Bend of Portage La Prairie and New York Rangers and Glen Brydson, former major leaguer. . . . # BLIND WRESTLER 'HEARS' RIVALS

Russell's keen ears substitute for his eyes. He hasn't been able to see since he was five years old—a kindergarten student—when he was struck in the left eye by a croquet mallet. In a short time he lost the sight of both eyes.

Solidly-built, strong and determined, the 18-year-old Yale junior smiles as he explains, "You might think I'm trying to kid you, but really I'm sincere when I tell you I can hear my opponents. In this way I can almost tell their every move. For that matter I can actually hear a tree."

Russell received his secondary education at the New York Institute for the Blind and was a student for two years at Hamilton College before he transferred to Yale last fall. When Eddie O'Donnell, Eli mat coach, issued his call for wrestlers, Bob was among the first to report.

O'Donnell has been impressed by the 165-pound Russell's grappling talents, so much that the mentor believes Bob is a potential intercollegiate champ. Bob has his work cut out because Gene Smith, team captain, wrestles at the same weight.

Falcons Lengthen Lead in Group 2

The Falcons added another victory to their string last night to lengthen their lead in Group 2 of the Junior "A" series of the Ontario Hockey Association by administering a 4-2 reverse to Brantford Lions at St. Catharines, the winners now standing four points ahead of Galt Kists. The result prevented Brantford passing Port Colborne into third position in the standing for a playoff berth.

The Falcons and Lions alternated in the scoring during the first two periods, with Brantford notching the lone tally of the second frame, but St. Catharines turned on the power in the third stanza for a two-goal splurge.

Scoring credits were widely spread. The four counters of the home club were registered by Phillips, P. Long, Jukes and F. Long, in that order. The Brantford snipers to find the net were Jeffrey and Evenshen. There were 12 penalties.

"Y" ACTIVITIES

In a series of relay races by the Prep and Junior boys on the inside track at the "Y," splendid times were made with the teams all tied on a point system.

The times for the three events follow: ⅛ mile, 31 seconds; ¼ mile, 59 seconds; ½ mile, 2 min. 10 seconds.

'Lippy' Durocher Abandons Overseas Tour to Army Camps

By the Canadian Press

The much-discussed overseas tour to the army camps by Manager Leo Durocher of the Brooklyn Dodgers has been abandoned, it was announced by the club last night, and "Lippy" is scheduled to report at Brooklyn Feb. 26 to make preparations for the start of Spring Training March 15 at Bear Mountain, N. Y. Durocher had been touring the service camps down south for a number of weeks and President Branch Rickey had virtually lost track of him until announcement was made from club headquarters a temporary manager would be appointed to take charge of the squad until Leo returned from his Mediterranean jaunt. This brought a quick reply from Durocher to the effect he might not be going across the Atlantic.

The Dodgers have added a 17-year-old catcher to their roster in Leroy Jarvis of the American legion team, Oklahoma City. The club now has four catchers, the others being Bobby Bragan, Mickey Owen and Ray Hayworth.

Mickey Rocco, first baseman of the Cleveland Indians in the American League, yesterday revealed he had been rejected for military service because of stomach trouble and said he expected to play baseball as usual next season.

Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics after he had made a name for himself with Detroit Tigers, yesterday faded from the baseball scene when he was sworn into the Navy at the Little Rock, Ark., recruiting Station, after having passed his medical tests several weeks ago.

After playing all season, all four teams in the Quebec Senior Hockey League will engage in the playoffs on dates to be decided later, it was resolved at a circuit meeting in Montreal last night. The loop started out with eight clubs and a succession of withdrawals forced a revision of playing schedule three times.

Harry (Yip) Foster of the Cleveland Barons in the American Hockey League last night announced his resignation from the team to take a job in a Detroit War Plant. Foster was recently reclassified 1-A by the Cleveland Draft Board.

OTTAWA CLUBS CARRY OFF PRIZES

Ottawa, Feb. 19 (CP)—Jack Bradley's Ottawa Curling Club rink and George Hay's Rideau Club four carried off the trophies as the week-long Central Canada Bonspiel closed early today on the ice of the Ottawa Club.

The Bradley four won major honors—the Manuel Trophy—by defeating F. Q. Dench's Renfrew, Ont., side in the final 14-7. The Wilson cup, second award, went to the Hay rink as the result of its 12-10 decision over A. M. Cameron's Metcalfe, Ont., rink in the final.

H. H. Ward, chairman of the Curling Association of Ottawa, presented the trophies to the winning skips after the matches.

New York, Feb. 19 (AP)—Pro football, which never claimed to be the great builder-upper the college game is supposed to be, may rely largely upon players who can't take the army grind next fall....The Grene Bay Packers' Curley Lambeau, a visitor here, points out that boys are being discharged from the army every day because the training is too tough for them, but a lot of them still can play football...."The army can't tape up a weak knee or give a boy a few minutes on the bench when he gets tired," Curley explains. "Why, we've had a lot of players who can't walk 10 miles."

INTEREST CENTRES ON STRUGGLE FOR PLAYOFF SPOTS

Toronto, Detroit, Boston and Chicago Are Closely Bunched

LEAFS PLAY TWICE

(By The Canadian Press)

With top and bottom of the National Hockey League virtually conceded to Montreal Canadiens and New York Rangers respectively, principal interest centres on the struggle for play-off berths among Detroit Red Wings, Toronto Maple Leafs, Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks.

Only eight points separate the second-place Red Wings from the fifth-place Hawks, so any of the four clubs could be eliminated from the four-team post-season play-offs in the dozen or so games remaining. Detroit leads Toronto by four points, Leafs have a three-point edge on Boston and the Bruins are a point ahead of Chicago.

Toronto and Boston have a chance to gain on the field this weekend with two engagements compared to one each for Detroit and Chicago. Leafs entertain Boston Saturday and play at Chicago Sunday, while Boston's other weekend contest is at Detroit.

The other two weekend games match Canadiens and Rangers, with Montreal at home Saturday and on New York ice Sunday.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Feb. 19 (CP)—Flying over ice instead of through cloud, a Canadian Intruder squadron proved its name by smashing through to a 6-2 victory over a Mustang unit as the second half of the Southern England R.C.A.F. Airfield Hockey League whipped into action.

Led by a stocky aircraftman, A. F. Valenti of North Bay, Ont., the Mosquitos from the squadron of Wing Cmdr. Don MacDonald of Vancouver gave the opposing goalie T. G. E. Jones of Windsor, Ont., little chance on the shots that beat him.

Valenti, well-known in Northern Ontario ice circles, scored four times, twice in each of the first and third periods. FO. N. J. Gibbons of Vancouver, and LAC. L. B. Kilgour of Toronto fired the others.

Outstanding for the losers was WO. Ted Miller of Ottawa. A crack performer back home, he scored the first Mustang marker in the third period and only great goaling by LAC. W. J. de Lance of Nipawin, Sask., prevented him adding more. Another Ottawan, LAC. J. R. Thompson, scored the other for the Mustangs.

It was a hard-hitting, fast game but only three penalties were issued by the referees, Flt. Sgt. A. K. Dowds of Winnipeg and LAC. J. Rodrique of Verdun, Que.

There was great rejoicing in the Intruder camp when word arrived that a Flt. Lt. Tommy Anderson was enroute to join the squadron. The unit has a pretty fair hockey team, mind you, but is always anxious to improve.

So the Intruder stock took a great jump because Anderson was believed to be the same fellow who played a great game on defence for Brooklyn Americans of the National League.

Then Anderson arrived. He was just as husky as the hockey fellow —but it wasn't the same Tommy. This fellow was from Winnipeg. Hockey's Tommy is from Drumheller, Alta., and is an army lieutenant at Currie Barracks in Calgary.

Flt. Sgt. Eddie Quinn of (1933 Bayle St.) Montreal just can't forget the time back in 1938 when Montreal Westmounts played Regina Dales for the Canadian junior football crown. Now a bomb aimer with Canada's Leaside Squadron, Quinn played for that Westmount outfit.

"We have to get out and scrape up around $900 to bring the Dales to Montreal," Eddie said. "Then they up and beat us."

Oh, That's Different

A man, visiting a house for the first time, found that his host was the father of three wild children. The latter made so much noise that the visitor found it difficult to hear a word that was said.

One child was busy ripping the upholstery out of a brand-new divan. A second lad was driving nails into an expensive table, and the third was swinging gaily from a chandelier.

The bewildered guest eyes the youngster who was driving nails into the furniture. He turned to his host.

"I say," he said, pointing to the boy with the hammer, "don't you find it rather expensive to let your children play like that?."

The host smiled proudly.

"Not at all," he replied cheerfully. "I get the nails wholesale."

It was exactly 20 years ago yesterday that saw Jack "Chief" Williams leave Belleville to join the spring hurling staff of the Rochester club in the International League. The Red Wings trained at Haddon, Georgia, that year.

In his two years of pitching baseball for the Belleville Nationals, 1922 and '23, Jack Williams had established himself as one of the best lefthand pitchers in Canada. It was his work against the mighty Toronto Hillcrests in the fall of 1923 that stamped the "Chief" as a professional prospect and he was signed by Walter Hapgood, business manager of the Rochester club.

However, Williams did not remain with the Rochester club that year but rather was farmed out to the Bridgeport, Conn., club in the old Eastern League. Today Jack "Chief" Williams is back in the Canadian Army, where he first gained prominence as a baseball pitcher overseas in 1918.

(Remember when)

Canada's Kimberley Dynamiters advanced into the second round of the world's amateur hockey championship in London eight years ago tonight when they defeated Sweden 9-0. A week later they blasted England's hopes of taking the title by scoring a 3-0 win over the Englishmen. They went on to the championship by defeating Switzerland 2-1 in the final.

(Honor St. Mikes.)

The local branch of the Knights of Columbus will honor Jack Doran's championship St. Michael's Academy football clubs at a banquest in their club rooms on Monday night. Special surpises are in store for the champs. Incidentally the "Irish" captured all district Interscholastic football championships in 1943.

(Hall of fame.)

Some of the best suggestions as to making selections for Hockey's Hall of Fame has been made by the veteran Montrealer, William Northey. Here is what Bill Walshe has to say about that in his Whig-Standard sport column: William Northey of Montreal, who still takes an active interest in the direction of hockey, has seen most of the major games, amateur or pro, for the last 50 years. He convinced Sir Montague Allan to turn the trophy over to the C.A.H.A. 36 years ago when the Eastern League turned profession and with the trophy went about $20,000 in cash which the C.A.H.A. has since multiplied. He told O'Brien that there is no way of judging old-timers by modern standards and cited for an example Mike Grant who was a sensational star around 1900. He gave a warning not to make territorial selections, so many for the east and so many for the west, as he said he feared the "purpose of the Hall of Fame to perpetuate great players would be ignored for the sake of politics." Northey's suggestion is to "appoint a few old-timers who were actively interested in the pre-1905 period and try to get them to agree honestly and unanimously on some truly greats of that era. Make them solely responsible. Then appoint a few younger veterans to consider the 1905-15 period. From that time on the chore will be much easier because records became comparatively complete from that time on. That will provide a solid basis but it will be essential that the Hall of Fame be kept ultra-select."

Clark Griffith of the Senators a few years back predicted that night baseball would ruin the majors—now his team plays more night games than any of the major league teams....Now Griff is contending that synthetic doubleheaders on Sundays will do what night baseball failed to do—but he is still disturbed at the moment because the 1944 American League shedule just released does not provide the Senators with a Sunday doubleheader in New York....The guy is sure a contradictory cuss....Billy Evans says the late Kid Elberfield gave him the first fast comeback he ever ran into as a major league umpire when he was officiating in a game in which the old New York Highlanders were participating ...."I called Elberfeld out," Evans said. "He stepped on my foot in protest, then apologized. He offered to punch me in the nose and I dared him to" ...."How much do you weigh?" inquired the Kid....I weigh 185 pounds," Evans replied....Elberfeld promptly went into reverse and said: "So you're going to punch a little 135-pound guy on the nose, are you?" and walked off the field laughing.

Don Lee, who champions the local girls' basketball loop, phoned in to say that the receipts from Monday night's dual cage games at the "Y" will be turned over to the fund supporting the Corvette "Belleville." The high class games are on the card, especially a grudge game between the league leading Alemites and Reliance while Bell-Sargent and the Deacon lassies will battle it out for third place.

Sydney, Australia, Feb. 19—(CP)—American service personnel who go to the races in Australia are throwing their money away because they do not understand the local patois.

In the United States, on the totalisator they bet for a win (first) place (first or second) or show (first, second or third). Here there is only a win (first) or place (first, second or third). So the visitors, backing a horse for a horse for a place, have been throwing their tickets away when their fancy came in third.

Horse Sense Bridge

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Hold your horses, Mike. Don't start galloping to a game or a slam whenever you see an unusual hand. You'll get there in due time. But easy does it better. Get there without working up a lather.

Trot out this hand again:

♠ None
♥ A K J 3 4
♣ A 5 4

Your opening bid with that hand is one heart. If partner responds with two spades, your second bid is three diamonds. If partner then bids three spades, what now? Bid four diamonds.

With two suits of the same length, bid the higher rank first and the lower rank next. Having bid hearts before diamonds, you said your diamonds were not longer than your hearts.

When you bid an unassisted suit twice, you say it is rebiddable. No rebiddable suit has less than five cards. So, your four diamond bid says you have at least five diamonds.

If your diamonds are at least five and they are not longer than your hearts, your hearts must be at least five. So, your four diamond bid shows you have at least five cards in each red suit.

With that information slapping him in the ears, your partner should tell you which of your two suits he prefers. You are asking him to show a preference for one or the other.

Why is the choice up to him? Because you have told him the length of your suits. You do not know how many cards in each of your suits are held by him. He does know.

He is thus able to decide better than you which is the best suit in the combined pair of hands. How can he show that preference? By assisting the last named suit or switching to the other.

His selection will influence what suit you decide upon as the final trumps. So, await his further information with patience.

You can be nonchalant about it.

AT THE McCARTHY

"WHAT A WOMAN"

The two bright stars of "My Sister Eileen", Rosalind Russell and Brian Aherne, are happily together again in the gayest, sprightliest, most deliriously mad comedy to come along in years and years. It is Columbia's "What a Woman" which opened at the McCarthy Theatre today.

In this new one, Miss Russell undisputedly, America's most beloved screen comedienne, is a chic and beautiful career woman who is swell on the headwork but what she does not know about love causes some of the most deliriously funny moments of the picture. As Carol Ainsley, the smartest woman who never got kissed, she's a wizard at finding potential celebrities and making them actual celebrities, with their names ringing around the world, almost overnight; at ten per cent of course.

While seeking a magnificent specimen of a man to play the hero of "The Whirlwind", the sensational novel which she has sold to the movies at a series of big round figures, she conducts the merriest manhunt of the age and runs smack into the darndest situations. And when she catches her man, he catches on too fast, even for her.

The story opens at a fast pace, with Carol right in the middle of her hunt. Trailing her every step is a most annoying, albeit clever, gentleman by the name of Henry Pepper (Brian Aherne), who is the top writer on a magazine. Henry will have nothing to do with Miss Ainsley's prepared biography as material for his six-installment profile on the amazing career woman; he wants real inside dope, so he practically moves in on Carol. She emerges from her bath, there is Henry. She travels miles on a train, gets off at a deserted railway station, up pops Henry. And although Henry hates career women, particularly beautiful ones, he finds her excellent copy and he's a writer, above all.

Henry's curiosity in developing the other ninety per cent of this ten per cent woman is the thing that upsets Carol's well filled and shining apple cart. He talks the handsome but shy hero Carol has found for the screen version of "The Whirlwind" into a case of masterful love, with Carol as the recipient of the hero's sudden wolfish tendencies. Always the business woman, and intent upon upholding her reputation of delivering the goods and getting her ten per cent, she even promises to marry her find. Of course, she doesn't. The other ninety per cent woman suddenly crops up and she falls heart-over-head in love with her annoyer, Mr. Pepper.

Miss Russell is superb in the role of Carol Ainsley and Brian Aherne tops everything he's ever done on the screen. It's the wittiest role he's had and he handles it deftly. Willard Parker is a find for the "Whirlwind" assignment. "What a Woman" has the chic and smoothness of its star, the gorgeous Miss Russell.

AT THE CAPITOL

"WOMEN IN BONDAGE"

A startling drama, literally breath-taking in its revelations concerning conditions in present-day Germany, is promised in "Women In Bondage", the Monogram film which opens an engagement at the Capitol Theatre next.

Gail Patrick and Nancy Kelly are seen in the co-starring roles, heading an exceptional cast which includes Bill Henry, Tala Birell, Gertrude Michael, Alan Baxter, Rita Quigley, Maris Wrixon, Felix Basch, Anne Nagel, Mary Forbes, H. B. Warner and many other popular screen players.

The action of the story details the fiendish cruelties and the lowered standards of morality which have been forced on the women of the Reich under the Hitler regime, resulting in a complete breakup of family life as it affects the rising generations. During the progress of the story, both Miss Patrick and Miss Kelly resist the Nazi regime in differing ways, and both are made to suffer the cruel punishments of the ruthless Gestapo. The entire film constitutes a revealing expose of conditions which are little realized by the outside world.

"Women in Bondage" was directed by Steve Sekely, and the original story by Frank Bentick Wisbar was adapted for the screen by Houston Branch, Herman Millakowsky was the producer, with Jeffrey Bernerd as associate.

"Here Comes Kelly".

Talented players of highly diversified talents comprise the cast of "Here Comes Kelly", the hilarious Monogram comedy which comes to the Capitol Theatre next as the added hit. Featured in the company are Eddie Quillan, Joan Woodbury, "Slapsy Maxie" Rosenbloom and the "Mexican bombshell" Armida. Others in the big company of entertainers are Sidney Miller, Ian Keith, Mary Gordon, Dick Elliott, Sugar Geise, Charles Jordan and Emmett Vogan. William Beaudine directed for producer William T. Lackey, and the original story by Jeb Schary was adapted for the screen by Charles R. Marion.

The Canadian Universal news completes the two first run hits. A special matinee Wednesday at 2.15 will be held.

AT THE BELLE

"GOVERNMENT GIRL" FUNNY

Starring Olivia de Havilland and featuring the new "discovery" Sonny Tufts, RKO Radio's romantic comedy, "Government Girl", now on the Belle Theatre screen is said to be one of the most entertaining films of the season.

As the title implies, the plot deals with a Washington secretary. Assigned to a husky, go-getting dollar-a-year man who has been summoned to the capital to speed up the production of bombing planes, the girl has her hands full trying to guide her boss in the ways of politics, and the results are hilarious as well as dramatic.

The timely and sensational C.C.O. feature "Target Berlin", and the Canadian Paramount News will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE BELLE — But don't get the idea that Sonny Tufts, new male star sensation and Olivia deHavilland are like this all the way through the story of "Government Girl," which tells the hilarious story of Washington and its war-time atmosphere involving several romances. Anne Shirley and Jesse Barker are also featured in this gay entertainment.

Glen Thompson Heads Belleville Progressive Conservative Assoc.

Ex-Mayor Glencoe E. Thompson will guide the destinies of the Belleville Progressive Conservative Association for the ensuing year it was decided by members of the organization Friday evening when they met in the Front Street club rooms in their annual meeting and election of officers. Mr. Thompson succeeds Harold "Twig" Woodley, well-known furrier, who had occupied the presidency for the past year.

The entire slate of officers was elected at the meeting, many of last year's executive being returned, while others are accepting office for the first time. Views of many of the members regarding party organization and policy were heard while riding members of parliament cited their views of party policy.

R. D. Arnott, member of the Ontario Legislature for Hastings West, said that two very important matters will in all probability be brought before the Ontario House during the next session which opens next week. These matters were health and education, both of which he claimed should be within the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government.

Need State Hospitalization.

"We are long past the stage for some sort of state hospitalization," stated Mr. Arnott, indicating that under the present system the average person cannot hope to pay his own way if sickness results in lengthy hospitalization. "Modern hospitalization at very reasonable cost is the aim of the Progressive Conservative Government."

He maintained that if adequate hospitals with sufficient accommodation were provided, the people would not object to slight additional taxation. "I'm not preaching socialism, it is just common sense that such costs should come out of the public treasury."

Education should be controlled by the Federal Government with the same standards to apply in all provinces, according to Mr. Arnott. Children in all Canadian provinces should be instilled with the same love of country and pride of association with the British Commonwealth of Nations. Children should be trained to think and to have respect for law and order. Juvenile delinquency was on the increase but it could not be dealt with by dealing with isolated cases.

Teaching Profession Important.

The speaker claimed that proper education throughout Canada had been neglected for years. Emphasis must be placed upon youth as it was in youth where the wealth of the country lay. With children being sent to school in their formative years, the teaching profession was claimed to be the most important in the country today.

Hydro came in for a few words from Mr. Arnott who asserted that although there will be a surplus of power in the post-war period, there will not be enough for the great development which is expected for Ontario. Extension of rural hydro development would be of great benefit and would be good business. Extension of the rural system was now taking place as a means to assist in farm production. It was hoped that Ontario would be able to catch up on the province of Quebec from an industrial standpoint. "This will require power", he said, "and it is the intention to develop this power in Ontario".

Referring to the Col. Drew's 22-point program the speaker asserted the Progressive Conservatives had been elected to office on their promises of good sound business administration. There had been amazement from many quarters that immediate steps had been made by Premier Drew to implement his election promises.

Mr. George H. Stokes, member for the Federal House, told Association members that the Progressive Conservatives were constantly stepping up their party organization in riding in which they had no representation. He referred to the C.C.F. leader Mr. Coldwell and claimed statements made by him and his speakers were often at variance. "The C.C.F. speakers talk of something for everybody, but nothing of the incentive to go ahead and develop the natural resources of the country. When this is done all problems will be cured".

Mr. George Reid paid tribute to the Progressive Conservative national leader, Mr. Bracken, claiming that he was really working in an effort to find out what the people wanted. He saw Mr. Bracken as the next premier of Canada, and one who would get results. Canada should be a country of 50 millions of population, he said.

Hydro for Rural Users.

Brief reference to Hydro was also made by Mr. Reid. He claimed that for which he himself had worked for many years—abolishment of the service charge and levelling of the rates for rural users—had now been done by the Drew Government. Much was now being done to get the Hydro to the farmer and Mr. Reid saw universal use of power by the rural user as meaning millions of dollars of commercial business to the cities. They would require electrical equipment of all kinds and this in turn would create work for urban citizens.

Dr. J. W. Kinnear held that one great trouble with Canada today was the fact that voters were not getting out to vote. In view of the present troublesome times he asserted people should become more interested in what goes on. It would be a calamity if politicians with radical views were allowed to upset the present economical system he said. In reference to the C.C.F. Party and its leader, Mr. Coldwell, Dr. Kinnear asserted that alert business men were needed to govern the country.

Compliments Past President.

Past President Harold Woodley came in for a compliment when Jamieson Bone spoke a few words to the meeting. He congratulated Mr. Woodley for the efficient manner in which he had conducted the affairs of the Association during the past year and indicated he was sorry that he was not taking an active part in the executive this year. More young men were needed in the association, he said.

Mr. Bone foresaw an election this year and stated that it would be an important election. The Progressive Conservatives had made real progress during the past year. He announced his intention of offering himself as a candidate at the nomination for the next federal election.

Other members to speak briefly were Raymond Zufelt, Col. A. P. Allin, Harold Woodley, Mayor Harry Rollins, Chas. Hyde, Frank Potter, R. D. Ketcheson and the various ward chairmen.

Officers Elected.

Officers elected at the meeting included Frank Cushing and Jamieson Bone as vice presidents, with Kenneth Hill being named as secretary treasurer, and Chas. Hyde and Ray Arnott as auditors. Honorary presidents named were R. D. Arnott and George H. Stokes.

Ward chairmen named were: Foster, Herb Collins; Sampson, R. Arnott; Ketcheson, Chas. L. Hyde; Baldwin, Bruce Simpson; Coleman, J. McCluskey; Bleecker, J. Alexander; Murney, Cecil Fralick. Dr. J. W. Kinnear acted as chairman for the election of officers with Arthur L. Burke as secretary.

Letters Express Appreciation For Ditty Bags

Trenton, Special — The local Daughters of England have had two most interesting letters recently from lads in the service who received ditty bags which they sent out just before Christmas. These letters make one feel that even such a small service as filling a ditty bag is giving very definite pleasure to some lad in the service and helping him to go about his daily tasks with a feeling that those at home are doing their part to make life just a little more pleasant and comfortable for him.

Both letters are from lads in the Merchant Navy, one the Canadian branch and the other the U. S. A. Jimmy Couey, the American writes inpart "This is meant to be just a "thank you" note for the ditty bag I received as a Christmas present from the Daughters of England, of your city. But actually it is much more than just "thank you" it is the gratitude which comes from my heart—if you could only realize how very, very much it meant to me. My eyes began to water and I felt myself choking up. It was a present from Heaven for a fellow a long way from home, a guy who isn't used to being away from good ole "Georgia" on that Day of Days "December 25th." Yes, I'm from the U. S. A., my home is in Georgia. I am serving in the Merchant Marine of my country doing my best to help get all this over with so I can return home and so your loved ones may also return. Little deeds like yours bring us all closer together in the Western Hemisphere. You included in your present everything useful and I spent many minutes just fingering the gifts wondering how nice you people must be.

The Canadian, Leslie Burritt, writes from Halifax, "Your wonderful ditty bag was just like an answer to a prayer. You know sometimes you want something very much, and you don't know how you are going to get it and you ask God to help you, and then when you get it, you thank Him."

It is most encouraging for those on the home front to receive such grateful letters, and it is the desired means of spurring them on to more service for those who are giving their all in the gigantic struggle through which all are passing.

CHAPTER 15

A sudden thought flashed through Tony's mind. Could it have been Mrs. Bradford whose voice he had heard on that dictograph record? Had the wife of the perfect husband been giving him the runaround?

Schneider was sipping his brandy thoughtfully.

"That was an interesting story that Terry boy told you," he said at last, "but there's one thing I've been wondering about. It seems to me that when McKibben saw that unknown coming toward him from the bathroom with a gun in his hand, he'd have said something, or the murderer would have said something. Didn't Terry hear any sound at all?"

"Yes, he heard something," Tony answered, "but he couldn't be sure what it was. Just a word or two, he says, that sounded like 'Oh, hush'!"

"'Oh, hush!' eh?" Schneider repeated. "I don't see how that makes any sense."

"Neither do I," Tony agreed.

"Was it McKibben said it?"

"Terry wasn't sure who said it. He had never heard McKibben's voice. Naturally he assumed it was McKibben since he didn't know there was anyone else in the flat."

"It's an interesting point," said Schneider, and finished his brandy. "If I were you, Tony, I'd turn the heat on Metcalf when you see him tomorrow. He's your best bet. Now I've got to be going."

"So have I," said Tony. "You've been very helpful, Herschel. You never fail me."

"I'm always interested in this this sort of thing, you know," and Schneider rose to his feet. "I'll be curious to hear what Metcalf tells you."

"I'll give you a ring," Tony promised.

Max's place was crowded, as usual, and the first person Tony saw was Lily Edgerton. She was dining with Rhino. She was very animated and waved gaily to Tony. He couldn't help smiling as he returned the wave. She had managed to fix things up, then. Rhino, to be sure, looked rather glum—perhaps he felt the shades of the prison house closing about him again, but anyway there he was. A triumph for Lily.

At the next table was Allan Guthrie, also with his wife, both of them quite gay and apparently enjoying each other's company. Guthrie was looking much less worried than when Tony had seen him last. Almost placid, in fact. Maybe he had been scared enough to go straight for a while.

Further along was a third couple whom Tony didn't know—middle-aged, prosperous-looking, and with eyes for nobody but each other. They were not habitues—Tony was sure he had never seen them there before.

"Most of them are drinking wine," Tony pointed out.

"But not enough of it. Take Lily and Rhino over there—they've had one bottle. With anybody else they'd have had three. They've made it up, you know. Say, that was a low-down dig of yours about death softening all resentments!—and Guthrie isn't going to be sued this time, so he's watching his step. I don't know why the Bradfords stopped in. Maybe it was on your account. They're sailing for Europe in a couple of days, and it might be they'd like you to say something about it."

"Is that Stuyvesant Bradford?" and Tony looked at the man again. "He's the one who called McKibben a swine Monday night, isn't he?"

"There's no keeping anything from you," Max conceded.

"I wonder why?"

"I don't know that, but I suspect that McKibben had been dishing out some dirt. Bradford is just a sort of tame rabbit usually, but he sees red where his wife is concerned."

"No keeping anything from you," either, apparently," smiled Tony.

"I've got to know where I am," said Max. "One thing I don't mind confessing—I'm glad I'm not going to be bothered with McKibben any more."

"Maybe you killed him," Tony suggested. "The police have been looking for somebody with a real hot motive."

"I had the motive all right," and Max passed on.

Tony took a sip of his Carnera. Could it be, he asked himself again that it was Mrs. Bradford's voice he had heard down there in McKibben's office? There was only one way to find out, so he paid his check and started to leave. At Bradford's table he paused for a moment.

"Good evening, Mr. Bradford," he said. "I hear you are going abroad. I'm Tony Bigelow of The Record."

"Of course," answered Bradford cordially. "You're one of the sights of New York. Yes, Mrs. Bradford and I are sailing Saturday on the Rex. Josephine, this is Anthony Bigelow—'All Around the Town,' you know."

"I read it every day," said Mrs. Bradford, as Tony bowed. "I don't know how I'm going to get along without it."

"I'll have to have the paper sent after us," said Bradford.

"Thank you," said Tony. "You're taking the baby along, of course?"

"Of course," Mrs. Bradford nodded. "We wouldn't think of leaving him. He's nearly two years old. We are not going to travel very much—just going to settle down at Monte for a month or two."

"I hope you have a lovely time," said the columnist as he left.

Tony's heart was beating a trifle faster than usual. There could be no doubt about it—it was Mrs. Bradford's voice which had spoken from that record in McKibben's office. Just the same, he was puzzled. She was rather pale and thin, as though recovering from a long illness, but she was looking extraordinarily happy for a woman on the verge of a scandal.

Two hours later he was putting the finishing touches to his column after writing out for Garrity the news story of the interview with Lawrence Terry's children in the cottage at Mount Vernon, together with a reconstruction of the crime itself along the lines suggested by Herschel Schneider. He pulled the last sheet of paper from his machine and read over what he had written. The concluding paragraphs ran as follows:

Max's Goes Mid-Victorian:—At Max's last night: Rhino Edgerton dining with Lily, both seemingly well satisfied with the status quo. Allan Guthrie tete-a-tete with the recently-acquired Mrs. G., happy to have convinced another lady that he had never mentioned anything as serious as matrimony. Stuyvesant Bradford, before whose conjugal fidelity even night-club gossip is helpless, squiring the fascinating brunette, Mrs. B., whose lovely contralto is one of her greatest attractions. The Bradfords are sailing Saturday on the Rex for a whirl at the International Sporting Club, and are, of course, taking two-year-old Stuyvesant II along. They have reason to be proud of him, for he is growing handsomer and more like his father every day.

Hush, Hush in the McKibben Case:—Your columnist was present yesterday afternoon when handsome and impulsive young Franklin Terry explained to Jim Duffy, of the homicide squad, how he happened to be present in Jack McKibben's apartment early Tuesday morning when Broker Jack was shot through the heart by some person as yet unknown. Terry admitted that he had gone there to do the job himself but somebody beat him to it. Perhaps McKibben got what he deserved, but why did he cry "Oh, hush!" just before he was shot? Or did the murderer say it? And can it be that the murderer also lives in Central Park West?

A little before two o'clock the next afternoon—which was Thursday, April 14, and a warm, showery day—Anthony Bigelow left the elevator at the seventh floor of the Central Park West apartment house and paused before the door of apartment 710. Beside it was a small brass plate with the words "Jerome Metcalf, M.D., Psychotherapist," engraved upon it. The door was open and Tony stepped inside with the feeling that he was entering a lion's den. Or perhaps the den of a beast much less noble than the lion.

The room was empty except for a very attractive dark-haired girl who was seated at a desk near one of the windows, typing cards. She looked up as he entered and Tony walked toward her, reflecting that Dr. Metcalf had an unusually excellent taste in secretaries. She had dark eyes and the lustrous ivory skin with a flush of color running under it which one sees among the Latin races.

"Is Dr. Metcalf in?" Tony asked.

"Have you an appointment, sir?"

"No, I haven't an appointment," he said.

"Dr. Metcalf never sees any patient without an appointment. I will make one for you, if you wish," randum book from the desk beside her.

"But you see I'm not a patient," said Tony. "Here is my card. I'll detain him only a few minutes."

She took the card and glanced at it and then looked a little curiously at the tall, slender man smiling down at her from the other side of the desk. She didn't smile back exactly, but there was a little shimmer in her eyes which was much nicer. She was about twenty, the columnist thought. What a shame that she had to spend her days cooped up here. . . .

"I don't know whether Dr. Metcalf is in," she said. "His consultations do not begin until 2:30."

"If he hasn't arrived, I'll wait," Tony assured her cheerfully. "I can't think of any pleasanter way of spending a half hour."

"I'm afraid you would find it dull just sitting here, sir," she said coldly. "If you will tell me why you wish to see Dr. Metcalf, I will find out if he is in."

"I'd like to see him on a news matter concerning him," he explained.

She looked doubtfully for an instant, then rose and went to an inner door, tapped upon it, opened it and passed through, closing it carefully behind her. So Dr. Metcalf was in!

Tony glanced at the machine she had been using. It was a Remington, not an Underwood. The card in the machine, he saw, contained a report of one of the doctor's cases.

The inner door opened and the girl stood on the threshold. "Dr. Metcalf will see you, sir," she said. "Come this way, please," and she motioned him into the inner room and closed the door after him.

Seated at a large square desk facing the door was a striking looking man perhaps forty years of age, with black hair and a short, carefully-trained black beard, which only partially concealed a pair of very full red lips. There was something exotic about him—Greek? One of those little Balkan states? Tony couldn't decide. He had a copy of the noon edition of The Record in one hand and Tony's card in the other.

"How are you, Mr. Bigelow?" he said. "I am Dr. Metcalf. I was expecting you," he added, with a smile.

"Expecting me?" Tony echoed.

"Yes. As soon as I read your column just now I knew you would be around. It's the McKibben case, isn't it?"

NO STATISTICS GIVEN

Washington, Feb. 19 — (CP) — Navy Secretary Knox reported yesterday that in "the last few months" the United Nations have been sinking "four or five times" as much merchant tonnage as they have been losing. He did not give any statistics.

100 of Canada's Fighting Airmen Back in Canada

Ottawa, Feb. 19 (CP).—Approximately 100 of Canada's fighting airmen from the far corners of the world arrived back here Friday—some to recuperate from wounds, others to become instructors and the remainder to remuster as aircrew men.

All of them, starting leave as soon as they pass through the repatriation pool here, will be on their way to homes throughout Canada tonight and tomorrow.

Included were men from Ceylon, West Africa, North Africa and Britain. They were greeted by cheers as they strode into the station concourse to the accompaniment of an R.C.A.F. band. Official welcome was given by high military and civic officials and then they were handed coffee and doughnuts.

FO. Keith Wilson of Carleton Place, Ont., who served with an R.A.F. Mitchell Squadron, brought first hand news of the damage being done to the invasion coast of France. That has been his job for the last few months "and I can assure you we have been giving that area an awful plastering and it should be nice and soft when General Eisenhower and the lads land there one of these days."

Flt. Lt. Ralph Rawland of Hamilton, Ont., reported on the activities of his British coastal Beaufighter squadron. When he left it a few weeks ago it, too, was "plastering" the French coast, concentrating on enemy shipping "and we aren't giving them much chance to move either." Most of the harbors along the enemy coast were filled with wrecks resulting from British and Canadian bombs.

Another general topic among the airmen he knew, he said, was post-war rehabilitation and they all wondered what Canada was going to offer in the way of jobs. "For myself, I'd like to be a newspaper man and I'm just wondering what opportunities will be open for me when we get this war cleaned up decisively," he added.

Jack, back to become an instructor after a tour of 30 operational trips, has been on recent Berlin raids and said: "This target is just about cleaned up and we can go on to another."

Wing Cmdr. E. R. Emond, O.B.E., of Ottawa, was one of the survivors of the Empress of Canada, torpedoed off Freetown, West Africa, a year ago with the loss of 400 lives.

FO. P. S. Gravel of Casselman, Ont., a flight engineer with a coastal command squadron operating in North Africa, had 470 operational hours to his credit and in that time saw an "awful lot of damage done to the enemy in one way and another."

H. McKeig New Supervisor of 'Y' War Services

The War Services branch of the Y.M.C.A. in Belleville has changed supervisors in the last week with Mr. Harold McKeig taking over as supervisor from Ron Hupfield, erstwhile popular and genial guide of the activities of this branch. Mr. McKeig, or Harold as he is known to his friends and to the many persons he will be associated with in the future in the city, came to Belleville from Pendleton, where he was in charge of "Y" activities at the E.F.T.S. of the R.C.A.F. in that locality. Prior to his posting to Pendleton he was supervisor at R.C.A.F. Station, Rockcliffe, and with this much experience in the handling of entertainment for servicemen and servicewomen behind him, the prospects for an active season may be anticipated by the personnel of the several air stations in and around Belleville.

Harold has been closely associated with Y.M.C.A. work for several years, having taken active part in all phases of the work even while not on the actual payroll of the Association. He has been a school teacher in the High Schools at Galt where he was born and educated, and was in business in Toronto for some time. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Toronto, attended McMaster University at Pendleton as well as McGill University for one year. A few years older than his immediate predecessor, Ron, Harold McKeig is married and has brought his wife to Belleville with him to assist with the work he will be doing. Mrs. McKeig, nee Martha Barr of Toronto, was one time closely connected with the Anglican Young People's Club of that city, and the West Toronto Council. She was employed by the Confederation Life Company for several years. She as well as Mr. McKeig, are looking forward to establishing many personal contacts and making many friends in the city.

Mr. McKeig said that he would look over the local situation before making any changes and will carry on for the winter months with the program already set out by Ron Hupfield. He declared it too early to make any statement about plans for Spring. Early in the week Mr. McKeig was presented to the Kiwanis Club at their regular Tuesday luncheon, and to the girls of the Red Triangle Hostess Club at their formal dance held in the Trianon Ballroom last Monday night. Both Mr. and Mrs. McKeig remarked on the splendid management of the dance and the appearance of the girls and their guests. The prospect for the future during their tenure in Belleville is very attractive to the couple with the one exception, a problem which is faced by nearly every newcomer to the city, that of finding suitable living accommodations. "We are living in one room out of a suitcase right now", Mrs. McKeig remarked as she drafted out an ad to be inserted in the paper relative to apartments, "but that is war work", she said almost ruefully.

TOSSED RIGHT BACK AGAIN

Exeter, Feb. 19—(CP)— Washed overboard by a huge wave in the North Atlantic, OS. Raymond Higgins, 19, was saved by what he calls "a one-in-a-1,000,000 chance" for life when another giant wave tossed him back aboard his Royal Canadian Navy vessel.

THROUGH THE DIAL SIGHT

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

One of the outstanding values of Reserve Army training—that of giving young men the rudiments of army training prior to their enlistment with the active forces—has been demonstrated in connection with the local 34th Battery, R.C.A., recently, the unit having lost four of its members via the active services route. Three of the boys went into the R.C.N.V.R., while the other showed a preference for army life.

The boys' names are Bdr. H. Mills, Gnr. E. L. Bradshaw and Gnr. J. Forester, all of whom went into the navy, while Gnr. C. Clubine donned the khaki of the army services.

All of these boys have had valuable training with the local 34th Battery unit, training which will serve them in good stead in discharging their duties as members of the active services. Undoubtedly the training they have received with the local reserve unit will pay dividends by comparatively rapid advancement in the ranks.

* * *

With members constantly leaving the ranks for active service, additional recruits are always welcomed into the unit, according to Commanding Officer, Captain Steve Sword. Within the past week two local men have been added to the strength of the local Battery as recruits.

* * *

At the regular Friday evening training date, members of the local Battery were given instruction and lectures on ordnance equipment by Ordnance Officers from Barriefield at Kingston. All members of the unit listened in at the lectures and heard valuable pointers on the handling and operation of the artillery equipment used in modern warfare.

* * *

Taking advantage of this week's snow the Argyll ski troopers were out in full force and virture under Sergts. Sammy Goodman and Jack Murphy on Tuesday night. The troops had plenty of snow to negotiate, but still there is a need for experienced ski instructors. Any applications? Incidentally the officers and N.C.O.'s will ski practice on Sunday.

A military Mechanical Transport Training program was opened at the Armouries this week with Sergt. Don Brown as chief instructor. The classes include expert driving as well as the care and maintenance of all trucks, carriers and track vehicles.

Members of the Light Aid Detachment from M. D. No. 3 at Kingston inspected all mechanized equipment at the Armouries this week and ordered what repairs necessary.

The Argylls are making preparations for their gala spring indoor carnival next month. Lieut. O. A. Lloyd has been named chairman of the carnival committee with the following daily chairmen: Lieut. Marvell, Lieut. Shapiro, Sergt.-Maj. Schwab and Sergt. B. Lattimer.

Sergt.-Major Charlie Holmes of the A. & T. Staff, reported back for duty after an attack of sciatica, that placed him in Kingston Military Hospital for treatment.

* * *

Officer — "Did you shave this morning?"

Sergt. Ellary — "Yes, Sir."

Officer — "Well, next time stand closer to the razor."

* * *

New WAC (stepping up to sergeant) — Where do we WACS eat?

Sergeant — You mess with the soldiers.

New WAC — I know that, but where do I eat?

* * *

* * *

Sergt.-Major Jeffery, past president of the Sergeants' Mess, left for home (England) recently. Members of the Argyll unit hope to hear from "Jeff" and perhaps see him after the present struggle has been won. Incidentally Sergt.-Major Jeffery came to Canada from the British Entomological Bureau for research work following the 1940 "blitz." A veteran of the last war and a former Imperial soldier "Jeff" left a lot of friends in Belleville.

* * *

On Thursday night the Argyll Battalion under Major B. C. Sisler, paraded to the Hume Arena to take in the Air Force doubleheader of Service League Hockey. As it was the conventional sports night of the month the Sergeants' Mess footed the financial bill for admittance of all ranks. For good measure the Garrison Mess kicked in with $25.00 towards the outfitting of H.M.C.S. Corvette "Belleville."

* * *

Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan announced publicly this week that 25 percent of the proceeds taken at the forthcoming gala Argyll indoor carnival at the Armouries next month will be given to the support of the corvette "Belleville." With such incentive the officers and men of the Battalion are going all-out to push the show and guarantee the public the greatest indoor carnival of the times.

* * *

Glad to welcome back home Sergt. Art Hobbs, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and former member of the Argyll Light Infantry during peacetime. Sergt. Hobbs has crossed the briny Atlantic on several occasions during the present conflict being an old soldier of the last war.

* * *

An officer had dictated a letter to a C.W.A.C. stenographer in which the words "intelligence officer" were used twice. The stenographer not used to army titles, typed "intelligent officer."

The officer who had dictated the letter roared at the little stenographer: "Look at this! Whoever heard of an intelligent officer?"

* * *

No Man's Land . . .

To supplement the district C.W.A.C. it has been proposed to form a mobile recruiting program with headquarters at Kingston. The local C.W.A.C. office will benefit by the proposed program. With the Bridge Street office completed in every respect for recruiting purposes enquiries for information regarding enlistments in the C.W.A.C. are increasing, according to Cpl. Lois Pilkington. This office is open Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings to give information to interested girls.

Major Marion Harden, of the C.W.S.F., acknowledged the receipt of $10 from E. D. Mott to be applied to the fund providing necessities for the unit's adopted "H" Troop in Italy.

* * *

Wednesday night was sports night for the C.W.S.F. lassies when bowling and basketball were enjoyed, while a week from Sunday a band concert will be presented by the unit in the Armouries with the crack Trenton R.C.A.F. band of entertainers being featured.

* * *

Mose, an enlisted man, shivered as he paced his sentry beat on an Alaska airfield. A passing officer noticed him. "Mose," said the officer, "where are you from?"

"Ah's from Alabama, Sah," said Mose, "but when we wups de Japs an' Ah gets back der, Ah ain't nevah gwine be from dar no mo'."

* * *

Reichmarshal Goering, according to a Swedish correspondent, is still German photographers' favorite subject. Naturally, he does away with the whole problem of background.

* * *

"Beer," an authority on such matters declares, "should be drunk with 'greater dignity.'" For the first couple of hours anyway.

* * *

A young woman, her mother, an Italian officer, and a Nazi trooper were in an Italian train. It came to a tunnel. As soon as darkness enveloped the compartment, a kiss was heard — followed by a hard slap.

When the train emerged into the sunlight, the passengers' thoughts were these:

(1) The Nazi: "Those mad, romantic Latins. How dare he kiss that girl. How cowardly, to try it only in the dark."

(2) The Girl: "The nerve of him, trying to kiss my mother. I'm glad she was able to defend herself."

(3) The Mother: "So they'd kiss my daughter, eh? Well, I brought her up properly, and I'm glad she took proper action."

(4) The Italian: "It was worth kissing my hand, just for the opportunity of slapping that German."

EISENHOWER HONORED BY RUSSIA

London, Feb. 19—(CP)— Russia has awarded Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of the Allied invasion forces, the Order of Suvorov, first class, the Moscow radio said last night. The order is the highest military award given by Russia and was presented to Premier Marshal Stalin June 11.

How to Look 'Dewy' From Out of a Box

Written for The Ottawa Journal by G. Stuart

Today I glanced through one of the popular women's magazines—one with a circulation which must mean the annual consumption of thousands upon thousands of cords of Canadian pulpwood—and I found it a highly disillusioning experience. My disillusionment had nothing to do with the quality of the fiction or the articles in the magazine, for I didn't get that far. It was the advertisements that did it.

Until today I harbored the impression that the beauty of so many of the girls of Ottawa and the glamor that attached to them was attributable primarily to the fact that they had fine-looking mothers and, then, to the bracing quality of our climate, the beauty of our scenery, the purity of our water supply and all the other attributes which our city possesses in abundance.

But after reading the advertisements I am not so certain, for beauty, it seems, can be acquired very easily. A single bath with a certain soap, the correct shampoo, a dab of the right powder, a touch of the recommended lipstick and the drabest of girls becomes a stunning beauty. Add a certain face cream, a special hand lotion and a touch of the right perfume and she is irresistible.

• •

The only difficulty about the whole business is the fact that the field is not narrowed down to a single type of soap or lotion. The girls have to make a selection and, from the build-up given to the contending beautifiers, a choice would be no easy matter.

Take, for instance, the question of soap. There is one brand whose promises are comparatively simple. "Wishing for a skin that sparkles with new loveliness — that's softer, smoother to touch?" it asks. An answer isn't necessary for the means of acquiring such a skin are concisely given. "It's yours with one cake of ——, your very first cake."

There is another whose promises are vastly more lavish than the pre-election pledges of the most optimistic of politicians. They run like this:

"Young lady, you may well expect to be kissed when your skin has this fragrant allure. For here is one soap that actually gives your skin a bouquet — adorns it with a haunting fragrance that whispers to others, 'She's an exciting girl.'

"So bathe tonight with —— soap. Caress each curve of your body with its fragrant luxury lather. See your skin reflect a glowing new, lovelier tone as staleness quickly departs. Then step from your bath sweet and radiant, your skin adorned with an exciting bouquet that will make you a woman daintily desirable."

If Cleopatra had only known of a soap such as that!

• •

In the line of creams you may choose the brand which is advertised in this manner:

"Martha —— has a fair-skinned, golden loveliness. Her wide-apart eyes are deep amethyst blue, her hair a glinting red-gold, and her complexion has that sweet, soft-smooth look you notice about so many girls who care for their faces with —— cream."

On the other hand, you may go for this sort of thing:

"A foundation cream that lets you remain as well groomed as you were when you left your dressing table, gives you a dewy, luminous look, conceals blemishes and fine lines, holds your powder firm and even all day long."

Yes, that may appeal to you but personally that "dewy, luminous" business sounds too much like the description of a luminous-dialed watch that has been left out all night.

• •

Powder and lipstick are easier. The powder which is described in the following manner seems to have no near competitors:

"Yes, you can give your natural beauty new glamor, new loveliness in just a few seconds — and you will be utterly amazed and thrilled with the transformation. —— Make-up imparts a lovely new complexion smooth as a pearl and flawless — and it stays on for hours without repowdering."

The lipstick which comes up to the following specifications seems to be alone in its field, too:

"He was enchanted by her fresh young beauty the first time he saw her. And even after the lieutenant had see her many times, he was always stirred by her soft, provocative lips. Give your lips a pleasing lustre with famous —— lipstick."

The selection of hand lotions is more difficult and if you think there is no romance in the chasers of dishpan hands, just read this:

"Then your hand brushed against mine. 'Such a soft little hand,' you whispered. And then you told me you loved me. Would you have told me, then, dear, if my hand had felt rough? I'd always used —— lotion."

Or this:

"It was one of those golden, delirious moments — impulsively his hand sought mine — and together we welcomed the first tender touch of romance." The reader was then urged to "Give your hands more Romance-Appeal."

On second thought, though, there can be no question of the hand lotion of your choice. The second one only leads you to the "first tender touch of romance," while the first one follows through until the "I love you" stage is reached, a definite sales point, for anyone knows that the path between those two milestones is sometimes strewn with barriers.

And then the perfume. Ah, yes, the perfume.

"She loves ——, the perfume that whispers 'love me'—witchery in fragrance—to quicken the pulse and lift the heart."

But wait a moment. Get a whiff of this before you decide.

"——, known the world over as the perfume that seems to never quite leave whatever it touches. Haunts forever whatever comes near it. The 'forbidden' perfume by ——."

There is only a single discordant note in the whole array of advertisements but it is a serious one for, after learning of the desirability of beauty and the ease with which it can be acquired, we are told that it doesn't matter, isn't worth bothering about. A toothpaste ad dispels our delusions with these few terse sentences:

"Do you need beauty to win hearts? Not at all. Look at the popular girls about you. Few can claim real beauty. But they all know how to smile."

The let-down is terrific.

Orinoco River's Headwaters Found By U.S. Airmen

Georgetown, British Guiana, Feb. 18, (CP-Reuters) — United States many flyers from the British Guinea base command have located headwaters of the $1,500-mile Orinoco River, thus ending the search for one of the last prizes in the geographical field.

The source of the river is in a mountain gorge in the junge separating Venezuela and Brazil. The discovery is of considerable importance owing to an agreement setting the boundary of the two countries as the mountain range constituting the watershed of the Amazon and Orinoco Rivers. As a result the boundry will be moved east affecting 1,000 square miles of territory. Each country will take land from the other and also lose some.

Indian Division Now Receiving Base Supplies

Calcutta, Feb. 18 (CP)—The 7th Indian division composed of men from all parts of India who for the past two weeks have been all but cut off from their supply base in Burma received assistance today.

A fresh column of British troops was thrown into the "battle for Ngakyedauk Pass," where the 7th Indian division has been fighting on all sides against the Japanese. More than 1,000 of the enemy have been killed attempting to close the Allied supply road through that Mayu mountain ridge gap on the Arakan front.

The Japanese died while trying to crack the "box" defence tactics employed by the Indian troops east of the mountain pass. On every side they ran into a wall of concentrated machine-gun fire.

Front dispatches said they attacked repeatedly to fall back only when the Indians counter-attacked.

An East Asia command communique issued in New Delhi said Allied forces were making steady progress on all sectors of the Akaran front.

Bitter Fighting Rages.

Bitter fighting was also raging west of the Mayu range, but Allied artillery routed several enemy detachments from positions in that sector the communique said. Allied tank-supported infantry operating east of the mountains advanced and occupied a Japanese-held village, but another Allied column pushing down from the north was halted by heavy enemy fire.

Dispatches from Thoburn Wiant, Associated Press correspondent in northern Burma said Chinese troops who have been victorious in 27 of 30 offensive actions during the past 3 1-2 months, out-manoeuvred the enemy in the jungle eight miles south of Taipha Ga to occupy a village on the western edge of the Hukawng Valley. Another settlement north of Taipha Ga was also captured by the Chinese.

Mrs. Newgarden's body was found last Sunday in an unoccupied house near her home in the Pine Acres Federal Housing project. She had been strangled.

James L. Carroll, assistant detective chief in Buffalo, said the suspect had a paid of greasy gloves. The officer quoted him as saying he went to Niagara Falls with a construction gang Feb. 3, and had left his job Wednesday.

Niagara Falls police theorized that the killer wore gloves which were greasy or oil-stained. There were several dark blotches on the right side of the victim's neck.

Professional Gamblers Know Their Match

(By H. F. A. in Windsor Star)

What makes it possible for gambling houses to make big money and corrupt city administrations in order to keep going in defiance of law is because the operators know their mathematics and their patrons no doubt. In dice, for instance, the odds are always against the player. He may have a run of luck and win. But in the end he will lose, largely because he cannot or does not figure the odds correctly, and the professional gamblers do.

There are, of course, other factors, like loaded dice and various methods of cheating at cards that make it hard for the individual to beat a gambling house. But, in the main, the professionals do not have to resort to such methods. They can be honest and always win from a mass of individual players because, in the long run, dice will fall according to a pattern of the frequency with which the required combinations can be made.

According to this pattern, 2's and 12's are the most infrequent combinations of the 36 which can be made with a pair of dice. Two can be made just one way, with the ones showing on both of the dice, and likewise the 12; nothing will make it but a pair of sixes.

Two Ways Each

Three and 11 can be made in two ways each, for the three, 1 and 2 and 2 and 1, and for the 11, 6 and 5 and 5 and 6. Possible combinations to make nine or five run up to four. Eight and six can be made in five ways each. Seven is the most frequent combination to come up, as it may be made in six different ways with a pair of dice. From the frequency of these combinations the odds can be figured out. But, according to John Scarne who is the adviser on gambling for the United States Army's paper "Yank", the correct odds are not the ones which prevail in dice games patronized by soldiers. And, to judge from the profits which are rolled up in gambling houses, they do not prevail there either, for, if the correct odds were given and there was no cheating with crooked dice, the gambling house would come out exactly even after a great number of plays, with nothing left for expenses or a profit.

That this is true can be proved by experiment. Take six pennies, shake them up well and toss them, say, 600 times and keep a record of heads and tails for each toss. Or you can spin a single coin, keeping a record of heads and tails in groups of six.

The odds that a coin will fall heads or tails are exactly one to one for one toss. But the chances that there will be one head and five tails in a group of six tosses are hardly to be compared with those of getting three heads and three tails, for the first may be made in six ways and the latter in 20.

This writer once tried a large number of single tosses in groups of six and found that the record was, in the end, very close to the mathematical pattern and that it would have been closer, had more throws been recorded. And this was true in spite of the fact that the coin once came up tails 15 times in a row, thus putting an unduly large number of groups in the hard to make or "lucky" pattern. This pattern the mathematicians call the binomial distribution, for the frequencies go according to the coefficients of the binomial expansion to a power equal to the number of group. These co-efficients are for six groups, 1, 6, 15, 20, 15, 6 and 1. The two ones represent all heads or all tails and the 20 the most frequent group, three heads and three tails.

The House's Side

So much for the house's side of a gambling enterprise, which always has this mathematical law to back it up, and by varying the true odds a bit, can make a steady profit.

According to Mr. Scarne, the player who bucks a gambling game takes from five to 10 per cent the worst of it every time he plays. He is in the position of accepting 91 cents every time he wins and paying out a dollar every time he loses. If he plays long enough, he is sure to go broke, with the bank winning, not because the game is crooked but because no bank could make a profit if the odds were in accordance with the mathematical pattern.

Mr. Scarne says that when a soldier takes the usual even-money bet that he can throw an 8 with the dice, he is cheating himself as much as if he were playing against loaded dice. The proper odds for throwing an 8 and six to five.

Again when the bet is even that a 6 will be thrown the player who bets that way will be taking a beating of 9 1/11 per cent, or about 45 cents on five dollars. Here again the odds are six to five.

In his advice to soldier gamblers, Mr. Scarne points out that if there are only two players in a game, one a steady shooter and one a steady fader, the shooter will go broke in the long run. The shooter has a disadvantage of about 1.414 per cent as soon as he is faded, about seven cents the worst of it on every five-dollar bet.

In another instance the player who accepts 7 to 1 odds that he can make 4 the hard way (2 and 2) is taking 11 1/9 per cent the worst of it, or about 56 cents on every five dollars bet. The same holds true for 10 the hard way (5 and 5.)

A "Lucky" Player

Showing how these percentages work against the individual player Mr. Scarne has worked out the following example of a "lucky" player:

This player bets even money on a 6 and wins. On a second throw he bets the 2 and wins and for the third throw he bets the 4 and again wins, continuing his run of luck, he bets the 8 and wins again. He now has $16 and is quite happy, but Mr. Scarne points out that he is exactly $7.42 short, as if he had received the correct odds—6 to 5—he would have had $23.42.

Mr. Scarne says that there are plenty of dice hustlers in and around army camps who can earn from $500 to $1,000 a month just by hustling sixes and eights. They wait for sixes and eights and then bet the sucker even money. Of course the sucker losses and the hustler wins because he is working on odds that are loaded in his favor.

Yank's gambling adviser says that crap players should do a little mathematics, work out charts for themselves and then memorize the correct odds, accepting no bets unless they are in accordance with the charts.

If everybody did this, the big dice games would have to go out of business or have resource to crooked dice or other games with the same combination of odds in the bank's favor.

U.S. 2000-PLANE ARMADA STRIKES N.W. GERMANY

Fourth Huge Raid Follows Night Blow Against Stuttgart

Day Attack Sunday Knocks Out Fourth Of Nazi Fighter Plane Production

LEIPZIG HIT HARD

By GLADWIN HILL
( Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 21 (AP) — United States heavy bombers dealt the Nazi home front its fourth great aerial blow in 36 hours by bombarding Northwest Germany today a few hours after the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. had hammered Stuttgart on the southwest border.

Today's American force was officially announced as "approximating" the size of the record 2,000-plan armada which struck Leipzig and other key German centres in daylight Sunday, attesting the United States air force's growing strength. The bomber section probably again approached the 1,000-plane figure, with an additional 1,000 escorting fighters.

Exact Target Not Disclosed

The exact target was not announced immediately.

At the same time U.S. medium bombers hit the Coxyde airbase in Belgium.

Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the United States Army Air Forces, declared a fourth of German fighter production was knocked out in the Sunday attack, officially described as the greatest daylight air operation in history. A count today showed 126 enemy planes were shot down yesterday.

The first of the four mighty consecutive blows at Germany was a Saturday night British-Canadian raid on Leipzig.

Mosquitos Jab at N. France

R.A.F. Mosquitos jabbed into northern France and Belgium today without loss.

"Major damage" was done yesterday to important Nazi fighter plants at Leipzig, Brunswick, and Bernberg.

The two main Messerschmitt-109 fighter assembly buildings at Leipzig-Mockau were severely damaged by direct hits, two hangars at an adjacent airport were damaged, and a parts plant at Leipzig-Heiterblick was set afire.

An Air Ministry communique said the attack on Stuttgart was "in great strength" and "intense fire" were left burning among factories of the city as the raid ended, when clouds lifted and left a clear target for thousands of tons of explosives hurtling from the bellies of the big bombers.

Feint at Munich.

The main attack on Stuttgart, last raided Nov. 26, was masked by a Mosquito feint at the Nazi party shrie of Munich 100 miles to the southeast. Loss in the night's operations—including others against objectives in occupied territory, and extensive mine laying—was limited to 10 aircraft, including one Canadian bomber.

This loss was in marked contrast to the Saturday night blow at Leipzig when 79 of the heavy bombers, including 18 Canadian craft, failed to come back as a result of enemy action and icing conditions.

These manifold assaults lifted the air war against invasion-threatened Germany to a new pitch in a weekend also highlighted by the many-pronged American blow yesterday, described officially as "the largest, most important and most hazardous operation" yet undertaken by the United States strategic air forces.

126 Enemy Planes Downed.

It was announced that in the smashing daylight raid—which Gen. H. H. Arnold, head of the U.S. army air forces said in Washington had knocked out one-quarter of Germany's fighter production—also cost the enemy 126 planes shot down. It was the greatest daylight air action of history.

NAZIS ARREST ARCHBISHOP

London, Feb. 21—(CP)—August Cardinal Hlond, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Poland, was arrested recently by the Germans in Paris apparently because of his extreme anti-Nazi views, private information reaching London said today.

Cardinal Hlond, a native Pole, went from Poland to Rome late in 1939 at the advice of the Polish Government and later went to a health resort in France. He has publicly charged the Germans with atrocities against Polish priests.

3 German U-Boats Sunk, Pack Beaten Near Gibraltar

By FRANK LOWE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 21 — (CP) — Three German submarines were destroyed and several others damaged by British aircraft and warships when a pack sought unsuccessfully for 11 days to slip through the Straits of Gibraltar into the Mediterranean.

The submarines' effort, which Canadians with the R.A.F. and the Royal Navy helped frustrate, was made under cover of darkness in a moonless period, a joint Admiralty and Air Ministry communique said. Apparently they sought to get through to harry Allied shippnig around Anzio in Italy.

Allied headquarters said some submarines already were active there and the Germans have claimed sinkings of transports and warships at or near the Anzio beachhead.

During two nights of this 11 day period, three large Allied convoys passed through the narrow waters without interference, the communique said.

The engagement opened when a Wellington bomber, captained by Sgt. D. M. Cornish of Scout Lake, Sask., sighted the bluish, phosphorescent wake of a submarine and attacked shortly after midnight. The U-boat surfaced and opened fire as the bomber ran in, Cornish said. Depth charges were dropped and the submarine's guns ceased firing.

For several days afterwards, sporadic battles with other U-boats continued, with several separate engagements between Allied surface and aircraft and Nazi undersea ships being reported.

Ten Shells Land All Around General And His Party

With Chinese Forces in Northern Burma, Feb. 21. (AP)—Ten shells landed ten to fifty yards to the erar, front and on both sides of Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stillwell and a party of nine other Americans, including four war correspondents, yesterday during a tour of the battle front. None was hit.

The first burst caught the group on a jungle trail far from any foxholes. Stillwell got up after the first burst and led the rest over a hillside just as the last shell exploded.

REPORTS ARE CALLED "ABSOLUTELY UNTRUE"

London, Feb. 21 —(CP)— A. C. Kerr, regional director of the United States War Shipping Administration today described as "absolutely untrue" reports published in the United States that eight Liberty ships had recently cracked up in the Atlantic and limped back to Britain for repairs.

"Take it from me," he said, "the number of Liberties which have developed structural faults is so small it is not worth mentioning."

VICHY CLAIM UNCONFIRMED

London, Feb. 21 —(CP)— The Vichy radio reported today, without confirmation, that an American transport had been sunk between Taranto and Brindisi, Italy, but the explosion of a bomb hidden in the hull.

3 Youths Steal Rifles, Ammunition And Repel Attacks From Coal Mine

Barmouth, Wales, Feb. 21—(CP)—The "battle" of Cader Idris has ended but while it lasted this struggle between three young boys who stole the Royal Marines' ammunition at a nearby camp and repelled a brigadier's batman, regimental police, the National Fire Service and a marine platoon was quite an engagement.

The youths, ranging in age from 12 to 14, broke into the armory of a marine camp near this North Wales town last Thursday, took three of the six rifles and all the ammunition. They surrendered Friday under a flag of truce only when they were down to their last two rounds.

Discovery of the theft set off a hue and cry. First the lieutenant quartermaster was recalled from leave and then the brigadier's batman was sent after the boys. He returned to regimental police for reinforcements, when bullets started whizzing round his head.

The police in turn retired in the face of superior fire and the National Fire Service was called out. They also had to give up and the boys retired to the mountains around nearby Cader Idris where they occupied an old mine.

A marine paltoon tracked the boys down Friday and the marines, led by two subalterns, made a frontal assault with blank cartridges. Things were too hot for them and they took cover. One of the subalterns sent back for reinforcements and a captain to supervise operations. By then, however, the boys had almost used their ammunition. Flying a white flag, they came out of the mine without their rifles which have not yet been found.

The boys were escorted home by eight marines and placed "under restriction" there. On Saturday night, however, they were seen going to a movie, admired by the boys of the neighborhood.

Allies Throw Germans Back Two Miles Toward Aprilia

JAPANESE CHIEFS OF ARMY, NAVY STAFFS OUSTED

Tokyo Radio Admits Japan Suffered Heavy Losses at Truk Last Week

TOJO IN COMMAND

New York, Feb. 21 —(AP)— The Tokyo radio acknowledged today Japan suffered heavy losses in the American attack last week on her great naval base at Truk and announced simultaneously that both the chiefs of the Japanese army and navy general staffs had been relieved of their posts.

Premier General Hideko Tojo, a broadcast said, has personally assumed the role of chief of the army general staff in a sweeping shakeup that seemed to be a direct result of the American assault, described earlier by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, as "partial settlement" for the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

In a short wave broadcast to the United States, the Tokyo radio quoted an imperial headquarters communique as acknowledging the attack on Truk had cost the Japananese two cruisers, three destroyers, 13 transports and 120 planes.

Admiral Shimada Named.

Another broadcast quoted an announcement of the navy ministry as saying Fleet Admiral Osami Nagano, chief of the Japanese general staff, had been "relieved of his post."

The announcement added Emperor Hirohito has named Admiral Shigetara Shimada, navy minister, to serve concurrenly as chief of the naval general staff.

At the same time, the Tokyo radio said, the Japanese war ministry announced Field Marshal Gen. Sugiyama has been relieved of his post as chief of the army general staff and Premier Tojo has assumed his duties.

Land Installations Damaged.

The broadcasts were recorded by the United States foreign broadcast intelligence service.

The communique announcing the Japanese naval losses at Truk acknowledged "some damages were incurred among the land installations."

Domei, official Japanese News Agency, said Emperor Hirohito has personally installed Premier Tojo in his new post as Army Chief of Staff. Tojo also has been serving as War Minister, head of the Munitions Industry, Minister of Commerce and Industry and Minister of Education.

Find Method to Bond Aluminum to Steel

New York , Feb. 21 (AP)—J. Carleton Ward, President of the Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation, said yesterday his company has developed "a hitherto impossible technique" which will "enable American warplanes to fly farther, faster and higher."

He said the discovery, a military secret for many months, concerned chemically bonding pure aluminum to steel.

Liberal Member Warns Free Enterprise May Not Survive the War

Toronto, Feb. 21 —(CP)— Gray Turgeon, Liberal member of the House of Commons for Caribou and chairman of the parliamentary committee on reconstruction and re-establishment, said here today that free enterprise may not survive the completion of the war.

In an address prepared for delivery to the Toronto Canadian Club, Mr. Turgeon said Canadians do not wish to break with democracy nor give up freedom of action "but our people have decided, quietly perhaps but quite definitely that never again will they or their children suffer from want as in days gone by."

Canadians must be contented with their way of life "before we can contribute very much worthwhile to the life of the world beyond our borders." Free enterprise is "fighting desperately" for its life and is in danger of destruction.

"Man is superior to all destructive forces with the exception of those which shake his faith in God, destroy his trust in his fellow man and take away his confidence in himself. We cannot rise above the things which make us feel impotent.

"That is why so many Canadians are fearful of the 'system.' They have despaired of private enterprise and they wish to build up something all-powerful—like an all-absorbing state—that will attend to everything to come between them and the earning of a decent living."

Those who feel that the "hunger of the 1930's" was not necessary, and who wish to apply the knowledge gleaned from war to industrial, agricultural and other activities when war is done "must plan without fear in the positive knowledge that full employment can be maintained," Mr. Turgeon said.

"But we must prepare openly. Our intentions must be known. Our sincerity must not be doubted . . . Our plan must be comprehended, our program accepted. It is our duty to convince the people that we are in earnest . . ."

RAIDERS SCATTER INCENDIARIES INDISCRIMINATELY

Germans Stage Fierce but Short Attack Over London Sunday

DAMAGE IS HEAVY

London, Feb. 21—(CP)—Nazi air raiders scattered incendiaries and explosives over London in a short but fierce attack last night, which set fires in many areas and caused some casualties.

The assault apparently was staged in an attempt to repeat the big fire raid which was carried out against London early Saturday—heaviest blow since the big attacks of 1940-41.

The Germans followed the same pattern last night, fanning out in all directions in an effort to confuse the defences, and scattering fire-bombs apparently indiscriminately.

The attacking force, however, evidently was smaller than that of Saturday, when it was estimated that 150 planes came over the city.

The raiders were met by a thunderous anti-aircraft barrage and first reports indicated at least three were shot down.

The alert, which began about 10 p.m. (5 p.m. E. D. T.) as the enemy planes swept in over the Thames estuary, lasted approximately one hour. There was second brief alert at 3:26 a.m., apparently touched off by enemy reconnaissance planes.

Three Schools Hit.

Three schools, a Roman Catholic convent, a hotel, several apartment houses, a number of business properties and many private homes were burned out.

Incendiaries were the Germans' chief cargo, literally hundreds falling in one district, but some high explosives were mingled with the fire-bombs.

Prime Minister Churchill today inspected the areas damaged last night, and in response to cheers from hundreds of office workers waved with the V-sign and shouted "it's quite like old times again."

With his cigar at a jaunty angle, Mr. Churchill poked through the rubble and chatted with workers cleaning up the area.

Tass Makes Comment On Turkish Govt.

London, Feb. 21 (CP)—Sharp comment on the Turkish government was voiced in a Tass broadcast from Moscow today which said German propagandists were intensifying their activity and that their efforts were "facilated by Turkish official circles."

The dispatch listed several Nazi propagandists who recently visited Turkey and said their efforts were being directed at straightening relations between propaganda Minister Goebbels' organization and the Turkish press.

The Tass broadcast followed a recent article appearing in the Soviet magazine War and the Working Class which called attention to Franz Von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, as one of those working to divide the Allies.

CHURCHILL SOON TO OPEN REVIEW OF WAR PHASES

Report Will Probably be Most Comprehensive One Since Last September

LIGHT ON BATTLES

London, Feb. 21 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill put the finishing touches today to a fact-filled war review in which he is expected to discuss many phases of the global conflict at the next sitting of the House of Commons.

(Censorship forbids advance mention in dispatches of the date set for any Commons sitting.)

Indications are the Prime Minister's forthcoming report will be the mots comprehensive he has delivered since last September and will throw new light on the Italian campaign and the battle for the Anzio beachhead, about which some members of the House have been critical.

Mr. Churchill also is expected to touch on the situation in the Pacific, the increasingly heavy Allied aerial offensives against Germany and perhaps on the result of the Cairo and Teheran conferences.

Vote of Confidence May be Asked.

London newspapers predict the Prime Minister will warn Britain that the war is far from won and stiff, costly battles still lie between the United Nations and victory.

The Daily Mail said Mr. Churchill was disturbed by the defeat of the government candidates in the West Durbyshire by-election and his choice's close call in Brighton last week and might ask for a vote of confidence as a sign of a united home front.

The Yorkshire Post predicted he would assure the United States that more substantial British aid is on the way for Burma and the other Asiatic fronts.

The review will open a two-day debate on the conduct of the war in which Foreign Secretary Eden will also participate.

REDS THREATEN TO OUTFLANK NAZI FRONT IN NORTH

100-Mile Section Now Menaced by Swift Russian Advance Toward Pskov

RENEW MINSK DRIVE

London, Feb. 21 — (CP)—A 100-mile section of the crumbling German northern front was threatened with being outflanked today by a swift Russian advance toward the Baltic gateway of Pskov while powerful Russian thrusts were reported elsewhere on the 2,000-mile Russian front.

In addition to the push toward Pskov, the Russians were reported by Berlin to have renewed a drive toward Minsk in White Russia far to the south and to be attacking with mounting fury toward Krivoi Rog, big ore city in the Dnieper Bend.

Fighting through blizzards three Russian armies were driving toward the Baltic gateway of Pskov and yesterday they captured points within 30 miles of the important rail junction of Dno, 60 miles northeast of Pskov. They seized 114 villages in gains of two to 12 miles and killed more than 2,200 Germans, Moscow announced last night. Meanwhile a Soviet formation, fighting down the east sides of lakes Peipus and Pskov, was last reported only 28 miles north of Pskov.

Units of one Soviet army seized Bolshio Zvad and Maly Zvad, 30 miles north of Dno, which is a junction on the Leningrad-Vitebsk and Staraya Russa-Pskov lines. Another took Donets, the same distance to the northeast and a third captured Shilova Gora,30 miles to the east.

Regain Initiative By Great Effort Of All Forces

Six Foe Divisions Were Thrown Into Battle to Wipe Out The Bridgehead

900 AIR SORTIES

By KENNETH L. DIXON
(A.P. Press War Correspondent.)

Naples, Feb. 21. (AP)—British and United States forces have stopped a supreme effort by densely-packed German troops to wipe out the Anzio bridgehead and have thrown the enemy back two miles toward Carroceto (Aprilia), Allied headquarters announced today.

The Nazi steamroller advance, aimed down the Anziate highway toward Anzio last Wednesday, was halted only after all elements of Allied power were called into play during 48 hours of the most intense period of the fighting.

"Our effort was very greatly assisted by magnificent support given by Allied naval units, Allied air formations and both British and American artillery", the communique said.

The German offensive reached its peak before dawn Saturday. Then Allied tanks and infantry, under cover of a heavy artillery barrage, began smashing forward at 6.30 a.m. and still rolled ahead yesterday.

Intensity of enemy effort was demonstrated by the appearance of elements of five regiments within one 1,000-yard area. Six enemy divisions threw their entire strength into the assault. Three others were held in reserve.

18 Nazi Divisions.

An Allied spokesman said the Germans now have 18 divisions involved on the Italian fronts. Nine of these facing the beachhead, it was announced, are grouped under the 14th German army, commanded by General Eberhard Von Mackensen, last reported on the Russian front. He is a son of the First Great War General.

Bulk of the remaining divisions stand on the main 5th Army Front behind the Cassino defences. They include the 10th Army under General Heinrich Von Vietinghof. Both armies still are under Field Marshal Albert Kesselring.

Throwing everything they could muster into a mighty southward stab to split the Allied beachhead forces, the Germans had managed to punch some 4,000 yards below Carroceto before their advance was hurled back. Their casualties were heavy.

Some of those captured said one German regiment alone had lost 60 per cent of its strength.

The Allies sent 900 sorties into the air, the Germans set up an estimated 100, and the sky battles and attacks on both sides of the beachhead ground battle lines were rapidly rising to a record peak when the weather limited further forays.

Three Allied aircraft were lost and at least four German planes were shot down.

No major developments took place yesterday in the 5th Army's Cassino front although French forces repulsed an enemy raid northeast of Terelle. American troops held fast to their positions in Cassino itself. Patrols were active on the 8th Army front.

Offensive Bogs Down.

Climax of the beachhead struggle came Saturday when the German offensive bogged down and massed American tanks and troops and British infantrymen landed a counter-punch which sent the Nazis reeling.

The 5th Army, which had been bracing for a Nazi blow for weeks, had held its counter-attack for just the time when the enemy had passed his peak.

As a result the Germans were able to muster but one small attack, after having used engineers, reconnaissance units and anti-aircraft gunners as infantry support in their previous efforts.

During the hottest part of the battle, Allied planes so harried German pilots that they bombed and strafed their own troops several times. Hand-to-hand fighting raged at scores of places over the contested area.

Both British and American warships threw bombardments into the Germans behind the melee.

Four-engined bombers dropped ton upon ton of bombs on troops massed in the Campoleone-Carroceto sector where Von Mackensen had concentrated six of his nine divisions, while medium bombers pulverized a two-mile stretch of highway due north of Carroceto.

Lost Station.

While the 5th Army was reported successful in the Anzio sector, the news was not so good from the main 5th Army front to the south where the Allies were forced by four Nazi counter-attacks to withdraw from the railroad station a mile from the centre of Cassino.

Other formations had to yield a crest in mountain fighting 1 1-2 miles west of Cassino but on the lower Garigliano river front to the southwest a British corps under Lt.-Gen. Sir R. L. McCreery repelled two savage Nazi counter-attacks in the Mount Ornito area.

The fierce beachhead battle may have had repercussions on the 8th Army front where Douglas Amaron, Canadian Press War Correspondent, reported Sunday that enemy opposition to Canadian corps patrols near the Adriatic was considerably less than usual. He said the Germans may have withdrawn some of their troops to strengthen the beachhead and this might have accounted for the lack of German activity.

More Spectacular Than Destructive When Petrol Dump Hit by Shell

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, Feb. 21—(CP)—Flames shot 100 feet in the air and metal containers sky rocketted in all directions when a shell scored a direct hit on a petrol dump of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps.

The effect was more spectacular than it was destructive for only a limited amount of petrol was stacked in any one dump, but only fast work by the Army Service Corps men saved what might have been a serious loss.

"Everyone pitched in to help clear away stacks within range of the one that was blazing," said Capt. Fred Perrott, Ottawa, in charge of the petrol point. "Shells kept plopping in but the men went on working just as though nothing was happening."

Capt. D. A. MacGregor, Hamilton, Ont., said tins from the burning stack were shooting up in the air "like sky rockets" and landing as much as 50 yards away. The whole area resembled a gigantic blow torch.

One blazing tin landed on another stack and Sgt. David Shepherd, Rumsey, Alta., quickly shovelled it out of the way. Then, still using his shovel, he beat out a fire which was beginning to spread.

"It would have been a nice thing to watch if it hadn't been our petrol burning up," Shepherd said.

A chain gang was formed to pass tins back to trucks and jeeps which whisked them away to a safe area. The last tins removed were so hot they burned the hands of the persons carrying them.

Members of the Provost Corps stopped traffic, for there was a wall of flame across the road, then piled their own jeeps full of petrol and helped drive it away.

Meyers, pastor of Tabernacle United Church, which will be long remembered by some of those present.

A number of the Kinsmen were present during the day to meet the visitors, and the thanks of the association was expressed by Ed. Shortt on their behalf.

Post-War Employment Theme of Discussion

"Employment" was the phase of "Post-War Planning" discussed at the monthly meeting of the University Women's Club held on Feb. 17 at the home of Miss Harriet Cronk, Catherine Street.

Miss S. Pallett, who organized and led the program, explained that the material presented was for discussion merely, not for conclusions. There is quantity rather than quality of such material at present available.

"Why do we face the future with fear of mass unemployment?" continued Miss Pallett. The public realizes the future cannot be left to right itself. A government must exercise control, directly or indirectly, of the distribution of the nation's income. Economic methods should be criticized from the angle of their social effects. The interest of industry lies in steady employment and social security for themselves. So there is no conflict there. In the battle against unemployment, as in any other battle, it is in courage combined with preparedness for inevitable setbacks that success depends. The problem is international. Also there prevails in the world a strong consciousness of the fundamental community of interests that binds all classes of society and all nations, and the success of the scheme of any one depends upon the existence of similar schemes in other countries.

The re-establishment of servicemen was dealt with by Miss B. Billings who pointed out that understanding, not sentimentality, must guide and that it is permanent jobs, not temporary, that are needed. Many of the plans and offers at present being worked out were described in some detail.

Mrs. Turley dealt with the reconversion of industry to peace time production under three groups:

(1) Those dealing with raw materials e.g. aluminum;

(2) With goods similar to those used in peace time e.g. textiles;

(3) With goods not similar to those used in peace time e.g. tanks.

It is with the last group that the greatest difficulties arise. Space is necessary to move out government war machines, as often a different lay-out and different machinery are demanded.

Similarly war workers were grouped as:

(1) Those who can continue in the same work in peace time;

(2) Those who will be laid off during plant re-conversion e.g. perhaps for six months;

(3) Those who transferred from essential to war industry and wish to re-transfer;

(4) Those who will be dismissed as war production slows down.

Immigration, as it might effect employment, was handled by Miss M. Bunting. The attitude of organized labor is definitely against immigration.

Miss Bunting went into a dissertation of the possible kinds of immigration e.g.:

(1) Block units of similar people e.g. Batawa;

(2) Individual industrial capitalists;

(3) Child immigration.

The discussion reverted again more briefly to Miss Billings on "The Place of Women in the Post-War Employment Plan," and to Miss Bunting on "Employment of Educationalists."

The final topic, the Place of Agriculture as an Employment, reverted to the leader, Miss Pallett, who stated that agriculture should not be asked to absorb more than 30% of the veterans. It is not fair, nor profitable to the country to drive farmers' sons off the farm by giving increased assistance to the veterans and immigrants without as good qualifications. Those engaged in agriculture must be on a par economically with other major groups in the nation. There are rural slums to be abolished as well as city slums.

"The farm pattern" has never been carefully thought out. The future of farming should not depend on the uncontrollable law of supply and demand but should be incorporated in a new appraisal of the nutritional needs of the country as a whole and on her international role as a major food-producing nation.

Questions from the audience were invited and during the serving of light refreshments animated and stimulating discussion took place.

Eye-witnesses said they were not certain whether a landing was attempted or whether sudden engine trouble forced the plane down.

Chairman J. B. Boyce Expresses Thanks to All Who Assisted In Making Fund Successful

Committee Chairman, J. B. Boyce, in charge of the campaign to raise $6,000 for the sponsoring and adoption of H.M.C.S. "Belleville", wishes to thank the many interested and generous citizens, business firms and manufacturers of the city for ther support during the drive for funds. The objective for sponsoring the corvette was far surpassed before the end of the drive and is speedily moving on to reach the amount set for the adoption.

In spite of the cold weather on Saturday, hundreds of Belleville women and children reported to the Tag Day headquarters during the day and set out from there to sell tags to everyone who passed them on the streets. A letter, signed "A Sailor", was received at the office of The Ontario Intelligencer, which tells the story more graphically than anything else would. "A Sailor" writes: "My attention was drawn to the interest being shown to the tiny little girl in the red fur coat whom they called Jane, out on the early morning streets selling tags. Although the temperature hovered below zero the tiny little lady seemed to be doing a good business in tagging. Our hats off to you, Jane, and may your ship always come home". A postscript added to the letter read: "She was by far the youngest tagger out on the streets, and I am sure others felt the way I did".

To Seek Equipment.

With the necessary funds now available, the committee for H.M.C.S. "Belleville" will begin an immediate investigation as to the equipment that will be purchased to go in the ship, and priority orders will be placed for those items which are on the restricted list. The people of Belleville have all had a share in the raising of this money and the committee will take undue pride in obtaining the finest equipment possible for the "Belleville". Many items have already been decided upon, but there are smaller articles which will be brought to light as the equipping goes on.

Everyone who gave to this fund should be radiantly proud that their dollars will be represented in the daily life of the men who will sail in the "Belleville" in the near future.

The fund rose from just below the first objective of $3,500 to very close to the final objective of $5,000 over the weekend with contributions amounting to $460.00 having been sent in to Mr. H. D. Bateman, or left at the Banks. These donations are acknowledged with thanks as follows:

Issuing of AA Gasoline Ration Books Begins

Issuing of AA gasoline ration books started this morning in Belleville at Vermilyea's Shoe Store, 268½ Front Street, and application forms will be available for the two other special categories, A and B. Mail applications will not be accepted. Before the 1944-45 ration book will be issued, motorists must obtain an application form from the Post Office where they are now available to anyone wishing them today. Motorists must also have their 1944 licence before applying for a new ration book and these licences are being issued now at Vermilyea's Shoe Store which makes it easier for the motorists of the city who may complete the two jobs at one time.

The 1944-45 regulations provide for the use of three different application forms, category AA (red print), special category A (purple print), and commercial motor vehicle B (green print). They also require that any person making application for gasoline privilege registration., gasoline licence and ration book coupons, for any passenger type motor vehicle, must complete a category AA application and obtain a category AA coupon book, before submitting a special category application. Suitable supplies of the different application forms have been forwarded to the city issuing office. The forms are not to be distributed by mail, but are to be handed to persons calling and making application for them.

There are approximately 5,000 passenger vehicle owners in the city and district and to date 1,000 have obtained 1944 licences, it was reported today. It is anticipated that the announcement that the gasoline books are on the market will increase the demand for the licences.

Higher category books than AA will be issued from the regional office of the Oil Controller at Toronto, but as yet no announcement has been made as to when they will be available.

Only Eight Monks Were in Old Abbey

With the 5th Army at Cassino, Feb. 21 (AP)—Only eight of the Benedictine Monks of the Monte Cassino Abbey were in the Monastery with an unknown number of civilian refugeees and German troops Tuesday when American planes reduced the historic structure to a shapeless pile of rubble.

Italian civilians who have reached Allied lines from the abbey said most of the Monks left the abbey weeks ago when Allied forces first approached this area.

Seven Vehicles Damaged In Weekend Crashes

Weekend motor accidents in the Belleville area resulted in property damage to seven vehicles. Strangely enough two of the accidents occurred at the approach to the upper bridge in the city, while the other two collisions happened on Highway No. 2 west of Belleville.

Three miles west of the city a Trenton taxi cab, driven by Jack Hodge, crashed into a tree on the south side of the highway resulting in upwards to $400. damage, Traffic Officer W. G. Milton reported. Hodge was proceeding westerly when the right wheels of his taxi became lodged in an ice rut on the north side of the road. In attempting to dislodge the wheels Hodge's taxi swerved to the left and skidded before striking the loose snow on the south side of the highway before sliding sideways into a tree.

Just prior to this accident a motor car driven by Wallace McKnight, Bowmanville, collided with the rear of a truck, driven by Elmer DeMarsh, Trenton, a few miles further west on the highway. Constable Milton also investigated this crash and reported the damage negligible.

In the city a motor car driven by F. G. Harper, 227 Moira Street West, skidded at the approach to the upper bridge and was in collision with a panel truck driven by George Gray, Mount Dennis, on Sunday evening. Police say damage amounting to around $75. resulted to the truck.

At the same spot some time later police allege a car driven by Cecil G. Bovay, 47 Station Street, failed to stop upon entering Front Street and skidded into collision with another motor car being driven onto the upper bridge by Orland Towns, of Foxboro. Here only fender damage resulted. Charges are pending in some of the cases, police added.

Hitler Blundered in Use Of Navy, Lost Sea War

U-Boat Destruction and Scharnhorst Loss Climaxed Long Story of Mismanagement—Astute British Have Cut Down Nazi Ships to Negligible Factor

How the once formidable German Navy has been reduced to a point where it is not an important factor in the war is told by Paul L. Wellman in an article in the Kansas City Star, which is reproduced as follows:

When the story of this war is written, observers will say that the complete collapse of the German navy played a vital role in the defeat of Hitler. The U-boat campaign has failed. With the sinking of the Scharnhorst in the closing days of 1943 the last Nazi weapon in surface craft passed from the picture.

There was a time when the German navy might have played a highly influential role in this war, provided the German high command had been gifted with sufficient strategic perception to have so used it. It is true that the Nazis never had a strong fleet. But had they husbanded what they had, kept it for the psychological moment, and then used it for a stunning blow; or even withheld it as a constantly prevailing threat, they might have achieved very much more with it than they have done.

• •

When the war started, Germany possessed seven battleships. Three of these were the so-called "pocket battleships." The Deutschland (since named the Luetzow), Admiral Scheer and Admiral Graf Spee. Two new and speedy 26,500-ton battleships, mounting nine 11-inch guns apiece, were the Scharnhorst and the Gniesenau. Two giants of the sea, among the most powerful battleships ever built, were completed very shortly after hostilities began, the Bismarck and the Tirpitz. These were 35,000-ton vessels, armed with eight 15-inch guns apiece, and rated at thirty knots speed, whereas the Scharnhorst class was rated at 27 knots.

There were also four 10,000-ton cruisers, six light cruisers, thirty destroyers and torpedo boats, one unfinished aircraft carrier and about sixty submarines.

This was, to be sure, no fleet to go out and fight an ocean armada like that possessed by Great Britain. But as a "fleet in being" it could tie down so big a part of the British fleet that it could have vastly complicated the task of the later in patrolling the oceans of the world.

Instead of this, the German high command proceeding almost at once to fritter away its sea power. Adolf Hitler—as rank a landlubber as ever grew pea-green from seasickness on a few hours' yachting pleasure cruise—had and has almost no conception of the importance of sea power. In fact he believed that he had the answer to enemy sea power. The answer was air power. He built up the Luftwaffe and presumed to command the seas from the air.

• •

To be sure, when he scrapped the Versailles treaty, with its restrictions on his navy, Hitler began to build up a fleet. His new battleships were characterized by ruggedness and speed. They were good ships by any standards, but the events have shown that they did not have the commanders or crews with the requisite genius for handling them as any ships must be handled to succeed against the British sea power.

When hostilities began, the British adopted at once their historic strategic policy—blockade. It was blockade which was at the bottom of the victorious conclusion of the Napoleonic wars, blockade which defeated the central powers in the first World War, and blockade which now was invoked to put the slow constriction of food and supplies on the Germans in the present world conflict.

Germany was relying on the Luftwaffe and the submarine to break the stranglehold, by strangling Britain herself. With only 60 submarines at the beginning, she has built up a productive machinery which immediately began to expand that underwater fleet until there have been between 400 and 500 submarines in commission at one time. Germany did not count on new anti-submarine measures, among the most important of which is the new escort aircraft carrier, which have in large measure broken the submarine menace. Nor did Germany count on the development of anti-aircraft batteries, radar, and other new devices which seem at last to have swung the pendulum back toward the surface craft in the question of dominance of the water.

So, early in the war, the frittering of her navy began. Already in the fall of 1939 at least two of the pocket battleships were sent out to raid the commerce lanes. These were Deutschland (now the Luetzow) and the Admiral Graf Spee. Had they operated in conjunction they would have represented a strong concentration, for only three British ships, the battle criusers Hood, Renown and Repulse could match them in speed and defeat them in armament.

But the pocket battleships parted. The Deutschland did some raiding in the North Atlantic before being driven back to Germany while the Graf Spee went southward. There, on December 13, 1939, three little British cruisers, the Exeter, Ajax and Achilles, mere lightweights against the heavy German ship, outfooted and outfought her like clever little boxers, and forced her into the harbor of Montevideo, where she blew herself up.

• •

An important unit had been lost by the Germans without compensatory gains. Early in 1940 the Norway campaign was launched. The Germans dominated the skies and put 10,000 men in Norway within a few hours. But in spite of the Luftwaffe, on the water Hitler's navy suffered profoundly. It lost in two days the cruisers Blucher, Karlsruhe and Koenigsberg, and in three days the destroyers Heidkamp, Schmitt, Luderman, Kunne, Von Roder, Schultz, Giese, Koellner, Arnim, Thiele and Zenker.

The heroic old British Warspite, which hurled her awkward bulk up Narvik fjord, which was so narrow she could scarcely turn around, accounted for no less than six of these. British seamanship and audacity which sent a dreadnaught up waters so narrow, paid heavy dividends for the Warspite escaped, to continue her brilliant record in the Mediterranean and Indian Oceans. All told, by the end of April, Germany had lost half of her destroyer squadron and her cruiser squadron was heavily crippled.

• •

The German high command's biggest blunder was the sending forth sea-giants which contained Hitler's greatest threat. There still is dispute as to where the Bismarck was headed. It has been said that she was trying to reach the Pacific to join the Japanese fleet, with experts and technicians, to implement the treacherous assault on the United States even then contemplated. It was a mistake, however. The Bismarck was detected off the coast of Greenland, and in a running fight she sank the great battle-cruiser Hood. The biggest hunt in history then began. Escorted by the Prinz Eugen, the Bismarcy tried to reach her base, but the British were alert; she was spotted, tracked down and finally sunk after the heaviest hammering a ship ever received.

The Gneisenau and Scharnhorst, located and bombed at Brest, made their celebrated run up the channel, but not without damage. Latter, British midget submarines got torpedo hits directly on the Tirpitz, rendering her useless. And now has come the sinking of the Scharnhorst.

• •

Today the German navy contains the damaged Gneisenau and Tirpitz, and two pocket battleships, which are said to be in a condition too damaged to permit battle use. By the sinking of the Scharnhorst, the British navy finds its task of patrolling the Murmansk convoy route importantly eased. There was a time when the Axis—including German, Italian and Japanese navies—had the balance of seapower uncomfortably close to that of the Allies. But that day is ended. Italy is gone, the sinking of the Scharnhorst virtually finishes Germany as any kind of a sea factor. Japan's turn is coming next. The vastly augmented fleets of the United States and Britain, augmented by French and Italian vessels, making it the greatest combined armada in all history now may turn virtually uninterrupted attention toward closing accounts with Tojo and Hirohito.

ATTENTION: POKER PLAYERS

Robert Ley, leader of the German labor front, writes in an article on Churchill in the newspaper Der Angriff, "the whole political secret of this man is his gambler's character. Churchill is a poker player."

"This curious game consists of irritating one's opponent into overreaching himself," Ley adds, "thus only a person with an aptitude for falsehood, bluff and hypocrisy can achieve a mastery of poker."

Belleville Seamen List Equipment On Ships Which Would Be Appreciated

Acting as "Commando Force Taggers" in aid of the H.M.C.S. "Belleville." Corvette Tag Day, Leading Stoker Hubert Herrington, Stoker I. Jack Boyle, AB. Harry "Hot Dog" McCreary and AB. Roy Whiting, descended upon the offices and business places of the city early in the day, Saturday, and sold H.M.C.S. "Belleville" tags to all and sundry, no one daring to refuse them. They were exuberant in their praise of the effort being put forth by the city and its citizens in this cause and gave many suggestions as to the type of equipment needed aboard such a vessel as the H.M.C.S. "Belleville." First on the list of suggestions was a good hot-plate, something to prepare a snack before going on duty. With eight messes aboard a corvette, and the officers' ward room, nine of these hot-plates would be needed. Electric irons were the second items mentioned; several of these would be needed to meet the requirements of 80 or more men, a pressing board, this last item, these seamen said, was something they had not seen aboard any ship as yet and that it would be very much appreciated; pressing is done at present on the mess tables. A washing machine is standard equipment in all sponsoring, it appears, therefore, a washing machine must be included on the "Belleville." A short-wave radio with feed-speakers to all messes, a motion picture projector and sound equipment would make the periods between duty watches less tedious than it is now without such equipment, a record player and records and other electric equipment would outfit the "Belleville" to perfection.

These four Canadian navy men are serving aboard corvettes at the present time, Herrington and Whiting on the "Stadacona," McCreary on the "Sackville," named after a small town in Nova Scotia, and Jack Boyle on the "Calgary," and are in a position to be able to state with authority just what would be most appreciated by the crew which will go aboard the "Belleville" later this year. They urge the all-out support of the citizens of their home town in this project, and all expressed a hope that they might be included in the "Belleville's" company. "With a Belleville crew aboard her," remarked Stoker Boyle "there wouldn't be a U-boat in the Atlantic that would be safe . . we'd sink every one of 'em." Spirit such as this cannot be daunted and everything that can be done to keep it alive should be done .. and will be done.

Notes From England

By VERNON M. KIPP
(Special to Ottawa Journal And the Ontario Intelligencer.)

LONDON, Feb. 5, 1944 (By Mail) —THERE IS a large photograph in the Times this morning of snowdrops blooming in a Dorset wood. I do not think it is far-fetched to offer this fact as one small sidelight on Britain at war. War is the predominant thought in the public mind, of course, but not the exclusion of everything else. War reminds you to keep the blackout curtains tightly closed at night. War makes of night transport a great nuisance. You think of war when you hear an airplane high above in the silence of the night—and you hope it's friendly, as it is. War means no fruit, and rigid rations. But life goes on and flowers are part of life.

The other day we had lunch with a group of officers of the Canadian Artillery, in a residence taken over for their use. The house was unheated, and there was a minimum of furniture, but outside the window a delicate pale pink rose was blooming. A little earier, on the grounds of another house taken over by the Canadian Army, we watched a young soldier transplanting perennials, while in front of him rumbled great military trucks and across the way Canadian guns stood their vigil.

We left our hotel in Southampton one morning to look at High street —"High Street?" said the lady in the hotel, "just go through the park, but there's nothing on High street —just ruins"—and strolled through the park. Beside the paths were neat rectangular beds of English daisies in full bloom, pink and white, as defiant as the Englishman himself.

• •

Southampton was very badly blitzed, but it's all in the past. "You have had a bad time," we said to a merry, prosperous gentleman who runs an electrical contracting business. "Yes", he replied and then, quickly, "You mean the blitz? I thought for a moment you meant the difficulty in getting materials. That is what is in my mind now." This man's place of business was destroyed. Three days later he had opened offices in a private house and is busier than ever before. He has settled his claim with the Government for £8,000, but will not receive the money until the war is over.

We asked the electrical man how the Southampton people get along with Canadian troops. "Perfectly," he said, "they are just like ourselves." He is an officer of the local Rotary Club, and he spoke with gratitude of the display of friendship which had come from the 23 Rotarians of Southampton, Ontario. Altogether they had sent over £90 for the relief of cases of acute distress, and the latest expenditure from the fund had been to buy a sewing machine for a poor woman who had lost her own in the blitz. Now she was able again to support herself. "These simple deeds of human kindness," said the Southampton Rotarian, "mean so much more than speeches."

Legitimate military objectives in Southampton suffered, but not heavily in comparison with civilian property. High street was raked with bombs from end to end, but even so some buildings escaped and carry on the traditions of the city's main shopping centre—there has been no rebuilding, but the rubble has been carted away, walls pulled down, and the premises tidied up. And there remained a few clothing shops, boot shops, food shops—one shop its windows bravely filled with bright Spring flowers.

Southampton took its beating but was not dismayed. They told us the story of an old woman whose greatest joy was her parrot. One day, in the blitz, the old woman's home went down in a heap of rubble. She was pulled out and taken to hospital, where she insisted endlessly that the ruins be searched for the parrot. So they dug in the bricks and mortar and after three or four days found Polly, alive if bedraggled and hungry. And as the rescuer triumphantly carried Polly away to rejoin its mistress at the hospital the parrot chanted "Clear. All Clear." It seemed symbolic.

• •

And, speaking of symbols, it seems an appropriate place to mention H.M.S. Victory, the great Nelson's great ship, which has survived for 175 years the vicissitudes of time and wars. We visited the Victory another day, and it seemed highly appropriate that this fighting ship, which helped topple the ambitions of Napoleon, should survive to aid, if even in a small way as a training ship, in the extinguishment of Hitler.

The Victory is supported with timbers in its narrow well, is virtually retired from the sea, but one day a German bomb fell between the dock and the ship's side and blew a 12-foot hole in her bottom. Another time a German incendiary left a scar on her deck. These are honorable wounds of war and those who maintain this stout old warrior are proud of them.

Much of the ship is as Nelson knew it, although his own furniture has been removed for security reasons, and everything seems remarkably sound. The ceilings are low for a man of average height and Nelson's Captain Hardy, who was six feet four, must have walked in a perpetual stoop. Nelson's own quarters are spacious, and it was easy for the imagination to picture that slight gallant figure pacing it impatiently, planning destruction for the French.

We trod the ancient oak decks. We stood at the spot where Nelson was wounded, and at the dimly-lit sick bay below decks where he died —sacred and historic spots.

Gifts Presented To R. Hupfield 'Y' Supervisor

Mr. Ron Hupfield, supervisor of War Services with the Y.M.C.A. in the city, has been posted from the city to take up duties overseas. Before departing from the city, Mr. Hupfield was presented with an identification bracelet with his name enscribed on one surface and a dedication upon the reverse side. In addition, the members of the Red Triangle Hostess Club presented him with a leather portfolio. The presentations were made at the Red Triangle Hostess Club St. Valentine's Dance held last Monday night at the Trianon Ballroom by Miss Mary Moult on behalf of the full membership of the Club.

Ron has fulfilled his duties in this city with the utmost, painstaking care and has won many friends in the business as well as social circles. His hard-working efforts on behalf of the servicemen and servicewomen stationed in the vicinity of Belleville have made him one of the most popular young men in the Y.M.C.A. service anywhere. He looks forward to renewed acquaintances with boys who have spent some time at the training stations in this district.

Ron Hupfield wished to express his thanks for the many kindnesses and the co-operation shown by every organization and individual citizen, particularly to the girls of the Hostess Clubs. During his period in the city the membership of the Red Triangle Hostess Club has increased by four times that which it was when he arrived. This was accomplished mainly by the effort expended by Mr. Hupfield and the full co-operation of the girls themselves. Their interest in the work at hand has been most active and shows that the girls are genuinely concerned in keeping the war effort of the "Y" at its highest peak. Mr. Hupfield named several of the Senior Hostesses for special acknowledgment, saying that without their full co-operation his task would have been almost impossible; the girls mentioned are —Helen Symons, Kay Murphy, Mary Moult and Irene Walsh. These girls, said Ron, have given great leadership to the Hostess Club and have been with the club since its inception and have majored, as it were, in all its activities. The Y.M.C.A. War Service has had wonderful co-operation with and by the St. Michael's and Belleville Hostess and Hospitality Clubs and their senior hostesses.

Mr. Hupfield also wished to thank the managements of the business firms for their unstinted co-operation in carrying out the projects and plans of the "Y" during his time in Belleville, and before leaving the city, he earnestly requested that each of these groups, the businessmen and other continue to lend their full support to the work which will be carried on by his successor.

Saturday Market

Temperature of several degrees below zero spoiled attendance on the local produce market Saturday morning with only one or two vendors putting in their appearance on the outside market while a comparatively slim attendance was in evidence in the market building. Lowest temperature reported by farmers on Friday night was 20 below with the thermometer still reading several degrees under the zero mark at market time.

The offering of eggs predominated on the inside market, vendors quoting 38c the dozen for firsts and 35c for mediums. Overweights sold at 42c the dozen. The fowl offering was slim with best grade bringing 45c the pound and lesser grade at 40c.

Potatoes were scarce at 50c the peck or at $1.90 the bushel, while bag lots where available brought $2.19. Apples were not offered in quantity but Delicious and Spys brought 75c the peck and Snows 35c the peck. Sauerkraut sold at 15c the quart.

Why THE ✚ RED CROSS?

The Red Cross continues to exist because no other agency can perform the humanitarian work it undertakes:

THE RED CROSS is non-political; non-sectarian, non-belligerent. It represents neither governments nor creeds, but Humanity itself. Thus, in all belligerent countries and in all war areas it is immune from expulsion or attack in the performance of its humanitarian task.

That task is the relief of human suffering, wherever suffering is found, and no matter who is the sufferer.

WHAT THE RED CROSS DOES

Governments delegate to the Red Cross this task of safeguarding their citizens in enemy countries, of ministering to the destitute, and of collaborating with the fighting services to save life and alleviate pain.

The task includes supplying food and comforts to war prisoners, looking after civilian war victims, collecting blood serum to restore the wounded; building, equipping and staffing hospitals; supplementing stocks of medical and surgical supplies, and providing auxiliary nursing services.

A UNIVERSAL BROTHERHOOD

National Red Cross Societies throughout the world are linked together in a universal brotherhood through the International Red Cross Committee in Geneva; Switzerland—a neutral country.

Here in 1863, the Red Cross was founded through the efforts of the Swiss author and philisopher, Henri Dunant, who had been impressed by the pioneer work of the Englishwoman, Florence Nightingale.

Here, in 1864, was drawn up the Treaty which committed sixteen nations (since joined by others) to observe the international conventions which make Red Cross work possible.

Since then, the emblem chosen—the Red Cross on a white ground (the flag of Switzerland "in reverse")—has become the worldwide symbol of man's humanity to man.

HOW THE WORK IS CO-ORDINATED

This International Committee of the Red Cross sits continuously in Geneva, supervising and co-ordinating the international work of the Red Cross Societies.

It sends its own delegates regularly into prison camps, and sets up international agencies to aid prisoners of war, refugees and other war victims. It keeps a card index of all prisoners of war, and arranges intercommunication between them and their families. It arranges exchange of prisoners. Through it are transmitted the parcels of food, clothing and comforts which go to prisoners of war in all belligerent countries.

WHERE THE MONEY COMES FROM

Since the Red Cross deals with broad human relations; governments entrust to it the raising of funds needed to carry on its manifold activities. This it does through appeals to industry and to the private citizen.

The appeal of the Red Cross is to fundamental goodness and compassion—the desire we all have to help our suffering fellowbeings, no matter what their colour, creed, nationality or politics.

The Red Cross is the practical expression of that ideal which was preached so powerfully on the shores of a Galilean lake—the Brotherhood of Man.

THIS, THEN, IS YOUR JOB!

So—the Canadian Red Cross is YOUR Red Cross: YOU make it possible. It is through YOU, and in YOUR name, that it carries on its unique and necessary work. It is YOUR dollars . : : contributed as generously as your means will permit : : : that must meet the present expanding need.

Raid on Berlin

Berlin last week went through the most powerful bombing in history when 2,800 tons of bombs fell on the capital city. From Berlin in 1940 and 1941 Hitler sent forth his Luftwaffe airmen to smash at London but the havoc they caused cannot compare with the devastation caused by the master raids of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. and the American Army Air Force today. The Allied mastery is clear and gives evidence of the difference in strength of the R.A.F. and the American Air Force as compared with the German force.

On Friday night from fifty to sixty German planes visited Britain and the greater part of them flew over London and inflicted according to estimates more heavy damage than was inflicted by the Germans at any time since the blitzkrieg of 1940 and 1941. Taking account of the damage which is believed to have been caused by the German planes on Friday night and comparing the strength of the Allied air forces and the superiority of Allied planes, it is easy to realize how many times more devastating the Allied raids have been over such places as Hamburg, Berlin, Leipzig and other German centres.

One of the weapons which Hitler expected would help him to achieve world supremacy has been more than taken care of by the Allied air forces, whose expansion has been one of the great facts of the war.

If German planes did a measurable amount of damage over London on Friday night, how much more damaging is a raid with nearly 3,000 tons of bombs landing according to plan upon Berlin!

Germany and Berlin escaped the fury of the war in the last struggle of 1914-1918 but this time, the Germany that Hitler built up as a war machine with the express intention of making his war strength so great that he could not be beaten, is being beaten before the eyes of the Germans, right in their cities where the hurricanes of bombs drop like something that was never witnessed on earth before. Nature in her earthquakes and tornadoes of fire can cause immense losses but nature's forces are unharnessed while the air raid is made to strike with unerring skill.

The Germans "have caught it" this time. They won't be able to forget it. Berlin will disappear, so will other centres which Hitler has highly organized for war. In due time with the invading forces of the United Nations and the skies overhead charged with destruction pouring down upon everything that works for Hitler's war machine, Hitler himself will disappear with his cities. It cannot be that that monster who caused all this to take place because of his fiendish desire for vengeance and for the opportunity for looting the world will not cease to be when so much of Germany is being destroyed.

The Germany that escaped largely from actual punishment in the first world war is not to escape this time. She must pay a tremendous price in the destruction that is required to convince that stiff-necked people that they are not the masters of the world and that the price of aggression is the highest price an offending nation can pay.

Down Fleeing Huns

There was no surprise at the news the other day that German officers, commanding units in the Dnieper Bend trap in which the Russians had driven or caught ten German divisions, were flown out in transport planes in large numbers leaving their men to fight on against certain elimination while the officers were taken out by planes. But that was not all that happened. The Russian story told of more than 300 of the German officers having been shot down by the Russians in the escaping transports.

The public would expect such action on the part of the German command to leave the men and try to extricate the officers by air. That itself was hazardous as the results showed, for many were lost. The military class in Germany is shown in its true colors, it is a force that regards nothing but the selfish interest of itself. German commanders, having allowed their ten divisions to fall into a trap where they were doomed, would naturally as the Prussian spirit moves the Germans, proceed to evacuate the officers.

But they counted without the Russians. To the deadly aim of Red guns the fugitive Nazi commanders were ideal targets.

Moon and Trees

The "old wives' tale" that the phases of the moon have a profound effect on living organisms may not be entirely fantastic after all, according to Dr. Harold S. Burr, Yale professor of anatomy, in The Yale Journal of Biology and Medicine. He describes preliminary experiments which apparently show a strong correlation between the activity of maple trees and the phases of the moon.

Temperature, barometric pressure, relative humidity, the weather and the phases of the moon were noted. Daily rhythmic changes in the potential difference were recorded. Such rhythms in plants are well known and have been extensively studied. Records showed nothing unusual "except that the same kind of rhythm can be determined by electrical methods as is found by other observational techniques."

A study of the continuous recordings for several months disclosed the astonishing fact of a tremendous and very sharp rise in the average potential difference approximately every thirty days. While admitting that the "correlations are not exact," he declares that on the basis of the evidence so far collected, one could predict by means of electrical measurements the changing lunar phases within forty-eight hours.

In conclusion, Dr. Burr states, "It is possible, of course, that cosmic rays, radio storms and many other unknown factors may be implicated. Further study of this will be necessary, but it seems evident that some environmental factor other than meteorological changes or some inherent protoplasmic property of the system must be considered."

Travel

Civilians who have to travel could help relieve the congestion, too, and add to their own comfort, if they would only follow a few simple rules, Clarence Woodbury observes in The American Magazine. They have been stated often before, but they need to be reiterated:

1. Take just as little baggage as possible.
2. Check all baggage that you do not need en route.
3. Label all baggage clearly to show your name, street and city address.
4. Purchase your ticket ahead of time to avoid last-minute jams and delays.
5. If your plans are changed, cancel reservations early.
6. Take earlier trains than would normally be necessary.
7. Give up your seat in the diner as soon as you have finished eating.
8. Schedule your trip for the middle of the week to avoid travelling on weekends.

Most important of all: Before undertaking a trip today, every American should ask himself: Do I really need to make this journey?

Delinquent Parents

(Christian Science Monitor)

New York City is plowing new ground with its special classes for "delinquent parents," announced last week. This delves at the problem of badly behaved children nearer its roots than most methods do.

A woman widely known for her successful work with "problem" children declared recently that there were no delinquent children, but only delinquent parents. Her view coincides with that of nearly all workers in this field. But parents are usually eager to learn.

The Chinese have always held parents responsible for the misbehavior of children. Chinese-American children appearing in New York City courts average only two in ten years.

AIR WACs

Oh, if I were a maiden fair,
Say twenty-two or three,
With none who looked to me for care,
An Air Corps WAC I'd be.

Were I as slender, straight and tall
And half as good to see
As those who last week came to call,
An Air Corps WAC I'd be.

Oh, had I eyes as clear and bright
As those which smiled on me,
And teeth as straight and pearly white,
An Air Corps WAC I'd be.

But I am much too old and stout
To fly or go to sea,
And so at home must sit about
And wholly useless be.

For this is what the WACs declare
To lads the world around:
"You man the ships and guard the air
And we will guard the ground."

BY-GONE YEARS

"Pussy," the mascot at No. 2 fire hall was taking a snooze on the truck this morning when an alarm called the firemen to a chimney blaze on Chatham St. The cat remained upon the truck and was whirled away to the fire and was on the truck again ready for the return trip to the fire hall.

The members of the Excelsior Young Men's Club in connection with Holloway Street Methodist Church gave a sleigh drive last evening in company with their lady friends. After a jolly time riding over city and country roads the party returned to the Sunday school rooms where refreshments were served and an enjoyable program put on. Bert Adams and Harry Poste led in community singing.

Mr. Charles Rollins, of Coe Hill, Warden of the County of Hastings, was in town today.

Mr. Fred Lee, of Campbellford, will shortly take up residence in Belleville.

Mrs. John Buckley, Mrs. Joseph Pitt and Mrs. James Power of Read, Tyendinaga Township, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Dan Cotter, Burnham St.

Mr. J. Wilfred Holmes, who has been the efficient city tax collector for some time, will be appointed to the office of City Clerk to succeed Mr. W. J. Thompson, who recently resigned. At a meeting of the civic committee it was recommended that a bylaw be prepared appointing Mr. Holmes as city clerk. He is now discharging the duties of city clerk and as such is advertising for a tax collector to succeed him in that position.

A Canadian Is "Duke of Groceries"

(From "Time" Magazine, New York)

A powerful newcomer has arisen in the U.S. wholesale grocery business. Under the very noses of the alpaca-sleeved grocer barons, dapper, cold-eyed Nathan Cummings, 47, has fashioned himself a duchy. Cummings, boss of Chicago and Baltimore's Sprague Warner-Kenny Corp., wound up in 12 hours of feverish trading a deal that made him a real power in the business.

For about $1,500,000 Grocer Cummings bought up some 85 per cent of the stock of Western Grocer Co. of Marshalltown, Iowa, one of the biggest wholesale grocers between the Mississippi and the Rockies. By this stroke, he mushroomed his interests over three-quarters of the U.S., acquiring ten canneries and one packaging plant, along with Western's subsidiary, Marshall Canning Co.

Until four years ago, Cummings was doing well as a candy and biscuit maker. Born in St. John, N.B. he went to work at 14. Later he became his father's partner in a shoe store, branched out into shoe wholesaling, added a sideline of rubber importing.

In 1934, he sold out his rubber and shoe interests and bought control of McCormick's, Ltd., a candy and biscuit maker of London, Ont. Within three years he was fighting British-controlled George Weston, Ltd., for the Canadian market. Upshot: Weston bought McCormick's, Ltd., but kept Cummings to run it.

He did such a job that in 1939 "friends in Dun & Bradstreet" asked him to run Baltimore's 72-year-old and limping C. D. Kenny Co., wholesale grocers. He soon controlled the company. In 1942 he bought into Chicago's Sprague, Warner Co., the Midwest's biggest wholesale grocer, and merged it with Kenny.

Cummings' streamlining is fast and ruthless. He shocks fuddy-duddies in the trade. When he took over Sprague, Warner he found that it was staggering along with some 50,000 descriptive labels because of the traditional practice of buying up trade names when wholesale grocers go out of business, and keeping the names. He dumped all but some 5,000 fast-moving items. Other profit-losing ratholes were plugged, and Sprague, Warner-Kenny made $311,465 in profits last year on its gross of $32,000,000, a good return for the low-profit but quick-turnover wholesale grocery business. This year, Cummings expects his merged companies to gross $50,000,000 while supplying 60,000 grocers, restaurants, etc. from the Atlantic seaboard to the Rockies.

Although the bulk of his business has moved west, Cummings still makes his home in Baltimore, but spends half his time in Chicago. Because of his Baltimore connections, some gossips say that Cummings is only a "front man" for Baltimore's wealthy Commercial Credit Co.

Cummings readily admits that Commercial Credit helped to finance his rise. But it has no strings on him.

Recently he borrowed $3,250,000 from Cleveland, Chicago and Manhattan banks. Part of it he used to buy Western, the rest to pay off Commercial Credit.

One Bright Spot in the World

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Who invented the first modern type of surgical needle? Strange as it may seem, the Eskimo claims this honour. The needle, made of driftwood, was long and curved so that it would slip easily in and out of skins stretched tight and laid flat. It had to be three-sided as far as the middle to avoid tearing; the back end of the needle had to be round with a hole that could be threaded quickly. The Eskimos were amazingly agile with this needle. They employed it in making and mending innumerable articles of daily use, from footwear to fleet kyaks—those light boats made of skin that draw little water and are so steady in a breeze!

* * *

The Eskimo is a happy-go-lucky fellow who eats meat and fish raw from necessity rather than preference, and who has as many wives as he can afford. He is so ingenious in his inventions, so persevering and brave that it is no wonder he has developed a feeling of superiority over the white man, whom he calls "kablunak" or "person with the big brow" and considers descended from the red fox.

* * *

The Eskimos of 100 years ago who went "down to the sea in ships"—those tiny kayaks made with such skill — were great whale-hunters. Many Eskimos of today also venture far out onto the briney in search of the denizens of the deep that are so huge that they know not their "own flesh, as great kings may Not know the farther places where they reign." Some whales are more than 100 feet long, with waist-measure of 40 feet and weight of 150 tons. A fully grown whale can stay under water for one hour because of a good supply of over-oxygenated blood. "Spoutings" or blowings aerate the blood thoroughly. A sperm whale blows about once every 10 seconds. An enormous eater, the whale can get rid of a great octapus in one mouthful! It never has tooth-ache. The teeth are about a foot apart and no food can get stuck between them.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press

Ottawa, Feb. 21 —(CP)— Profiting by bitter experience in the East, National Housing Administration officials are laying plans and surveying West Coast cities in anticipation of a rush of population to that area when the European conflict ends and all forces are concentrated in the Pacific.

"We don't want any more Halifax muddles and heartbreak," an official said, referring to the overcrowding of that port during the early unplanned rush of the war.

Labor Notes: The government is scanning the field of possible representatives of the public, labor and employers to fill 13 positions on important labor boards.

Three of the positions are on the expanded War Labor Board which, now composed of a chairman, a labor representative and an employer representative, is to be increased under the new wage-control order to a six-man board—a chairman vice-chairman, two representatives of the public and one each of labor and employers. The reduction in the proportionate representation of labor has been one of the major criticisms of the new order.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has declared the government's intention to consider some revisions after all major labor organizations have made representations. No appointments are expected to be made until a decision is reached on these changes.

The new Wartime Labor Relations Board which is to have charge of administering the new labor code on labor relations is to be composed of a chairman, vice-chairman and not more than eight other members.

It is considered likely that the man chosen to head the board will be one already closely in touch with labor matters. Within the labor department itself three names are mentioned as possibles—Deputy Minister Arthur MacNamara, Assistant Deputy Minister Vincent MacDonald, who had an important part in drafting the order, and Assistant Deputy Minister M. M. Maclean, who also helped frame the code and charge of the department's conciliation service which will hold an important place in the functioning of the new regulations.

COXEY'S ARMY

Fifty years ago this spring "Gen." Jacob Selcher Coxey marched into Washington at the head of what he called "The Army of the Commonweal."

Many may be surprised to learn that Gen. Coxey is still living at Massillon, Ohio, at the age of 90.

Early in the year following the Panic of 1893 Coxey issued a call for a march of unemployed men on Washington to demand that Congress pass bills providing for a public roads program and the issue of $50,000,000 in non-interest-bearing bonds to relieve unemployment and distress.

This presentation of their grievances by the unemployed to Congress personally was called "petition in boots."

Small bands of men started from many parts of the country to respond to Coxey's call. The original plan was for all groups to meet in Washington for a demonstration on May Day, 1894.

Owing to a long rainy season and bad weather Gen. Coxey and "Marshal" Carl Browne, his chief organizer and publicity man, had to set out from Massillon with a comparatively small "army," probably about 500.

Although "The Army of the Commonweal" was met with large crowds in every city through which it passed, there were very few "enlistments."

The army reached Washington April 24, 1894, and was reinforced by about a thousand unemployed men from other sections of the country who had answered the call.

Although the authorities made no attempt to interfere with Coxey and his followers, local police arrested the General and his Marshal for holding a public meeting on the Capitol grounds without a permit. Both Coxey and Browne were fined $5 and sentenced to 20 days in jail.

From this incident we get the saying, "Coxey was arrested for walking on the grass," which means punishing a person for a trifling technical trespass when he is doing something objectionable to the authorities, but has violated no important law.

"Ragged as Coxey's army" also became a by-word.

In 1914 Gen. Coxey led another but smaller march upon Washington for a similar purpose.

He started life as a stationary engineer in rolling mills and later entered the scrap iron business and silica sandstone quarrying.

On various tickets Coxey ran for Congress, Governor of Ohio, Senator and President. From 1931 to 1933 he was mayor of Massillon.

Coxey named one of his sons "Legal Tender."

RCAF Liberator Is Believed Down In Atlantic Ocean

Ottawa, Feb. 21 (CP) — An RCAF Liberator bomber with six men aboard is overdue and believed to be down in the Atlantic Ocean off the East Coast, it was learned unofficially today.

Those aboard included P.O. David Griffin, with RCAF Public Relations.

It was understood next-of-kin of the others aboard the plane also have been advised and their names will be made public shortly.

While no official statement was immediately available here, it was presumed that aircraft of the Eastern Air Command, and possibly naval units, were searching the area for the missing bomber.

It could not be learned how long the plane has been missing or where it was going when the mishap occurred.

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP) — P.O. Dave Griffin, 37, a native of Hamilton and a former assistant city editor of the Toronto Star, is missing on a flight off the east coast of Canada, his wife has been advised. He joined the RCAF as Public Relations Officer last March.

Griffin entered newspaper work with the Hamilton Spectator and worked for the Windsor Star and the Sudbury Star before coming to Toronto.

Since joining the air force he has served in Ottawa, the Aleutians, and Halifax.

He was an outstanding half-mile runner and represented Canada at the Olympic Games in Amsterdam in 1928.

Chas. Bedaux Dies Of Overdose of Sleeping Powders

Miami, Fla., Feb. 21 (AP) — Chas. E. Bedaux, international mystery man, died at a hospital here Friday night and John E. Burling, immigration agent, said he had taken an overdose of sleeping powders and left a suicide note.

Burling said Bedaux swallowed the powders a few hours after he had been informed that a Grand Jury would be convened to decide whether he could be indicted for treason and for communication with high German officials and the Vichy French government.

A special board of inquiry had decided that Bedaux was a citizen of the United States and could be admitted to this country.

Bedaux had been held by immigration officials here since he was brought to Miami from North Africa in an army plane late in December.

He was taken to the hospital on Tuesday in an unconscious condition and never regained consciousness.

Montreal Tram Strike Ended

Montreal, Feb. 21—(CP)—Streetcars and buses operated throughout Montreal today, a development that surprised a good number of residents who went to bed Sunday night believing that another strike of employees of Montreal tramways was on.

A 30-hour strike of 4,000 operators ended late Saturday night, and cars operated normally throughout yesterday. Everything seemed back to normal until mid-evening when a sudden flurry of rumors and conflicting statements gave Montrealers another fit of tram-strike jitters.

The original walk-out started Friday afternoon when two members of the C. C. L. were suspended for refusing to man the same cars as members of an American Federation of Labor affiliate. The C. C. L. has a collective bargaining agreement with the tramways, result of a 60-hour strike last March.

The tie-up became complete by Friday night, with the operators demanding a closed shop for the C. C. L. But at a continuous meeting Saturday afternoon and Saturday night, C. C. L. officials told the men to go back to work and leave the matter of a closed shop to a joint federal-provincial inquiry.

The men refused at first, but finally agreed to return to work after Paul Emile Marquette, C. C. L. organizer, and other union officials threatened to resign if the workers did not "observe the law and return to work at once."

Sink 2 Jap Ships Damage Another

Chungking, Feb. 21 — (AP) — Allied headquarters announced today the sinking of two Japanese vessels and damage to another in scattered American air attacks Friday and Saturday off the coasts of China and French Indo-China.

Fighter bombers dive-bombed and destroyed a 2,700-ton enemy merchant vessel off Campha Port, on the French Indo-China coast, while medium bombers sent a 1,200-ton freighter to the bottom off the east China coast in separate sweeps Saturday.

Medium bombers also attacked 2 950-ton cargo boats off the Gulf of Tongkin Friday, leaving one with a large quantity of oil streaming astern.

All attacks were carried out without loss, the communique said.

THEY'RE DINGHY PACKING MAMAS

Parachute packers at Rockcliffe Air Station, Ottawa, have a new duty. Since Rockcliffe was chosen home base of the R.C.A.F. Overseas Mail Squadron, they have become expert at testing and packing rubber life boats carried by the flying mail men. A.W.1 C. M. Coady, St. Johns, Newfoundland, in upper picture, demonstrates the latest five-seater American type dinghy. The alloy oars break down to two parts for packing purposes, but give sturdy service. The container, just behind A.W.1 Coady's shoulder, is filled with carbon dioxide which is used to inflate the yellow, rubber fabric boat. In the lower picture, first stage in packing an "H" type dinghy is shown. The life lines are neatly arranged while a young lady—top right— uses a vacuum pump to exhaust air from the deflated dinghy. The steel container at lower left, carries slightly more than three and a half pounds of carbon dioxide, liquified under pressure, used to inflate the rubber dinghy. Left to right the packers are A.W.2 B. Murphy, St. Johns, Nfld.; Corporal W. A. Palen, 536 Hilson Ave., Ottawa; A.W.1 C. M. Coady, St. Johns, Nfld., and A.W.1 D. I. Smith, New Glasgow, N.S.—(R.C.A.F. # JAPANESE COLUMN BEING HEMMED IN

British Relief Troops Press Toward Exit of Pass in Burma

New Delhi, Feb. 21 (CP) — Confused fighting around the eastern exit of Ngakyedauk Pass in Burma where the 7th. Indian Division has been cut off, with the Japanese force there "beginning to disintegrate," was reported today by Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's Southeast Asia command.

British relief troops were continuing to press from the north toward the eastern exit, the communique said, and a column of Japanese seeking refuge in the hills two miles east of the exit is being hemmed in.

Another enemy column which crossed the Mayu range into the Kalapazin Valley and struck south toward the British rear at Buthedaung has been split up, it was said, and a raiding column which brought the Bawli supply road under fire for a time was eliminated except for a small group.

British troops carried out a surprise raid on enemy coastal defences south of Maungdaw Saturday night.

In the Kaladan Valley to the northwest, Africa troops were reported making new advances and in the Chin Hills widespread patrol actions were under way.

Chinese forces in the Hukawng Valley in extreme Northern Burma have routed the Japanese from the entire north bank of the Tanai River from southeast of Taipha Ga to Mawnighka, the communique said, and have approached to within a few hundred yards of Laawng.

Victor T. Goggin New Chairman Liquor Board

Toronto, Feb. 21—(CP)—Victor T. Goggin, Winnipeg-born engineering executive who has served as General Manager of Wartime Housing, Ltd., since March, 1941, has resigned that post and within a week will assume new duties as chief commissioner of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario.

Premier Drew announced last night that Mr. Goggin has accepted the appointment to succeed Hon. A. St. Clair Gordon, whose resignation from the post he had held since April, 1939, was announced by the Ontario Premier last Tuesday.

Through his work with Wartime Housing, said Col. Drew, Mr. Goggin "has established contact with most of the municipalities in Ontario and this will be extremely useful to him in his new work."

Many Business Connections.

Mr. Goggin, who now lives in Toronto, has many business connections in Canada and the United States. Educated here and at Regina, he joined Wartime Housing after several years in New York as head of Goggin and Ripley, Inc., engineering consultants. He was president of the Canadian Club of New York in 1938, 1939 and 1940 and was in the forefront of activities supporting the British War effort. He was founder and first president of the Maple Leaf Fund, Canadian War Relief organization in the United States.

In announcing Mr. Gordon's resignation last week, Col. Drew said the move was made necessary because Mr. Gordon, Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Kent West since 1934, wished to devote more time to his business interests. He has manufacturing interests in Wallaceburg, Ont.

Col. Drew also disclosed that Mr. Gordon continued to act as liquor commissioner at the Premier's personal request after the liberal administration was defeated in last August's provincial election.

The War Today— Japan Rocked by U.S. Victory Truk Opens Decisive Battle

By DeWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The U.S. Navy's victory at Truk is a dream come true, for it has administered a defeat which has so rocked the Mikado's capital that that the Japanese are making no effort to conceal the devastating effects, both moral and material.

Not only has the Tokyo government acknowledged sweeping destruction but it tacitly has admitted the gravity of the situation by firing the chiefs of staff for both the Navy and the Army. None less than the great General Hideki Tojo, Japan's militaristic premier and master gangster, has taken over the position of chief of general staff of the army in addition to his other duties.

Terrific Havoc to Jap Ships, Planes

During the two-day engagement at Truk, naval forces sank at least 19 ships, including several war vessels, destroyed 201 warplanes and damaged more than 50 others, and probably sunk seven other ships. Bombs also created havoc among the enemy installations in this great base. As against this big killing U.S. forces lost only seventeen planes and suffered moderate damage to one ship.

Meantime the marines and army forces have continued to consolidate positions on the important Jap base of Eniwetok. And to the south, American destroyers have blasted the Rabaul and Kavieng bases.

Decisive Pacific Battle Begun

Tokyo certainly is right in saying the decisive battle of the Pacific has begun. The enemy also is both correct and frank in asserting that the raid on Truk is America's challenge, for there is far more significance in this sensational operation than appears in the material damage wrought, though that in itself is a heavy blow to Japan.

The big point, of course, is Allied fighting forces have demonstrated their ability to penetrate Japan's most powerful naval base by air, from aircraft carriers convoyed by a large fleet of warships. In doing this they invited the Japanese navy to come out and fight.

Possibilities in Great U.S. Strength

This momentous development was no flash in the pan. They were able to carry out such a highly dangerous operation because they are stronger than the enemy. Their superiority is due to two causes: they have been constantly amassing power as the result of the tremendous national war effort, and the Japanese have been steadily losing strength.

"But," someone protests, "how can that be when the Japanese have in their possession all the vast wealth of China and Indonesia?"

It is true the Japanese have seized enough resources to enable them to wage world war indefinitely — if they were able to utilize those resources. In order to do that, however, the raw materials must be transported over thousands of miles of water to the Mother Country to be fabricated.

Japan Like Midas

Water transport means ships — and the Japanese just haven't got the ships and they can't build them in sufficient numbers to meet their needs. They never have had enough cargo vessels, and they have been losing shipping steadily because the Allies have been sinking more than Japan could produce.

Thus they are like Midas. For a long time everything they touched turned to gold, but they finally discovered that it wasn't doing them much good because they couldn't eat it or beat it into weapons.

HYDRO Lightens The Way

● In the operating room, under a shadowless flood of light, surgeons perform miracles with the help of Hydro. Sensitive electric cutting instruments are used in many delicate operations. Elsewhere, it powers the X-ray and therapy machines. It protects nurseries from air-borne germ infection. It conditions the air, runs the elevators, pumps the water. And these are but a few of the many ways in which electricity serves.

Hospitals provide an outstanding example of the benefits derived from 24-hour Hydro service. Indeed, without the ever-present aid of electricity, there could be no modern hospital. With its help . . . surgery and medicine discover new ways and means to fight and control disease and illness . . . industry creates new and better products for the progress and welfare of mankind.

Just as the doctor relies on electricity to aid him in healing the sick, so we, in our everyday life depend on it to assist in performing many of our daily tasks. No matter where we live . . . be it city or farm . . . we can look forward to even better living in the days to come, by planning now to enjoy more of the benefits that electricity can bring.

U.P.E. Club Entertains At Social Evening

The United Prince Edward-Belleville Club entertained their husbands and friends at a jolly get-together supper on Thursday evening at the Y.M.C.A. Over 85 sat down to tables decorated in red and white, with blossoming red Kalancho.

The menu (with due regard for war-time rulings) savored much with traditional Prince Edward hospitality; from every part of the county guests arrived and the renewal of old friendships was spiced with wit and laughter. Preceding the collection, which, after defraying expenses, was given over to the corvette fund, all sang "O Canada." The toast to "The King" was responded to by the National Anthem and to "Our Guests" by "The More We Get Together, the Happier We'll Be," followed by Auld Lang Syne."

Progressive euchre and bingo were enjoyed, with several carrying off prizes.

The party broke up with many expressing the hope that this would be an annual affair.

The success of the evening is largely due to the committee in charge, to those who donated prizes, to the flower shop, to Mr. Shortt of the Y.M.C.A. and to those who contributed so liberally to the collection.

Dotted collar and cuffs are detachable

ALL BUT THE tailored suits of the severely classical type boast softening touches for Spring wear, since the trend is in the direction of frankly pretty clothes. This suit is of beige woolen and has softly draped, and detachable collar and cuffs of black and beige dotted crepe. The jacket is slimly fitted with button closing down the front and the gored skirt has a slight flare.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Engaged to Man Overseas, Falling in Love with One at Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a young man, 21 years old and draft deferred. I have been going with a young girl who recently moved into the community, and am very fond of her. I think she cares for me, also, but is reluctant to admit it because she is engaged to a young sailor and does not want to hurt him.

Do you think I ought to continue trying to win her, or should I forget her? Sometimes I think I'm not being fair to the boy overseas.

— U. D.

If the girl you describe is falling out of love with the sailor and falling in love with you, it would be better for the boy overseas to know exactly how this girl's affections stood. It is no guarantee of happiness for any man to remain engaged and eventually marry a girl who cares more for someone else. The break may hurt like salt in a raw wound, at the time, but in the long run it's better for all parties concerned.

Soldier Doubtful About Things His Mother Writes About Wife.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I married Jennie, the family spoke of her as a "mousey little creature." She's quiet, affectionate, and likes to keep within her own shell. We got along fine. My family who are on the argumentative, aggressive side, couldn't understand why I fell for Jennie, but she was a relief.

I've been in the service for six months and am about to go overseas. My mother and sisters write me unbelievable things about my wife, and her carryings-on with other men while I am away. It's so against reason that Jennie could have completely changed that I can't believe these things. Still they're disturbing. How should I treat this situation?

— S. S. G.

I'd write to Jennie and ask her if these things are true. You needn't say you heard from your own family, as that would be throwing gasoline on a fire of dislike already kindled. And then I'd take Jennie's word for it. Even six months absence from a husband is not likely to change completely the essential character of a person such as you describe your wife.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

LOWDOWN ON MAKE-UP

The woman who trowels on the paint and calcimine, sparing no money and using little time, could never have been told that the purpose of synthetic complexion coloring is to freshen the feminine face, not to make it look as if it had weathered a hard winter, might not survive to see the spring. Enough is enough and too much makes a woman look like sin.

The time has come, my little chickadees, when fashion blushes must be discarded or toned down. The color of the rouge must be precisely and exactly right, not blatant, but modest. Lip sticking must be attended to with discretion.

It is natural and right that beautifying should step forward and along the right path. Therefore, beauticians have come to the conclusion that natural effects are the order of the day. If nature has not blessed you with cheek roses, you are justified in plucking some out of a jar or a compact, but you are not to select the blazing red beauties, but the wild rose with its soft daintiness. Excessive make-up is outmoded. And, somehow, it is not suitable during a period of war when women must be helpful, practical, efficient. It just doesn't fit the times. Why be old fashioned?

An excess of war paint makes the complexion look coarse. If the poor dear is numbered among the faded beauties, it brings sags and wrinkles right before the public eye. Red smears upon the cheeks make the eyes seem deeper set; they produce a masklike appearance that is expressionless, suggests fatigue.

It is the faint blush that is lovely, that brings out the starshine in the eyes. Let it creep up onto the temples and over the eyelids. Apply powder first, then use the rouge pad lightly, applying powder again so there will be no definite edges to the rosy coloring. Of course, some women like to look painted. But the effect is crude, has no appeal to the discriminating eye.

There should be no brink where paint and powder meet. The factory blush must do a gradual fade. If the trick is turned cleverly it can deceive the eye of the most discerning critic. Not that it matters, these days. We accept make-up as a privilege of modern life; and so it is.

One purpose of rouge is to impart a semblance of health and vitality. Vitality is the winning card. Ladies of frazzled nerves and backbones made of chiffon belong to the clinging ivy period.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wife Declines to Wash Lipstick from Husband's Shirts

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Not long ago, I read something of yours in which you spoke of the mid-channel years of matrimony. Well, lady, I'm in mid-channel all right and I'm paddling my own matrimonial canoe. What do you think of my navigation?

Tom and I have been married ten years. We have three very promising children. I know he's terribly fond of me and that he couldn't do without me, the kids or our home. But like the rest of the lads, he's taken up with some of the girls who are helping to win the war and wreck homes while they're being little patriots.

For the last few weeks, Tom's shirts and handkerchiefs have been smeared with lipstick. At first I put them in the washing machine and said nothing about it. Then the wifely worm turned and I left the shirts and handkerchiefs in the laundry basket.

When my husband asked where were his clean shirts, I told him there weren't any, that he'd find all those marked with lipstick, along with his handkerchiefs, in the laundry basket. Then I cooed sweetly, "You ought to tell those girls to use that new brand of lipstick which washes out easily. It's a great saving of time and tears." Tom bought himself some more shirts and those bearing the lipstick brand are still in the wash-basket, where they may stay for the duration for all I care.

W. W. (Wifely Worm)

Congratulations, my dear lady, on handling this situation with such good humor and high spirits. There's probably no more to it then just a case of keeping up with the galivantin' Jones.

You'd be very foolish, indeed, to break up your home for such an otherwise good husband. As the Scotch say, men love to be thought a de'll with the women.

PINK POWDER HIDES SALLOWNESS

Now spring is trying to edge in on winter, you're apt to feel washed-out looking in the stronger daylight. Try the new pink powder shades to add warm colour to your skin. Beauty experts are placing pink powder back on our dressing tables with the hint that it counteracts that look of fatigue, as well as natural sallowness. First, wake your skin up by nightly cleansing in a gentle whipped cream lather, followed by brisk dashes of cold water. Now you're ready to see what one of the new powders will do for you. There's a fairly wide range of pink shades to blend with the different skin tones from delicate to vivid. Choose that most suited to your complexion. It will give life to the skin when wearing dark or neutral shades, and is flattering to iron gray hair. Another pink tone gives a lovely vivid effect for evening. The new pinks can be worn alone or over a foundation powder of the natural skin tone. The pink make-up calls for lipstick and rouge also on the pinky side to complete the glowing picture.

Women's Activities

CARMEL Y.P.U.

The regular meeting of the Carmel Y.P.U. was held on Feb. 16, in the Carmel United Church, Miss Hilda Howes opened the meeting. The Scripture reading was given by Miss Marion Chambers. Meditation was read by Miss Hilda Howes followed with Mrs. Earle Dafoe leading in prayer. Miss Eleanor Lenard gave a reading and Miss Hilda Howes gave a very interesting topic. Mr. Douglas Goodfellow took up the collection. Mr. Harold Howes took over the business part of the meeting. Recreation was in charge of Douglas Goodfellow. The Young People enjoyed a sleigh riding party.

GILEAD Y.P.U.

The Gilead Y.P.U. had an enjoyable St. Valentine party at the Livingstone home on Feb. 14th. Shirley Badgley opened the meeting with quiet music. Business discussion followed. Earl Ross invited the Y.P.U. to his home for the next meeting. It was decided to invite the Carmel, Bethany and Cannifton Y.P.U. to attend their next meeting. Carl Haines, George Clare and Beulah May were asked to help with the recreation for this meeting. Ruth Livingstone read "What is Wrong with Our World." Carl Haines, Ruth Livingstone and Beulah May led in games and contests appropriate for St. Valentine's Day. A dainty lunch served by the hostess was enjoyed by the fifteen young people present.

PHILLIPSTON-ZION W. I.

The regular meeting of Phillipston-Zion branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Miss Addie Gifford on Feb. 17th, in connection with a pot luck dinner and quilting with an attendance of eighteen adults and four children. Four quilts were completed, to be donated to Belleville branch of the Red Cross. The president, Mrs. W. Tufts, was in charge. The financial report was presented. This showed that since May 1st, 1943, Bethel and Zion communities have contributed $199.12 for use by W. I. in war activities. Several letters from local men still in training in Canada, also those overseas now serving in Africa and Italy were read in grateful acknowledgement of Christmas parcels sent to them. It was arranged that each member write to one of these men, since letters mean so much in maintaining morale. It was decided that $15. be contributed to the Central Fund of F.W.I.O. The topic, "She never dreamed but she had ideals; she never preached, but she had a creed," was ably dealt with by Mrs. J. P. Ketcheson who stated that the ideals of our forefathers had much to do in making Canada the great nation she is today. They didn't have much in the way of worldly possessions but they did possess many firm convictions and ideals that there was dignity in labor, for he who produces food from the earth is of the highest type of mankind. Their belief was in a creed that the world owed no man a living but that it owed every man an opportunity to make a living. Many endured untold hardships and tasted the misfortunes of adversity but there was something in their hearts looking in the face of life seeing goo and a clearness of vision. They taught their children the worthwhile things of life until they grew up and took prominent places in the world to become noble examples of wise parents' training. Where would our great Canada be today if it hadn't been for the courage and ideals of our pioneers? Proceeds of dinner, $4.50.

Plumbing Is Health So Treat It Kindly

By far the greater proportion of calls on the wartime plumber's busy time is to make repairs or relieve emergencies which arise through either carelessness or ignorance on the part of the householder. In a bulletin urging conservation of the plumber's time when it is needed for major jobs, the Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating sets forth a few simple rules which will save both trouble and money for the householder.

The bulletin urges care in keeping drains free of material such as grease, lint, hair, coffee grounds and bits of garbage. Minor clogs are often relieved by the use of a good drain pipe solvent. Shutting faucets firmly but not too tightly will prolong their life and prevent "the drips." Remember when cleaning fixtures that anything that will scratch glass will scratch fixtures. Don't let garbage stand in the sink. Don't drag pots and pans across its surface and don't stand hot pots in it.

Avoid excessive temperatures in water heaters and see that safety controls are kept in good working order. Attend properly to the lubrication of motors on circulators, oil burners and stokers.

And lastly, points out the Institute, when something does go wrong, get your plumber in immediately.

TO GET SOOT OFF GARMENTS

It's not unusual on a day when there's no breeze to find soot specks and smudges firmly settled on garments. Young mothers often take in baby and his carriage to find them liberally marked. To remove these oily specks from bonnet, mittens and so on, first shake off as much as you can, then immerse the baby things in gentle fine fabric suds safe for anything safe in water alone. Let suds lost off the remaining soot particles—don't rub them in. Dip the garments way down in the water and then bring them up quickly. In this way you leave the soot specks on the top of the suds, and they are not caught up again in the material. To mould the bonnet to its rounded shape, stuff it with a towel or slip a small saucer into the back. Carriage robes, hand or machine-knit, should be dried flat on a padded table or clean cotton laid on the floor. If the robe has ribbon bows, remove them before laundering. If they show soil, unfasten and wash the ribbon, using a little starch or sugar to give stiffening.

Rolled Rib Roast

For small families this is still one of the choicest roasts—tasty and economical
A three to five pound rolled rib roast is the ideal order for the small family: Delicious hot or cold, it will also supply at least one savoury left-over meal:
A roast of this size takes about 30 minutes to the pound for medium done. Place fat-side-up on a rack in an open pan, 325° F. With the roast, cook potatoes which you have previously parboiled in their skins then peeled and salted:
Serve with a leafy green vegetable and brown gravy:

CARVING A ROLLED RIB ROAST
The roast is placed on the platter with the largest cut surface down;
Push the fork into the left side of the roast an inch or two from the top—keep the guard up. Now slice smoothly across the grain from the right side to the left. Uniform slices one-eighth of inch thick make nice servings. Thin slices make the roast go further. Carve servings for all present before transferring from platter to plates. Remove cords only as necessary.

Pamela Blake demonstrates a good reducing exercise.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Missus Hippy deplores her spread amidships, wishes she were as hipless as an eel. When she crowds herself into a double seat in train or bus, the other fellow gives her a dirty look. That does not make life any pleasanter for her.

She can roll them thar hips away if she will be persistent, continue daily exercise for several months. She must remember that fat cells can't be crushed to death in a hurry.

Here is what must be done; lie flat on the back on the floor, hands at the sides. Lift the left leg high, roll to the right, stretching the leg to the utmost length, touching the floor with the toes. Right, left and so on six times. Then up with the other foot. By stretching the arm as well as the leg, there will be no uncomfortable twist at the waist line.

Second exercise to reduce hips and thighs; stand with feet three inches apart. Swing both arms forward and upward in a half circle. As the arms come down keep the back as straight as you can, bend the knees, take a squatting position. When the arms come up again, rise on the toes. These movements cause the muscles from the waist to knees to put in hard work. As they get stronger, fat cells will evaporate. Adipose tissue cannot stand being disturbed; it goes off and dies.

It is vitally important that foods which contain fat-producing elements should be cut down to the limit. Fats, sweets and starches are the enemies of Missus Hippy. She's not likely to get much fat these days of rationing, but she can still revel in sweets, cereals and pastries, which she would never touch.

Her diet should consist of lean meat, fish, poultry, fruits and fruit juices, vegetables that grow above ground, buttermilk, cottage cheese, unsweetened lemonade.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN

Hydro Home Economist

To prevent loss of food values in cooking meat use gentle heat and don't overcook. Long cooking at high temperature not only has a destructive action on thiamin, but it dries out meat, fish and poultry, and toughens, rather than tenderizes. Learn to use low temperatures for roasting (325 degrees to 350 degrees F.) and, roast uncovered. Use short cooking methods when feasible, that is, for all tender cuts. Be sure, however, to cook all forms of fresh pork very thoroughly, to avoid danger of the disease trichinosis, which comes from eating underdone pork. It is better to accept some destruction of vitamins than to risk infection with this parasite. To avoid vitamin losses, avoid leftovers of cooked meats so far as is practical. Serve leftover roasts sliced cold when possible, rather than warmed over. Reheating causes increased vitamin loss.

Basic Recipe for Pot Roast

A delicious roast may be prepared in this way from the less expensive cuts of beef. Cuts of chuck, rump, round, shoulder, short ribs, brisket, plate or flank may be used for pot roast. It may be cooked with the bones in, or they may be removed and the meat rolled and tied or skewered securely. When the roast is rolled it is easier to serve in slices, and the bones may be saved to use in the soup pot. The bones in the short ribs are left in.

3½ to 4 lbs. meat.
Flour, salt and pepper
3 tablespoons fat or drippings
½ cup hot water

Heat the fat slowly in a heavy deep skillet or deep-well cooker. Dredge the meat with flour and brown well on all sides. Season with salt and pepper, add hot water, cover and let simmer until tender. Add more water as it cooks away. Turn occasionally; simmer 3 to 4 hours or until tender. Remove to a hot platter and thicken the gravy with 2 tablespoons flour blended in the fat remaining in the pan. Gradually stir in 2 cups cold water, and continue stirring until thick and smooth. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Thrifty Changes

One onion finely chopped or sliced may be added while browning meat.

Try one or two garlic cloves finely chopped.

One tablespoon vinegar added to the water helps to season and make the meat more tender.

One-half cup grated horse-radish may be added to gravy.

One bay leaf (broken) and a few chili tepins may be added.

One tablespoon of any meat sauce such as Worcestershire, adds to the flavour.

Adding ¼ tsp. of any favorite herb (thyme, rosemary, etc.) will give the roast a delicious savory flavour.

One teaspoon caraway seed or celery seed is a favorite seasoning.

Tomato juice may be added instead of water.

Add plenty of hot tomato juice or stewed tomatoes the last half-hour. Season with garlic and add 1 cup spaghetti, rice or macaroni and cook until tender.

Whole vegetables (washed and peeled onions, potatoes, carrots, turnips, etc.) may be placed around the meat the last hour. They make a delicious dinner all cooked in one pot.

Try cooking a few parsnips around the roast, arranging them on the platter and sprinkling with a little nutmeg and a few drops of lemon.

Soak a few dried mushrooms for one hour, and add them with the juice to roast the last 20 minutes.

Chopped celery tops and parsley are another adventure in flavouring.

Noodles may be added the last 15 or 20 minutes.

Dumplings are always good and are another way to please everyone. Remove the roast to a hot platter and keep hot while dumplings are cooking. Have about 2½ cups liquid in kettle when you drop in the dumplings.

The Marry-Go-Round

What They Want to Come Home To

We know what the boys are fighting for. They are fighting for the preservation of the democratic way of life, the dear old way of life which they knew and loved. For the right to free speech, free enterprise and free lunch.

Quentin Reynolds said that just at first he got the impression in Italy that they were fighting for souvenirs; their pockets and kitbags were so full of Iron Crosses and German medals and their belts were so laden with German helmets and other trophies. Later, when they and their buddies came up with a few German tricks and cruelties, they discovered what they were fighting against. And then, they got mad!

Anybody who has talked with servicemen on furloughs knows that they know now what they are fighting for. In their homesickness and heartsickness, over there, Canada and all its way and institutions looks like Heaven — the Land of Milk and Honey! Canada, as they knew and loved it—that's what they are fighting to come to!

They are not thinking about a "beautiful new world" filled with sweetness and light, prefabricated houses and possibly prohibition. How do you suppose that soldier who got a furlough to see his dear old dog, would have felt if he had come all those miles and found a "beautiful new dog" in its place? Huh?

No, they are fighting for their dear old country and their dear old homes. For the little shingled house down the lane or the little cozy flat. For the farmhouse on the hilltop or the bungalow with the rose-vine over the lattice. For the plump, rosy-faced Mother in the gingham apron or the slender girl in slacks with a pink ribbon in her hair.

And that same home and that rose-vine and that girl with the pink ribbon better be there when they come back! And old Tige or Rags or Rover, better be sunning himself right beside the old wicker arm chair with the broken rocker, on the front porch.

Everything has got to be just the same when the tired hero comes home! Even the color of your hair and the old dining-room clock that never kept time. Everything just as he remembers it and dreams about it. That's what he wants and what he's fighting for.

So lay his old briar pipe in the old place, and his old scuffs by the hearth, have his old suits pressed and handy, keep the place in the book he was reading and rustle up his favorite dishes for dinner. Beef steak, French frieds and apple pie! That's what he wants to come home to!

SKIM BLEMISHES

Lucky the woman who has a clear smooth complexion. If she is wise, she will make every endeavour to keep it in top form, because it is subject to change. Cleanliness and lubrication are factors that make for skin health. Unless the epidermal coat has a phobia against soap she would use it once or twice a day, following along with a gentle massage with her favorite cream.

Among the afflictions are pimples and blackheads. They come early in life, sometimes at the age of thirteen when the physical mechanism is undergoing glandular changes. Youth isn't very strong on face washing, a swish of a soaped washcloth sufficing. Youth hasn't a very close acquaintance with the goddess hygeia, eating too much sweet stuff, as a rule. When treating acne, the doctor says "no chocolate." Also he will prescribe thorough soapings, hot, moist compresses and a drying lotion. Acne, in its early stages can be halted; after it burrows into the lower layers of the skin it proves stubborn to treatment.

In middle age there are seldom any evidences of eruptions. That is the time when yellow spots appear; they are akin to freckles, sisters under the skin, as it were. Laving with a lotion made of equal parts of peroxide and lemon juice will sometimes cause them to disappear.

Milia, or whiteheads, come at any age. The pore of the skin closes, sebaceous exudations bank up into hard, beadlike masses. To remove these formations, it is necessary to slit each one with a sterilized needle and pick out the deposit. Touch the wound with an antiseptic.

After the areas are cleared of them, make it a practice to use hot water, then cold, to stimulate circulation. Massage vigorously with an oily cosmetic. Avoid astringents. As fat excite the sebaceous glands, it is a good idea to cut down on pastries.

Once upon a time, moles were considered beauty spots. Not now. They should not be tampered with as, on rare occasions, they may become malignant. The medical man who deals with diseases of the skin and scalp can remove them without leaving a scar, using the X-ray or electricity.

Tiny red marks, due to broken capillaries, are successfully treated with the electric needle. Warts, also, are exterminated by that means. Should it happen that you have a blemish of this kind that develops rapidly, has broken white edges, seek professional attention at once. A growth of that character is a senility wart that can prove troublesome.

Superfluous hair is no minor beauty ill; it is a tragedy. As it can be treated by electrolysis no woman should bear with it.

New and Feminine Play Clothes

Softly feminine clothes are cited for beach and general wear at June-in-January resorts. Beach clothes are ruffled but sensibly so, avoiding a fluffy, out-of-place effect. A discreet use of ruffles is shown in this slimming two-piece affair of vermillion chambray with sparkling white ruffling. The built-up waistband on the skirt has a notched V in front and a 3-seam gored section. ### Sulfathiazole in Inflammation of Middle Ear

One of the ailments that follows a head cold or a sinus infection is often an inflammation of the middle ear—otitis media. Repeated attacks of tonsillitis may occur before ear is attacked. If the attack is mild there is just a sense of fullness or dullness in the ear and a slight loss of hearing. If the attack is serious there is severe pain and great loss of hearing particularly at night.

Usual treatment is rest in bed on a low diet, bowels kept open, warm solutions put into outer ear. In severe cases tincture of opium is put into the warm solution. Sometimes a few drops of 5 to 10 solution of cocaine is used. Most cases get better without complications.

Naturally ear specialists and general physicians have been interested in trying the sulfa drugs in cases of otitis media, and in the Swiss Medical Journal Dr. A. M. Hild reports the results of treating this disease with sulfathiazole. He treated 180 cases of acute otitis media where there was a rise in temperature besides the pain and loss of hearing. Of the 180 cases treated with sulfathiazole, 168 responded favorably while there was no definite effect in the other 12. In seven cases antrotomy—opening the antrum—was necessary.

It was found that in the cases treated with sulfathiazole the time necessary for cure was shortened by one-third in comparison with the cases in which no sulfathiazole was used. The sulfathiazole was given in the form of tablets by mouth which made treatment quite simple.

The total dose of sulfathiazole was 16 grams for adults, 9 for children between 2 and 12 years of age, and 6 grams for children less than 2 years of age. These doses were spread over six days, larger doses being given on the first two days.

Dr. Hild suggests that the ear drum be inspected regularly and the hearing tested by whispering because these tests reveal any advancement of the disease process, and an ear specialist could be immediately consulted if necessary. This is important because the sulfa drugs have worked such wonders, the physician and the patients' families might depend upon them entirely instead of making these two tests—ear drum and hearing.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S GOOD to dress up simple, basic clothes with dashing trifles. Grand with a plain suit or dress is a gilet with rippled collar and big bow and matching bag all of taffeta plaided in bright colors on grey.

JUST ONE pretty hat, at least, should be in every woman's wardrobe, no matter how utilitarian the rest may be. Such a hat is a small sailor of heaven blue satin trimmed with big pink and blue satin roses, green leaves and a pale pink veil.

THERE'S PLENTY of novelty in the new Spring coats. Nice with a slim black skirt or dress is a topper of beige made with high, round collarless neckline and a self sash that ties at the side and is finished with two big black silk tassels.

ONE DAY it'll be summer again and you'll be out in search of a swim suit. A neat suit is of bright blue flower print on a white cotton ground, all-over stitched for a quilted effect. Bra top, and trunks with a front-skirt.

'Bud' Poile Scores Four Goals In First N. H. L. Appearance This Year With Toronto Leafs

Toronto Defeats Bruins 10-4 on Saturday but Held to Scoreless Draw With Chicago Sunday

CANADIENS WIN TWO

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

They said he lacked condition, had been away from pressure hockey too long and probably wouldn't "mesh," with his new forward line partners, at least for a couple of games.

So Norman (Bud) Poile, the 19-year-old Fort William, Ont., centre who was one of the National Hockey League's most precocious rookies, came back to Toronto Maple Leafs after almost a year's absence from major league competition to score four goals, three of them within three minutes and 20 seconds.

He did it Saturday, stunning his critics with the best individual effort of the N. H. L.'s 17th weekend of campaigning as Leafs smothered Boston Bruins 10-4. The standings remained pretty much unchanged. Montreal Canadiens became more firmly entrenched than ever with a double victory over New York Rangers, 5-2 at home Saturday and 7-2 on New York ice Sunday. Detroit Red Wings conquered Bruins 6-5 in Detroit Sunday to remain second best, three points ahead of Toronto who battled Chicago Black Hawks to a 0-0 draw Sunday at Chicago in the first scoreless tie for more than two seasons.

Gardiner Busy Man

The weekend's busiest operative was netminder Bert Gardiner of Bruins, who handled 49 shots against Toronto and 47 against Detroit. The Bruins also lost Russ Kopak with an aggravated ankle injury. He will be out at least a week.

Boston trailed all the way against Leafs, despite two goals by busy Bep Guidolin. Young Jackie Hamilton pressed Poile for scoring honors, firing three goals. He actually flashed the red light four times, scoring twice on a penalty shot awarded when dumped by Dit Clapper on a breakaway. After Hamilton beat Gardiner with a high shot to the left corner on his first try, the officials ruled the puck had not been placed in position correctly and Jackie had to do it again.

Awaiting Transfer

Poile scored his first goal in the second period, then added three more late in the third. Poile has been granted permission to play with Leafs while awaiting transfer from the R. C. A. F. to the Canadian Army.

Babe Pratt's four assists against Bruins gave him 13 goals and 33 assists for a 46-point total constituting a new record for an N. H. L. defenceman in a single season. The old mark of 44 points was held by Flash Hollett, who had 19 goals and 25 assists with Bruins in 1942-43.

Against Detroit Sunday, Bruins went to the front with a two-goal first period, but wilted in the second when the Wings scored four times. The Bruins outscored Detroit 3-2 in the last period but could not get the equalizer.

BARONS INCREASE 1ST PLACE LEAD IN AMERICAN

Lowly Hornets Break Their Long Winning Streak on Saturday

BEARS CLOSE

(By The Canadian Press)

The American Hockey League's Cleveland Barons strengthened their lead on first place in the circuit two more points Sunday night by blanking the Indianapolis Capitals 6-0 but they suffered humiliation Saturday when the lowly Pittsburgh Hornets handed them a 6-2 thrashing and broke their long winning streak.

Hershey Bears, former leaders who slipped about two months ago and now occupy second place, suffered a 3-2 defeat at the hands of cellar-dwelling Providence Reds. Buffalo Bisons whipped Pittsburgh Hornets 9-6 in the third game last night.

Wendell Jamieson, Art Giroux and Bob Gravie scored three counters for Pittsburgh in the first period Saturday in their game with the leaders. In the second period Tommy Burlington and Pete Horeck scored Barons' only two tallies and in the final Johnny Roubell, Cliff Barton and Leo Richard added three more for hornets to make a total of six.

Last night, however, Barons were back to their regular form and goaltender Paul Gauthier recorded his third shutout of the season when Caps were routed 6-0.

Horeck and Lou Trudel scored two counters apiece, eighteen-year-old Clayton Lavell scored a goal in his first game of pro hockey and centre Les Cunninghom scored the other for Barons.

The league's leading scorer, Tommy Burlington, picked up two assists to bring his points total to 67.

Reds staged their best offensive game of the season when they defeated Hershey 3-2. Thirteen penalties were called in the encounter, one of the roughest played here.

Billey Whittet, Wilfred Hoch and Roland Forget were the Providence goal-getters, while Billy Hudson and Peggy O'Neil scored for Hershey.

Buffalo Bisons packed seven goals into the second period when they trounced Hornets 9-6. Walter Atanas scored three of them while Fred Thurier got another after he tallied in the first period.

Al Picard from Sudbury, Ont., was in the nets for Buffalo and made their fourth goalie in their last four games.

LINDSAY RINK WINS 2 TROPHIES AT ONTARIO SPIEL

Kingston Quartette, Skipped by J. Drysdale Wins Waterloo Trophy

WEEK OF CURLING

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Rinks skipped by Percy H. Skitch of Lindsay, Ont., and C. R. Redfern of Toronto today held the aftermath spotlight of the 17th annual Ontario Bonspiel as officials conferred to determine the winner of the grand aggregate at the six-day tourney which ended early Sunday.

Skitch, defeated in early rounds, came strongly at the finish to win the Seiberling trophy and the North American Life trophy, both consolation events.

The premier events of the 'spiel —the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie trophy and the Royal York trophy—went to Redfern and to an underdog Barrie, Ont., rink skipped by Abe Simon. Redfern's rink edged George R. Farr of Brampton 11-9 in the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie event after gaining the final bracket with an 11-5 triumph over R. H. Howard of Toronto Granites. Farr reached the final by defeating Ed Young of Toronto Royals 11-9.

In the final for the Royal York trophy, Simon's four upset Don Best's formidable Kirkland Lake, Ont., quartet 10-9.

W. J. Drysdale of Kingston, Ont., won the Waterloo trophy, defeating Ed Young of Toronto Royals 14-10. Play for the sixth trophy awarded at the 'spiel, the Association trophy, resulted in a convincing 19-7 victory for W. A. Watson's Sarnia entry over R. G. Dillon of St. Paul, Minn.

Skitch won the Seiberling trophy with a 14-8 triumph over Dr. W. M. Baxter's Hamilton Victorias, while his North American Life trophy decision was gained 18-11 at the expense of W. C. Arnott's McIntyre, Ont., four.

New York, Feb. 21 (AP) — If there's any loose change left around the boxing world after Beau Jack goes into the army, "Boomy" Davis and Willie Pep likely will split it up ...The Beau likely will pile up a big income tax bill fighting Bob Montgomery, Davis and Sammy Angott in a three-week stretch from March 3 to March 24—and after that he shouldn't have to worry about the rigors of basic training—after that quick kayo over Montgomery, Davis is the big attraction now but Pep, just discharged from the navy, likely will find more good opposition.

John Tender, former National League President who'll be honored at a dinner in Pittsburgh soon, had a couple of baseball debuts that old-timers still remember. In his first game for Baltimore he had three outfield chances and bobbled them all; and in his National League pitching debut in 1888 he took a 14-0 licking for Indianapolis.

Marcel Credan of France, who cleaned up in the army boxing championships at Algiers, is tabbed as middleweight champion of Europe by the International Boxing Union although the British Board recognizes him only as French champ. American mitt experts who have seen Marcel perform say he's as good a 160-pounder as there is in the world today.

Toronto, Feb. 21 — (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association announcement players participating in the "outlaw" California league will be suspended from organized hockey caught representatives of the California circuit in Ottawa scouting for talent. Even school leagues were given the once over. The C.A.H.A. warning was superfluous, however. Selective Service has already refused permission to a group of 10 Ottawans seeking to make the California jaunt. . . . Bill (Ottawa Journal) Westwick says no permits will be issued to permit any players crossing the border to play in the California League. . . . That is the circuit which has the former major leaguer, Ching Johnson and Charlie Sands, as playing coaches. The league comprises San Diego Sky Hawks, Pasadena Panthers, Los Angeles Monarchs and the Hollywood Wolves. . . . These are the same Hollywood Wolves of which you are undoubtedly thinking. . . . A number of Alberta hockey players have joined the league in the last few seasons, some of them entering California Universities and making hockey pay for their education.

Incidentally:

Louis Keller, director of Athletics, University of Minnesota, is proud of his Varsity hockey team but he says United States will never turn out players in any numbers to compete with Canadians. "Murray Murdoch, now coach at Yale, once told me you could not depend on an indoor rink to produce hockey players," says Keller. "You have to have corner-lot rinks and the weather to turn out the stars."

Round and About:

Wilf Cude, coach of Montreal Canadiens junior hockey team, comments cautiously: "We're playing mighty good hockey and we'll have a fair enough team in the Canadian play-offs but we hardly figure to beat Oshawa or St. Michael's. Still you never can tell." . . . One of Canada's most famous golf holes, the 14th at Vancouver Marine, is being altered. It has been a 90-yard shot to a green situated 30 feet above the tee. The hole can not be seen from the tee. The hole is being changed to a 135-yard shot to a punchbowl green, located on the 15th fairway. Bob Samson, one of the club's charter members, has scored four holes-in-one on the old 14th and has offered a prize for the first ace on the new 14th.

EDMONTON VICS ALBERTA ENTRY FOR ALLAN CUP

Club Loaded With Former Players in National Hockey League

Edmonton, Feb. 21. (CP)— When Edmonton Vics, Alberta's lone entry in the Allan Cu pscramble, hit the play-off trail next month against New Westminster Lodestars, their lineup will be studded with players who once had more than a passing acquaintance with things to do with the National Hockey League.

Some of the more prominent players on the club are Leroy Goldsworthy, Paul Runge; Louis Holmes, Earl Robertson and the Hanson Brothers, Oscar and Emory. The first four all had experience in the N.H.L. Goldsworthy served at New York for both Rangers and Americans, as well as at Montreal, Boston and Chicago.

Runge was with the old Montreal Maroons for a time and later was up with Art Ross' Bruins. In between times he was a prolific point getter in various minor circuits.

As netminder for the amazing Amerks of a few years back, Robertson once put the stamp of success on his efforts by being chosen all-star National Hockey League goalkeeper.

Holmes spent most of his defence career in the minors although Chicago Hawks had him up for a stretch at one time.

The Hansons, Oscar and Emory, are members of the hockey-playing family of that none from Camrose, Alta. They were more than passably good in the American Association.

Other members of the Vics include Jimmy Graham, veteran amateur centre-ice man; Jimmy Anderson, a good little forward in his time; Johnny Molyneaux, one-time member of several of Al Ritchie's Regina aggregations; Tommy Brant, most of whose experience was acquired in intermediate circles and Ab Superstein, for a number of years a standout junior in and around Edmonton.

Bruce Mackay, a University of Alberta student and Bill Ingram, property of the Blackhawks, will also be available for duty with the Vics.

Great Lakes, Ill., (AP)—Former Ohio State swimming star, Bill Smith shattered a world record for the 200-yard free style in helping Great Lakes Naval Training Station defeat Iowa State 67-17 in a dual tank meet Saturday night. He covered the distance in 1:53.9.

Miami (AP)—Sun Again of Calumet Farm scored an easy win in the $7,500 McLennan Handicap feature at Hialeah Park Saturday with jockey Ted Atkinson of Toronto guiding the horse to a two-length victory. Sun Again established himself as a prime choice for the $25,000 Widener Handicap March 4.

Providence, R.I., Feb. 21 (CP) — Howie Morenz, Jr., son of one of the greatest of all hockey players, was the key man in the smooth offence of Catholic high school of Montreal as the Canadian boys defeated a team of present and past La Salle academy hockey players here yesterday 6-2. Morenz got two assists in addition to a third-period goal

Saskatoon, Feb. 21 (CP)—Jack Forsyth's Saskatoon Granite curling clug rink won the Saskatchewan curling championship and British Consols trophy by defeating Brygmn Seaman's Rouleau rink two games to one in the finals played here during the weekend.

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Detroit Tech outclassed and outscored an off-form university of Toronto basketball team by a 66-36 score here Saturday night. The smooth-working Detroit outfit had little trouble in subduing the hitherto undefeated Canadian team, which co-operated by muffing dozens of shots which should have gone home.

Toronto, Feb. 21 — The H.M.C.S. Bytown Wrens' Quintet, only basketbal team in Canada representing the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service, met their first defeat Saturday night in losing 38-23 to an all-star girls' team from the University of Toronto. The Navy girls provided a far more closely-matched game than the score indicated despite the fact that they were playing under girls' rules for the first time.

The leading Saints were only three points to the good in the Senior O. H. A. standing after the second-place Hamilton Majors handed them a 6-2 trimming Saturday night at St. Catharines. Marksmen for the winners were Dillon Brady, with three; Doug Runions, good for a brace, and Clarence Shillington one. Red Reynolds and Blink Bellinger were the scorers for St. Catharines.

Majors drew the only score in the initial frame, had a 3-1 edge in the second and worked it to 6-2 during the final 20 minutes. Goaltender Art Childs of Hamilton suffered a damaged nose in stopping a drive from Reynolds but finished out the engagement after getting stitched up.

In the Junior "A" series Oshawa Generals registered a 4-2 win over Whizzers at Hamilton thereby maintaining a four-point lead in Group 1 standing over St. Michael's who had edged out Marlboros 4-3 in the afternoon tilt at Toronto. Johnny Chenier notched the only counter in the first two periods at Hamilton for Generals but Love, Ken Smith and Curry each found the net in the last frame. Watson was a double scorer for Whizzers, getting both on a pass from Brown.

The Kists had a narrow escape in their fixture at Galt with Stratford, requiring overtime to extinguish the Kroehlers 5-4. The visitors were leading 4-3 with barely five minutes to go in the third when Kazarian tied it up and Bernie McCarthy notched the winning goal in the extra session, this being McCarthy's second tally of the struggle.

One of our friends said that he thinks newspapers are a great deal like women. Here is how he explains it:

They both have forms that must be made up.

They always have the last word.

Back numbers are not much in demand.

They are well worth looking over.

They sometimes have a great deal of influence.

You cannot believe everything they say.

They carry the news whereyer they go.

(Race tightens.)

Tonight sees the final double-header in the Quinte service puck loop before the play-offs get under way. Last week the Mountain View "Bombers" made the greatest progress in the league standing, moving into a tie for second place by winning two games, while Trenton and No. 6 Repair Depot played another tie game and the Mohawks dropped two. Right now Coach Dan Cowley's "Bombers" are the hottest team in the loop as they take on the Trenton "Flyers" in the curtain-raiser tonight. Skipper Padre Malka will use Paul Raymond, former ~~Les~~ Canadiens star, between Wilson and McAtee, the two former Brantford Lion wingers to give the Flyers a powerful scoring threat to match the Aube-Bourdeau-Ducquette trio from Mountain View. Steady hockep patrons swear by the style of hockey being provided at the Hume Arena in these service league games. "We're seeing some of the best hockey material in the Dominion these Monday and Thursday nights," agree the majority of the faithfuls.

For high loop lovers a dual bill of girls' basketball will be played at the "Y" tonight featuring a clash between the Alemites and Reliance.

Organized Ball, preparing for its third wartime season, expects to boost to $3,000,000 its direct contributions to the war effort. A total of $2,130,059.48 was given during the first two years, $1,054,953.16 of which was raised in 1942, $725,106.32 in 1943 and an estimated $350,000 by the minors.

Eight relief games in the National League brought $175,118.96, Pittsburgh raising the top sum of $35,844.86 and the same number of contests in the American providing $151,439.88, Chicago reporting the largest sum, $32,624.50. The All-Star game in Philadelphia, last July, raised $65,174 for the equipment fund and earmarked for the same cause was a donation of $20,000 from the Commissioner's office and $5,000 from each major league.

Biggest item in the 1943 ledger was the $308,373.48 realized from the World's Series games between the Yankees and Cardinals last fall.

Chris Newton of Toronto, won the Canadian lightweight boxing championship 17 years ago tonight, beating Cliff Graham also of Toronto in a ten-round bout in the Queen City. Two months later Newton lost his crown to Leo (Kid) Roy at Montreal.

(Good news.)

Here's good news for the nimrods ...The Wartime Prices and Trade Board of Canada has announced that the production of shotgun shells in 1944 will be three times as great as in 1943...However, the production will still be slightly less than 70 percent of a normal pre-war year's output and none of the ammunition is likely to be released for sporting purposes for several months yet.

Montreal Boxer Disqualified After Admitting Mistake

By the Canadian Press

Joe (Pancho) Castilloux, Montreal welterweight who won the Southern Golden Gloves championship at Nashville, Tenn., Wednesday, was disqualified Saturday following an investigation into his amateur status when he admitted he had fought as a professional before entering the U. S. Army. Castilloux declared his only desire was to fight again and the Golden Gloves tourney was his only opportunity.

The outcome was Wallace Smiley of Chattanooga, runner-up in the welterweight divison, was awarded the Southern title and was named for the tournament of champions which opens in Chicago Feb. 28.

United States troops won the coveted professional and amateur heavyweight titles of North Africa Saturday as the weeklong boxing tourney among Allied soldiers in Algiers ended.

Pte. Claude Brown of Cropper County, Kt., took the professional crown by outpointing Horace Thompson, Many, La., while Pte. Cecil H. Shumway, Dallas, won the amateur championship by gaining a decision over Perry Bryson, of Midlothian, Tex.

The British army gained one title when Tommy McGrath outpointed Edward O'Neil, of Hot Springs, Ark. In the amateur Senior welterweight class. The French Navy also gained one championship when Marcel Cerdan scored a one round technical knockout over Joseph N. Di Martino, of Stratford, Conn., in the professional Senior welterweigth finals.

Gil Dodds, the Flying Parson of Boston, won the Baxter mile Saturday night at the New York A. C. indoor meet, Madison Square Garden, in 5:06 to come six-tenths of a second from the world's indoor record for the distance. # Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 307

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Tom, Tom, the Piper's son. He bid a slam and away he run, And he roams to this day, still hunting for places where they let you make slams without enough aces.

Just because you count 12 probable tricks does not mean you can make a slam. You also need safeguards in the form of aces and kings. Until you see those safeguards, be wary.

Take another shot at this north hand:

♠A K 10 3 2
♥Q 7 6 2
♦K 7 6 2
♣None

The bidding has gone this far::

| SOUTH | NORTH |
|---|---|
| 1 H | 2 S |
| 3 D | 3 S |
| 4 D | ? |

Your partner in the south has bid hearts before diamonds. That shows his diamonds are not longer. He has rebid diamonds. That shows his diamonds are at least five cards long.

If his five diamonds are not longer than his hearts, his hearts must be at least five cards long. He may have more but not less hearts than diamonds.

Also, when a partner bids two suits and rebids one of them he asks you for a choice. He wants to know from you which of his two suits you prefer.

You have as many diamonds as you have hearts. Your preference should be for his first mentioned suit. And, since you have not enough aces and kings to invite a slam, bid four hearts.

Your partner has discovered enough tricks for a slam from the bidding so far. If he has enough aces and kings to invite a slam, he should do so. Leave it to him.

A good general is first a good soldier.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Women in Bondage"
(First Belleville Showing)

Opening tonight at the Capitol, "Women in Bondage" is a motion picture calculated to make one's blood boil, or else to run cold, depending on how one reacts to its revelations on conditions affecting the female population in present-day Germany. But its dramatic presentation cannot fail to engender intense anger and loathing for a ruthless regime which is shown to have lost all moral sense.

Gail Patrick and Nancy Kelly are co-starred in this timely drama, and both are seen to especial advantage in the poignant roles of two German women who eventually suffer persecution and brutality at the hands of the Hitler government. Among the many other popular screen players in the cast are such able performers as Bill Henry, Tala Birell, Gertrude Michael, Alan Baxter, Rita Quigley, Maris Wrixon, Felix Basch, Anne Nagel, Mary Forbes and H. B. Warner.

The story is a series of dramatic incidents building into a powerful drama of conditions which are little realized by those living outside Germany. It demonstrates how all moral precepts of the girls and young women of the Reich are being deliberately perverted at the direction of the government, bent solely on the breeding of a super-race of warriors. But the picture's authenticity is assurded, we learn by the fact that all those active in its production have first hand knowledge of the events presented.

"Here Comes Kelly"
(First Belleville Showing)

One of the season's most hilarious screen comedies is the added rollicking Monogram picture, "Here Comes Kelly."

Eddie Quillan and Joan Woodbury play the romantic young couple around whose trials and tribulations the story revolves, and featured with them are "Slapsy Maxie" Rosenbloom as a thick-witted gangster, and the "Mexican bombshell," Armida as a cafe entertainer.

To complete the grand double attraction the Canadian Universal News and the timely Canada Carries On featurette "Target Berlin" will be shown.

AT THE McCARTHY

"What a Woman".

The screen's most delightful and attractive comedienne, Rosalind Russell, is headed this way in a new picture that is reported to be her biggest laugh hit. It is Columbia's "What a Woman" and a perusal of the story brings our expectations to a high pitch, for it sounds like a vehicle perfectly tailored to the fetching talents of the streamlined Miss Russell. To add to the bright prospect, Brian Aherne is co-starred with her and when one remembers the hilarious antics of these two in "My Sister Eileen" there is no further need to explain our anticipatory glow.

As the story goes, Rosalind, as Carol Ainsley, is the number one career woman of the year. As beautiful as she is clever, she has built up a nation-wide reputation for herself as the most sensational "ten percenter" in the entertainment field. She finds and presents outstanding talent. She scoops her competitors at every turn. One of her scoops is the selling of the sensational best-seller, "the Whirlwind" to the movies at a large figure, and to add to the already staggering sum that her ten per cent amounts to, she promises to deliver to Hollywood, the hero to play the leading role in the screen version of "the Whirlwind". He must be be a "magnificent hunk of man" and Carol then starts a man-hunt that is a mad, merry chase. Of course her heart, which she's forgotten she had, trips her up and knocks her clever and orderly brain askew.

Brian Aherne plays the role of an annoying newspaper writer and Willard Parker is "The Whirlwand".

AT THE BELLE

"Government Girl," Funny

Romance and laughter share honors in "Government Girl," RKO Radio's new starring vehicle for Olivia de Havilland which features the new screen "find," Sonny Tufts.

Miss de Havilland plays the part of a smart and experienced Washington secretary, and Tufts that of a Detroit automotive expert brought to the capital to speed up the nation's bomber program. How the two find themselves in political hot water because of Tuft's aggressive methods forms the theme of the fast-paced comedy.

Anne Shirley, Jess Barker, James Dunn, Paul Stewart and Agnes Moorehead head the supporting cast of the film.

"Government Girl" is now in its final day at the Belle Theatre. The timely and sensational C. C. O. feature "Target Berlin," and the Canadian Paramount News precede the feature attraction.

Mystery & Romance In Film

Ann Rutherford is cast opposite Red Skelton for the third time when she plays Carol Lambert in the newest of that popular series, M-G-M's "Whistling in Brooklyn," coming next to the Belle Theatre.

Once again she and Red, who again plays the "Fox," start off bound for a preacher and becomes involved in all sorts of hilarious situations as they elude the police and a gang of criminals out to murder Red as he attempts to save the life of an honest police inspector.

Jean Rogers, "Rags" Ragland, Henry O'Neill, Sam Levene and Howard Freeman have featured roles in the comedy which was directed by S. Sylvan Simon, and produced by George Haight.

"Practical Joker" is the title of the Pete Smith specialty to be presented on the same program with an excellent M-G-M screen miniature "Brothers in Blood' 'and the The Canadian Movietone News.

PREDICTS GREATER ASSAULTS

London, Feb. 21. (CP) — Maj.-Gen. James H. Doolittle, who led the American raid on Tokyo in 1942, yesterday predicted greater Allied assaults on the Japanese capital "in the shortest possible time", but idicated agreement in the Allied High Command that "Hitler must be finished first".

Hollywood and HERE

By HYE BOSSIN

Some 50,000 unsolicited manuscripts arrive in Hollywood annually. These, written by patrons who see a movie and say scornfully "I can write a better story than that," are returned unopened because the studios fear plagiarism lawsuits. The studios, knowing that the player attracts more than the play (Shakespeare notwithstanding) adhere to the star system and this has created a story formula.

Novices either ignore this formula, which causes their scripts to be unsuitable, or adhere strictly to it, which makes them unnecessary. In Hollywood more than in any other place, originality is but the variation of the familiar.

• • •

The mortality rate among stories has always been terrific. This is shown by the report of Simon and Schuster, among the continent's leading publishers.

In 20 years the firm has examined 50,000 manuscripts and selected 723 of that number for publication. Just 31 became best-sellers, about the same number were utter failures and the rest had a modest sale.

Of the 50,000 manuscripts searched and the 723 printed, less than 20 were purchased for the motion pictures.

• • •

J. C. Nugent, veteran actor and author, wrote:

"Those who quibble at bad plays and particularly at bad pictures and forget the thousands and thousands of theatres which must be fed weekly and semi-weekly should also remember that there have not been since the birth of Monte Cristo thirty wholly original first-class books or operas. The supply must therefore necessarily consist of by-products and re-adaptations of more or less familiar fundamentals."

However, that isn't what the movie trailers tell us.

• • •

What peculiar human qualities go into the making of a movie star? Nobody knows. On "The Hairy Ape" set some players were being honest about their backgrounds.

William Bendix became a Federal Theatre actor when the depression closed his grocery store. Susan Hayward confessed that her only claim was that her father had been a circus barker and Dorothy Comingore admitted that she had been a barker for the Kit Carson sideshow museum.

Then John Loder revealed that he used to own a pickle factory. All he had left when it failed was a dress suit. He wore it to an affair at which Sir Alexander Korda was a guest and the latter gave him a job as an extra.

Today Loder is doing all right. Not only is he a star but he's the Husband of Hedy Lamar.

About "The Hairy Ape"—it is being produced by Jules Levey, who hails from Toronto and whose family still lives there. Levey started out as a film salesman.

In the other half of the double-header, West Huntingdon eked out a close 4-2 victory over Centenary.

The first game between Zion and Corbyville saw the first club go into a seven to nothing lead before they had a goal counted against them. The first period ended 4-0 with Walt counting twice, and C. The second period went scoreless but the final had hardly opened when Huntingdon made sure of the game with a counter from C. Wright's stick. Ike Bellis got the final Centenary score at the half-way mark. The game was fairly clean with the two penalties handed out by referee Wallace being equally divided.

Postwar Economic Planning May Be Set at Parley

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Feb. 21—(CP)—Decisions taken at the coming Dominion-Provincial conference may establish the framework within which post-war economic planning for Canada can proceed with more certainty than has been possible up to this time.

As a minimum it is believed the result hopes for is an understanding of the respective roles of the Dominion and Provincial governments in measures projected to maintain a high level of employment, and their roles in those measures of social security set forth as the first steps to be taken towards a comprehensive system to protect Canadians from extreme hardship resulting from old age, unemployment and sickness.

While that is a minimum, the maximum might be a general agreement among the provinces on a method of amending the British North America Act whereby Provincial views could be tested on matters affecting the provinces without reference to the British parliament, as well as changes in the act itself as it relates to the distribution of powers as between the Dominion and the Provinces.

Time Still Indefinite.

With matters of more immediate practical importance to be dealt with, however, it is possible that questions of constitutional change may be pushed into the background unless there should be a general disposition on the part of the provinces now to act.

The time of the conference is still indefinite. In the House of Commons Prime Minister Mackenzie King suggested it might be possible about Easter.

Most of the provincial legislatures, however, now are in session, and two of them, Quebec and Saskatchewan, face elections after the end of their present sessions. It is not known for sure whether they will have time between the end of their sessions and their elections to prepare for and attend a conference.

The last conference met in the winter of 1941 and a large part of the new conference's work—that relating to finances—results from the earlier meeting's failure.

The 1941 conference was asked to consider the recommendations of the royal commission on Dominion-Provincial relations aimed at rejusting the division of revenue sources and financial obligations.

It broke up after two days when three Provinces, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia, flatly refused to accept the commission's proposals as a basis of discussion.

The Dominion later acted by means of a temporary wartime arrangement to take over the whole field of income tax and reimburse the provinces with payments equal to their previous collections.

The coming conference will, in consequence, have to consider what arrangement is to replace the wartime one.

Generally the royal commission's findings were to the effect that the fields of taxation open to the pro-provinces under the British North America Act are inadequate to yield them enough revenue to permit them to carry out the services required in a modern state and which fall within their constitutional sphere.

The remedy proposed was a new distribution of powers, the allocation of the income tax field to the federal authority assumption by the federal government of provincial debts, abolition of present subsidies to the provinces and their replacement by a "national adjustment grant," changeable every five years.

Canada's existing constitution, the British North America Act, was framed in 1867 before many of the present functions of government were thouhgt of. It can be changed only by an act of the British parliament.

Tito Regarded As No. 1 Slav By 3 Big Powers

London, Feb. 21. (AP) — Yugoslavia's complicated political situation showed signs of clearing with the forces of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito), the Partisan Leader, emerging as No. 1 in the political as well as military favor of Britain, the United States and Russia.

Former Prime Minister Gen. Dusan Simovic, who, really three years ago, led the revolt of King Peter's Yugoslav Government against the Axis, used the British Broadcasting Corporation's facilities Saturday night to announce his support of Tito. This showed a tendency of the British authorities to let King Peter's Government, now installed in Cairo, fall back into obscurity.

Russia openly supports Tito politically and militarily, while both Britain and the United States for the last four months have been supplying arms to Tito.

There now is a tendency by both Britain and the United States to withdraw support of the Cairo Yugoslav Government, to let it stand on its own feet and get back into Yugoslavia if possible. There has been no indication from the Yugoslav underground, which has easy contact with the Allies in Italy, that the Cairo regime has much support in the turbulent Balkans.

Tito's newly established Legislative Assembly is on record as opposed to the Cairo Cabinet. The Allies are committed to a policy of aiding those who fight on the Allied side—which leaves Tito in the driver's seat.

Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied commander in the Mediterranean and spokesman for Allied policy in that area has been outspoken against the lack of action on the part of Gen. Draja Mikhailovitch, Peter's War Minister, and has exhibited a growing cold shoulder toward the Cairo Government.

CHAPTER 16

There was a chair facing the desk, and Tony drew it a little closer and sat down. Looking into the doctor's very bright eyes, he fancied he could see that the man was on his guard. His manner was frank and cordial, but back of the eyes was a glint of uneasiness.

"Yes, Dr. Metcalf,' he said, "it's the McKibben case. There are some puzzling things about it which I think you can explain.' He paused, but Metcalf sat looking at him in silence, waiting for him to go on, just as he might have sat looking at a patient. "Miss Terry told me that it was you who had been treating her father."

"That is true," Metcalf nodded. "I had been treating him for nearly a year. He had a very curious complex. Professor Terry imagined that he was responsible for his wife's accidental death, and he had nursed the idea along until he was close to dementia."

"He was getting better, wasn't he?"

"Oh, yes. Once we had the idea out in the open where we could look at it, I was able to show him how ridiculous it was. After that, it was just a question of time. He was naturally of a very nervous temperament, and so his recovery was slower than if he had been phlegmatic."

"His daughter also told me that it was you who introduced him to McKibben."

"That is true. McKibben came in to see me one day when Professor Terry and his daughter were just leaving. I introduced them."

"Do you usually introduce your patients to each other?"

"Certainly not," answered Metcalf impatiently. "McKibben wasn't my patient. He was my broker, and Professor Terry had told me that he was looking for some investment advice."

"And you advised Terry to put his securities in McKibben's hands?"

"Not at all. I simply told him that McKibben was my broker, and that I had found him satisfactory—which was the truth up to that time. That was six months ago. I confess I didn't know as much about him then as I do now, or I wouldn't have said even that much."

"How long had he been your broker?"

"Oh, for two or three years, anyway. I suppose you're wondering how much I lost. It wasn't very much. I had drawn nearly all my money out of his hands to put into some real estate."

"You were lucky," said Tony. "Most of his customers were cleaned out — Terry among them. That was the reason he killed himself."

"I can understand that easily enough," Metcalf nodded. "While the Professor was definitely better, his mental equilibrium was still unstable and this fresh catastrophe upset it. He no doubt had the same feeling of guilt because he had lost his children's money that he did when he thought he had killed his wife. It was Ossa on Pelion. The load was too heavy, so he just gave up."

"And his son rushed off to kill McKibben," Tony added. "What did you think of his story?"

"I really couldn't say," Metcalf answered, a little curtly. "I never met the boy."

"He's the passionate, impulsive type—just the opposite of his sister."

"So I judged."

Metcalf was certainly not being very helpful.

"I'm a little puzzled as to what really happened in McKibben's apartment Monday night," Tony pursued. "It is just below here, isn't it?"

"Yes. It is right under here."

"The police say you couldn't tell them anything," said Tony to Dr. Metcalf.

"That's right."

"Were you at home Monday evening?"

"Yes, all evening."

"You heard no pistol shot?"

"No. I didn't hear anything. Of course I was in bed long before two o'clock, and I don't remember that I was disturbed at all. You see my bedroom is on the floor above. This is a duplex. I use this floor for my offices and the other for my living rooms."

"These windows overlook McKibben's terrace?"

"Yes."

"Would you mind if I examined them?"

"Certainly not," said Metcalf and rose and led the way to them. "What do you expect to find?"

"Whoever killed McKibben," Tony explained, "got into his place in some way before he returned and lay in wait for him. When I was down there on the terrace yesterday and looked up at these windows it seemed to me that it would be very easy to drop down to the terrace from one of them and with practically no risk of being seen. If that was done, I may be able to find some trace of it on the sill."

"Yes, it would be easy enough to get down from here," Metcalf agreed, with a glance out the window. "But how would anyone get into my office?"

"I don't know. Let me take a look."

He raised the lower sash and the screen outside it and looked out. There was McKibben's terrace 12 or 14 feet below.

"You see how easy it would be to swing down with a ladder, or even with a rope," he declared.

"Yes, yes," said Metcalf impatiently, "there's no question about that. But I don't see the point. It would be just as easy to get into McKibben's place through the door as into my office, so why go to all the extra trouble?" And then he looked at Tony sharply. "Unless you mean that you think I did it."

"I think you were in position to do it if you wanted to," said Tony. "You were at home all evening, and you had access to the place. But I haven't found any adequate motive as yet."

"That's comforting!" laughed the psychiatrist, but the laughter sounded the least bit forced.

"It's possible, of course, that your office was unlocked."

"It is never unlocked at night," Metcalf objected. "It has a snap lock which catches automatically when the door is closed."

"It would be easy enough for anyone to come in during the afternoon and throw the catch without your secretary noticing it."

"Yes, I suppose it would," the psychiatrist agreed, "but it has always been her responsibility to see that the outer door is locked when she leaves, and I have found her very careful. Suppose we ask her about it," and he touched a button. In a moment there was a tap at the door and the secretary entered.

"Miss Scott," Metcalf went on, "Mr. Bigelow has been asking whether it would be possible for you to leave the outer door unlocked inadvertently when you leave in the evening."

"No, sir, it would not," answered the girl, confidently.

"Even if someone had thrown off the catch?"

"I would notice it. The catch makes quite a sharp click when the door is closed. Besides, I always try it to make sure it is locked."

"Do you happen to remember doing that last Monday evening?" Tony asked.

The girl thought for a moment.

"Yes, I do," she said. "I forgot my compact Monday evening and had to come back for it. I had to use my key to get in and I remember trying the door to make sure it was locked when I went out the second time."

"Thank you, Miss Scott," said the doctor, and dismissed her with a nod. "So you see," he went on, turning to Tony, "the evidence is all against me."

Tony had been examining the window sill and wall outside. Now he closed the screen and the window.

"You didn't go out here, at any rate," he said. "A rope would have been sure to leave some trace. Let's look at the other one." But the other sill also was quite unmarked.

"I'd point out to you that the apartment next to mine also looks down on the terrace," Metcalf remarked.

"I know it. I'm going to take a look at it," and Tony returned thoughtfully to his seat.

Metcalf sat down again at the other side of the desk and for a moment the two men looked at each other.

"I've been told that the apartment next door is occupied by a fellow named Dudley Graham," Tony said at last. "But he has been in California for a month, so that rules him out. You haven't seen anybody else in there?"

"Not a soul."

"Herschel Schneider tells me that Mrs. Graham is a patient of yours."

Metcalf flushed a little.

"She was," he said curtly. "She is all right now."

"So Schneider said."

"There was nothing much the matter with her. Have you been discussing me with Schneider?"

There was an edge of irritation in Metcalf's voice, and his eyes were brighter than ever.

"I was talking with him last night and happened to mention you," Tony explained, and then decided that the time had come to bring up the heavy artillery. "Have you a dictograph concealed in your desk, doctor?" he asked.

Metcalf stared at him, his face redder than ever.

"Yes, I have a dictograph," he snapped, "but it isn't concealed. The receiver is set in that panel right in front of you."

"Oh, yes," said Tony, and leaned forward and looked at it. "Not concealed, certainly—but I wouldn't call it very noticeable."

"What business is it of yours, anyway?" the psychiatrist demanded.

"None," answered Tony, blandly, "and if you prefer not to talk about it, I'll be going."

He started to rise, but Metcalf motioned him back to his seat.

"Don't get this wrong," he said. "There is nothing out of the way about the use of a dictograph. Many psychiatrists use one from time to time when they wish to make a special study of something a patient has told them. You understand that very often a patient, in delving into the past, will say something whose meaning is not apparent even to himself. It is for the psychiatrist to discover the meaning, and with a dictograph record he can listen to it over and over until its complete meaning emerges. It is the only way. A stenographic record would not do it because it would not give the tone of the voice, which are often very important. Besides, it would necessitate another listener."

"I see," nodded Tony. "Does the patient know a record is being made?"

"Certainly not. It would act as an inhibition, and the whole point is to break down inhibitions and repressions, and by means of perfect rapport, to bring about an abreachtion, or emotional discharge which releases the patient from whatever neurosis or maladjustment he has been suffering with. You understand it is only very occasionally I use the distograph, and then only for such phrases as require special study."

"I wish you would explain to me how it works," said Tony.

"There are two receivers, one here and one in my treatment room. The one here is controlled by a button in the floor under my desk. As long as I hold the button down with my foot, the record is made. In the treatment room, the button is in the floor at the head of the couch."

"I see," nodded Tony. "That dictograph mechanism is ingenious. It might be a good idea for a columnist. What happens to these records when you are through with them?"

"They are destroyed."

"That is interesting too," said Tony. "Think what a basis they might be for blackmail."

Metcalf started from his chair.

"Are you suggesting—", he began in a strangled voice, but Tony waved him back.

"Sit down, Doctor," he said. "I am not suggesting anything, but I have reason to believe that Jack McKibben was using a dictograph record in that way. Where he got it I don't know . . ."

"He didn't get it here," Metcalf broke in. "I keep my records in a steel cabinet which is always locked, and to which nobody has a key but myself. And as soon as a patient is cured or discontinues treatment, I put the record in a reconditioning machine and shave it smooth."

"Mr. Bigelow, I realize fully my professional responsibilities and that I live up to them," declared Psychiatrist Metcalf.

"I don't doubt it, Doctor," Tony assured him, "but just the same these dictograph records are dynamite. If a gang of blackmailers found out about them, they wouldn't be safe in the strongest steel cabinet ever built."

"I have never missed one in all the years I have been practising," Metcalf protested.

"But you don't know how many have been copied," Tony retorted. "All you would have to do to make a copy is to put one in a transcriber, hold it in front of this microphone, and press the button there under your desk."

"That is true," Metcalf agreed, and wiped the perspiration from his forehead. "Look here," he went on, "suppose we stop fencing with each other and go to the bottom of this. You say McKibben had a dictograph record which he was using to blackmail somebody? Who was it?"

"It was a woman who was confessing concerning the paternity of her child; she was terrified because she thought her husband would find it out, that the child was getting to look more like its father every day. Does that mean anything to you?"

Metcalf was staring at Tony. "Good Lord!" he said hoarsely, and wiped his face.

"It was your record then?" inquired Tony.

"Such a statement has been made to me," Metcalf admitted. "More than once, in fact. Some women do get themselves in difficulties."

"How do you get them out?"

"In this case—if it is the case I think it is—it was quite easy," Metcalf replied. He was getting his self-control back, and was even smiling a little. "I proved that the idea was an obsession—that it wasn't true."

"This is fascinating," said Tony. "Would you mind telling me how you went about it?"

The psychiatrist settled himself more comfortably in his chair. He was quite himself again.

"Psychoanalysis had nothing to do with it," he said. "All I used was common sense. There would be only two courses to follow in a case like that. Here is a woman on the verge of a nervous breakdown, possibly dementia, because she is afraid her husband will discover that the boy they both love is not his. She must be rid of her fear. Either she must be shown that it has no basis of fact, or she must go to her husband and tell him the truth and take the consequences. Her case was the more serious because she is deeply in love with her husband, who, in fact, has always treated her with the greatest consideration. She is sure that he has never been unfaithful to her—and I think she is right. They had been married ten years and had no children, altho' they both wanted at least one child.

"She enjoyed a gala trip to Paris a couple of years ago—solo; business detaining her husband. On the return trip she met an old flame . . . Less than a year later her baby was born much to the joy of her devoted husband. But she was worried." The psychiatrist paused. "When she saw the child, as she imagined, growing more and more like the other man, she nearly lost her mind. But she was mistaken—"

"And you were able to prove that?"

Correspondent Attends Briefing Of Canadian Crews Going To Leipzig, Welcomes Return

Visits Group Captain Larry Wray of Belleville in Command of Squadron Taking Part

MAGNIFICENT SIGHT

(Special to Ottawa Journal and Ontario Intelligencer).

By VERNON M. KIPP

London, Feb. 21—Somewhere in England last night I stood in the centre of a great airdrome surrounded by roaring Lancaster bombers and watched more than a score of them take off for Leipzig. Many hours later I watched them return with job done. The first machine landed eight minutes ahead of schedule. It was a Canadian Lancaster station. In the skies were aircraft from the Thunderbird and Goose squadrons.

It was a thrilling experience. When I reached the station at dusk aircraft were already loaded with bombs and assigned posts in the field. Crews had been warned for operation some hours earlier. After supper at the officers' mess we sat in the lounge as the take off hour approached. There was tenseness in the air. Presently crews began drifting in talking casually mostly with one another and making the dash for the dining room, when operational lunch was announced, the feature being a fried egg. Sergeants of crews and our men meanwhile were making similar preparations. They had already been briefed and after eating they donned flying garb and went to their machines. A little later Air Commodore C. M. McEwen M.C., D.F.C., and Bar, Montreal, took us in his car across the runway to the centre field.

Already great machines were warming up and the thunderous roar of motors filled the air. Lancasters were lined up in a great circle facing towards the flare patch, which led last night to Leipzig. Searchlights pointed skywards to give crews indication of cloudy condition, there were subdued field lights and red and white lights of Lancasters blazed angrily. The first bomber took off, thirty tons of machine, men and bombs roaring across the starting line like a huge prehistoric monster given wings on the ground. As they flashed by it seemed impossible these vast machines dimly seen should ever take the air. As they lifted from the ground and circled in the skies above it seemed impossible they ever should return to earth. The bombers followed one another into the aid a little more than a minute apart. When the last roaring motor had made the ascent and the noise of the powerful engines gradually died away as the course set for Germany a great silence descended upon the airdrome. Darkness hid an unseen force of hundreds of ground workers and administrative services, who had labored many hours preparing for the flight.

We went off to bed, nobody feeling much inclined to talk while the bombers proceeded with their terrifying business. When we were called the hoarse note of Lancaster engines was heard above and the first crew was circling the airdrome awaiting permission to land. "Smitty of Course," said someone, "He's always first home," and Smitty it was, being F/L. W. R. "Bob" Smith of Toronto. We dressed hastily, hurried to the big concrete structure called the debriefing room, where the aircrew come after return. Urns of coffee were just arriving and a Quebec heater made the centre cozy. At one end was a large blackboard with names, captains for this operational flight but still no sign of daylight.

Air was filled with the deep note of homing Lancasters returning unerringly after hundreds of miles over sea and hostile land. Smitty came in for cordial greetings. Other crews followed in a steady stream, fine gallant boys from every part of Canada obviously tired but happy in the success of the attack. They wanted coffee and a few minutes' chat with friends. No heroics, no boasting but quiet statements to interrogators of what they had seen and done. Flying Officer E. L. Sauve, 205 Booth Street, Ottawa, for whom it was his eleventh operational flight, drinking his coffee, told me the trip was uneventful but successful and went way. For Group Captain W. A. Jones, Vancouver, and Regina, recently here from Canada it was his first operational flight called it a great experience said, "Bombed Leipzig from 26,000 feet". He, flew as copilot with Wing Commander W. H 'Bill' Swetman, D.F.C., Kapuskasing. Another Wing Commander D. S. 'Jake' Jacobs, D.F.C., Toronto, also came home safely.

Crews reporting were checked off on a big board as interrogated. Men chatted easily and compared experiences. Presently most crews gathered as if accidentally around the blackboard. Then in a few moments the big room was empty. The trip causing some "stooging around" in highly uncomfortable places if appointment at Leipzig was to be kept on the minute.

Soon crews, officers and sergeants were gone to their own quarters for breakfast, another egg and then to bed. We went off to visit a neighboring airdrome, whose commanding officer is Group Captain Larry Wray, 35 Weston Ave., Ottawa, and a native of Belleville, which also made a heavy contribution of bombers to the Leipzig assault. It is before a fireplace in Wray's comfortable quarters I'm writing this despatch.

Bailed-Out Crewman Thought He Was In Heaven When Kissed by Girl

By HENRY B. JAMESON

An American Bomber Base in Britain, Feb. 21.—(AP)— Hundreds of airmen have parachuted from their planes, but it is doubtful that any crew had such cock-eyed experiences as the ten men in a United States heavy bomber who bailed out when their plane caught fire over England recently.

One gunner was knocked cold when he hit the ground and woke up in the arms of a beautiful English girl who kissed him.

Another landed in the middle of a railroad track in front of a speeding train. The co-pilot plopped down near a harbor and wound up drinking sherry with an R.A.F. air vice-marshal, while the ball turret gunner dropped in a marsh 500 feet from the sea and sank up to his ears in muck.

Hangs Over Roof.

Lieut. Leo M. Haynes of Spokane, Wash., the navigator, was left dangling helplessly over the edge of the roof of a three-storey house when his chute caught in a chimney. Two Englishmen helped free him.

Sgt. S. A. Depietro of Schenectady, N.Y., fell into a lake and got tangled in his parachute harness. He thought he was drowning when he discovered he was standing on the bottom.

The top turrent gunner, Sgt. Otto B. Fugett of Orange, Texas, landed on a jagged ledge and tumbled 150 feet into a stone quarry but escaped with only slightly sprained ankles.

"It was the craziest thing that ever happened to me—nice too", said Sgt. Bernard E. Jensen of North Hollywood, Cal., the tail gunner who was kissed back to consciousness by a trim young lady he had never seen before. "For a few seconds I thought I'd dropped into Heaven".

"A Spot of Tea, Old Man!"

Sgt. Albert J. Selvidio of Norwich, Conn., a radio operator-gunner, was picking himself off a railroad track when a train came around the bend. He jumped off the tracks and scooted up a ladder provided by two Englishmen who later argued over whose place it was to take him for tea.

After floating down dangerously close to a big harbor where every one is suspicious of parachutists, the co-pilot, Lieut. Paul R. Cooper of Emporium, Pa., was taken aboard a warship and later was invited to an R.A.F. base as the guests of an air vice-marshal.

But for a regiment of British soldiers on manoeuvres nearby, Sgt. Joseph M. Collector of Norfolk, Va., still might be trying to dig himself out of mud.

Lieut. Walter C. Lunden of Tampa, Fla., suffered a fractured leg when he landed in the middle of a paved highway.

The last two men out of the plane landed without incident.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

Toronto, Feb. 21 (CP)—Western oil stocks were a little stronger and other groups showed mild weakness in the early session of the Toronto stock exchange today. Turnover was fairly heavy at 426,000 shares for the first three hours, due mainly to active trading in a few of the penny golds and oils.

Astoria traded about 125,000 shares and was unchanged at 17 this afternoon. Springer Sturgeon, O'Brien, Quemont, Coniarum and Central Patricia were all a bit soft.

Changes were unimportant in the base metal list and the western oils had higher prices for British-Dominion, East Crest and Anglo-Canadian.

Utilities and steels were higher industrial groups while the building and food issues were narrowly lower. Papers and senior oils held steady.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Feb. 21 (AP)—Irregularly higher prices prevailed in today's stock market with mild buying demand centring on selected aviations, rails and specialties.

Boardroom attendance was scant, most customers stretching their weekend through tomorrow when major exchanges will recess for Washington's birthday. Dealings turned sluggish after a fairly active opening but fractional advances were well distributed near the fourth hour.

Issues of companies with good post-war prospects seemed a bit livelier than others, apparently responding o generally hopeful battlefront news. Most armament-rated groups, however, held their own.

Canadian stocks were slow, with Dome Mines and Lake Shore off fractions. Canadian Pacific, Hiram Walker and Distillers Seagrams were unchanged.

Expectations of a substantial expansion in air passenger travel and aerial express business when the war ends revived a number of stocks in this category.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Feb. 21 —(CP)— Cattle trade was slow with prices about steady up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Veal calves, hogs, lambs and sheep were steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 2,300, calves 300, hogs 1,100, sheep and lambs 600. Unsold from Saturday were 100 head of cattle.

There were no sales of weighty steers. Butcher steers and heifers were $10-$11.75, butcher cows $7.25-$9, canners downward to $5, bulls $7-$8.50, fed yearlings $11.50-$13.25 and a few stockers $8-$10.

Veal calves were $16-17 for choice with others downward to $11. Grass calves were mostly $8.

Two cars of Western lambs were $13.50 with a few common locals $8-$11.

Sheep were $2.50-$6 with some Western sheep at $6.25.

Clamor for Seats At Murder Trial Of W. Lonergen

New York, Feb. 21 —(AP)— Thrill-loving New Yorkers are clamoring by the score for seats at the murder trial of Wayne Lonergan, scheduled to open Wednesday, but only a few will get in.

Lured by the sensational aspects of the bludgeon-slaying of Lonergan's 23-year-old heiress wife, Patricia, last October and an expected expose of cafe society night life, would-be spectators have besieged the district attorney's office for weeks.

No attempts will be made to allocate seats, except to newspapermen. Besides the chances of the vast majority of hopefuls are doomed by the size of the small room in the Criminal Courts Building where the trial will be held. The room seats less than 200 persons.

Advance reservations indicate the press will be represented by the largest aggregation of reporters assembled for a trial here in years. No less than 85 are expected to chronicle the day-by-day developments. Special telephones and telegraph wires have been installed to speed their reports to newspapers.

Espionage Trial Proceeds at Detroit

Detroit, Feb. 21. (AP)—Deliberations of a Federal Court jury in the espionage conspiracy case of Dr. Fred W. Thomas, Detroit physician, were continuing at noon today with no sign of an early verdict.

The 10 women and two men jurors resumed deliberations at 9.30 a.m. after spending Sunday at a hotel. The case went to the jury late Saturday.

Judge Edward J. Moinet, in excusing the jury Saturday night four hours after it had received the case, cautioned that there was to be no further attempt to arrive at a verdict until today's resumption.

Maximum sentence on conviction is death.

U.S. Attorney John C. Lehr, in his closing argument for the government, termed Dr. Thomas a "master liar", ano described him as a man "who has sold out his country".

In his final plea for the defence, Attorney Walter Nelson said the government was trying to "trap" his client, and argued that testimony by Toronto-born Grace Buchanan-Dineen ,who pleaded guilty to the charges and then served as the government's principal witness, did not prove that Dr. Thomas was involved in an alleged spy ring.

Others who pleaded guilty and are awaiting sentence are: Carl John Wilhelm Leonhardt and his wife, Emma; Mrs. Marianne Von Moltke; Mrs. Theresa Behrens and Walter Joseph Abt. Charges against Bertrand Stuart Hoffman, native of St. Thomas, Ont., were dismissed on mental grounds.

Offers to Give Eye To Restore Girl's Sight

Toronto, Feb. 21. (CP)—Arthur Cairns, 27-year-old Toronto truck driver, today offered to give one of his eyes to Hazel Belbin of Moose-Jaw, Sask., if doctors thought the cornea could be transplanted to restore her sight. Miss Belbin, 25, and blind for 17 years, last week went to New York for such an operation but doctors told her that the trip was in vain.

Cairns suggested that the Cornea of a live person's eye might be transplanted more successfully than one from someone who had died.

Says Attempt Made to Assassinate King Peter

SAYS ATTEMPT MAD E

London, Feb. 21. (CP)—The Moscow radio broadcast a Cairo-dated Tass News Agency dispatch today declaring an attempt had been made to assassinate King Peter of Yugoslavia.

The Broadcast, recorded by the Soviet Monitor, quoted the Russian dispatch as saying the attempt had been made by Fascists in an effort to put the blame on Yugoslav soldiers, who, the dispatch said, are trying to return to their homeland to fight in the Partisan ranks of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito).

Four members of the King's guard were arrested, Tass said.

O.R.F.U. Shows Credit Balance Of $4,100 for Year

Toronto, Feb. 21 — (CP) — The Ontario Rugby Football Union ended the 1943 season with a credit balance of $4,100, it was reported at the annual meeting Saturday, when the 1943 officers were re-elected and two recommendations prepared for submission to the Canadian Rugby Union.

One of the proposals for the O.R.F.U. was a rule change, the O.R.F.U. recommending that the use of the "minute flag" to signal one minute to play be abandoned and that the end of play in each quarter be signalled by firing a pistol from the timer's bench. The other suggestion was that the deadline for entries into the Grey Cup competition be set at Sept. 1. Present deadline is Oct. 1.

An application for entry into the O.R.F.U. senior series was received from Windsor but this will not be discussed until the Union's June meeting.

Officers re-elected were: President, Frank Lennard, Dundas; Vice Presidents, J. E. McLean, Hamilton, Dr. H. G. MacDonnell, Kitchener, E. J. Paul, Toronto; Secretary-Treasurer, Harold Bailey, Toronto.

Domei also announced General Atsushi Ushiroku has been appointed Vice-Chief of the Army General Staff, "concurrently assuming the post of War Councillor." Lt.-Gen. Shojiro Iida was named Commander-in-Chief of the Army Central District Headquarters, the News Agency added.

No mention of new assignments for Nagano or Sugiyama was made.

Claims Not Confirmed.

The Imperial headquarters communique asserted Japanese army and navy forces in the Truk group sank two American cruisers and damaged an aircraft carrier and one unidentified warship. The Domei New Agency said the latter "might possibly" have been a battleship.

Tokyo claimed 54 American planes were shot down.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz's headquarters announced yesterday 19 Japanese ships were sunk in the attack upon Truk, seven more probably sunk and 201 Japanese planes destroyed.

American losses were given as 17 planes. One surface ship also suffered moderate damage, it was reported.

19 Jap Ships Sunk.

Pearl Harbor, Feb. 21 —(AP)— Nineteen Japanese ships sunk, at least 201 planes destroyed and terrific damage to land installations, was the score in last weeks' United States Pacific Fleet raid on Truk, Japanese primary base in the Central Pacific.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander of the Fleet, called the damage wrought by carrier planes in the raid Wednesday and Thursday "partial settlement" of the debt owed Japan for the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor in December, 1941.

(The Japanese during the 115-minute aerial hammering given Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, put 18 American warships out of action, including eight battleships, destroyers 177 Army and Navy planes and the killed, wounded and missing totalled more than 3,000.)

Nimitz made no mention of troop landings at Truk, as the Tokyo radio had announced, but said airmen sank two light cruisers, three destroyers, one ammunition ship, one seaplane tender, two oilers, two gunboats and eight cargo ships.

Eight Probably Sunk.

One cruiser or large destroyer, two oilers and four cargo ships were listed as probably sunk.

American fliers shot down 127 enemy aircraft in combat and destroyed 74 more on the ground. More than 50 additional Japanese planes were damaged before they could take to the air.

The attackers paid for this with only 17 planes lost and "moderate damage" to one surface ship, which Nimitz did not identify. There was no air opposition the second day of the attack, Nimitz said.

From the Marshall islands meanwhile came word United States infantry and marine troops now are driving the enemy from Eniwetok island. In a new landing yesterday, Nimitz said, they seized half the island.

Casualties continued light, said Nimitz, who previously disclosed the capture of Engebli island and its strategic airport, the enemy's main Eniwetok Atoll base.

Southwest Pacific Allied headquarters reported the fortress of Rabaul has been weakened Feb. 18 by three more aerial attacks, one of which at least temporarily knocked out the important Vunakanau airdrome southeast of the town.

Sixty-five Nazi fighters were shot down by gunners aboard four-engined bombers, and 61 fell to the escorting fighters, a U.S. headquarters communique declared.

American losses were 21 bombers and three fighters, two under the first-announced casualties of 22 bombers and four escorts, the bulletin added.

There were indications that the air offensive was resumed today, when the Hilversum radio in Holland went off the air.

The Americans were reported to have hit Posen, in Poland, site of a Focke-Wulf plant, in the Sunday offensive, but headquarters declined comment. A blow at Posen would represent a 1,500-mile round trip.

Announced targets were seven air craft centre cities as well as military installations in Rostock, on Germany's Baltic coast.

2,300 Tons Dropped at Leipzig.

The Americans' greatest air operations of the war, hitting a repeat blow at Leipzig and at Gotha, Bernburg, Brunswick, Halberstadt, Tutow and Oschersleben, was said in Washington by General Henry H. Arnold, commander of the U. S. Air Forces, to have knocked out 25 per cent of Germany's fighter plane production.

Leipzig alone was hit by 2,300 tons of explosives in the Saturday night raid just before the Americans swept in to lay waste further portions of the city.

The attack on Stuttgart, one of the Nazis' biggest manufacturing centres with a populating on 500,000, continued the series of triphammer strokes against German aircraft production—a stepping stone to continental invasion.

At Stuttgart are the great Daimler-Benz auto works now engaged in turning out engines for Messerschmitt fighters and Heinkels, the Roach works which is one of Germany's leading specialists in ignition equipment for all kinds of engines, and factories for production of tanks, trucks and submarine parts.

U. S. Army headquarters announced the largest number of heavy bombers ever employed in a daylight operations—1,000 or more —participated in yesterday's attacks. Twenty-two were lost.

The swarms of protective American long-range fighters ran up a new theatre record for themselves in number of enemy aircraft shot down in a single operation. They destroyed 61 German pursuit planes, six more than their previous record —established over Brunswick Feb. 10. Four Allied fighters were listed as missing.

A communique issued last night said the number of German planes that fell before the guns of the four-engined bombers had not yet been determined.

Provide Support.

R.A.F., R.C.A.F. and Allied fighters provided support for the American plunge against German fighter-plane factories at Leipzig, Gotha, Bernburg, Brunswick and Halberstadt and against military objectives in Tutow, Oschersleben and elsewhere in the Reich.

"At stake to a great degree," said a U.S. headquarters statement, "is Germany's ability to resist the coming invasion. The ultimate objectives not only are to complete the domination of the air when the invasion comes, with a resulting reduction in ground and naval casualties, but also the increased freedom for bombers to make precision daylight attacks on war industries and communication."

More men than are in an infantry division were involved, Gen. Arnold said an indication that upwards of 15,000 fliers participated.

The wide range of the targets—from Tutow, 75 miles due north of Berlin, to Leipzig in southern Germany—scattered available enemy defence aircraft.

Photographs brought back from Bernburg revealed 240 bombs landed on the Junkers assembly plant there. Explosions enveloped the target. Other bombs fell among more than 100 enemy planes on the ground.

2,576 Tons of Bombs Dropped.

For Leipzig the attack came only a matter of hours after the R.A.F. night bombers laid waste a great section of the city, Germany's fifth largest industrial centre. Leipzig was hit with 2,576 U.S. tons of high explosives and incendiaries.

At the same time, Mosquito bombers hit Berlin and other formations bombed targets in western Germany, Holland and northern France.

Berlin said great fires were set in Leipzig and casualties were caused.

The British-Canadian loss of 79 bombers was the heaviest ever inflicted by the Germans. The previous high was 58 in the Berlin raid lost last Aug. 23. The U.S. air force lost 60 on two occasions — the Schweinfurt attack of last Oct. 14, and the Brunswick-Oschersleben-Halberstadt assault of Jan. 11.

While American heavy bombers were attacking the German targets yesterday mediums of the new U.S. 9th air force veered from their steady pounding of northern France and attacked targets in Holland.

Notes From Britain—

London Bears Many Scars of Air Blitz

By VERNON M. KIPP
(Special to Ottawa Journal and the Ontario Intelligencer.)

LONDON, Feb. 7 (By Mail)— Bethnal Green is not one of London's beauty spots. It is a borough, one square mile in area, in the East End near the docks, and a survey shortly before the war showed that the per capita income was almost the lowest in this vast community. Bethnal Green at that time had 100,000 people. Today's population is sharply reduced, and Hitler did that with his blitz: he destroyed large numbers of humble homes, killed hundreds of the people, and there is not now living accommodation for all the survivors. Thousands have had to disperse.

Bethnal Green is an essential part of the London picture, and we visited it the other day, had a long talk with a good-natured, efficient chap who is head of its civil defences—head also of an important part of the civic administration. He showed us the quarters, in the reinforced basement of a civic building, where 24 hours a day and seven days a week there is maintained a rigid system of check and protection against air attack—manned mainly by municipal workers who take turns in night duty in A.R.P. To this room is flashed instant word of any "incident" and adequate facilities are at hand for dealing with any situation: first aid workers, rescue squads, fire fighters, and so on.

There are shelters in Bethnal Green for all its residents, and we saw the largest of them in a tube railway which had been excavated when the war started but not yet put in service.

When the blitz began the people crowded into the farthest recesses of the tube and slept on boards laid on the damp earth. "They didn't know it," said our guide, "but I shivered every time I recalled that above them were great sewers, and that a direct hit might drown them all." Those were bad days. Now things are much better. Decent accommodation has been made nearer the entrance to the tube, and solid bulkheads remove any danger of flooding. There are long rows of iron bunks and 4,750 persons can sleep there in safety — in an emergency 3,000 more could stand on the platforms.

Actually close to 1,000 persons sleep in the shelter every night, raid or no raid—each has his or her own numbered bunk, and is permitted to leave a mattress and bedding roll upon it. They have developed a queer underground social life, they have a canteen and medical supervision, the tube is well-ventilated, and they find compensations. They must all be out, however, by eight in the morning and they cannot return until night. An alert at night quickly increases this shelter population by two or three thousand — the people of Bethnal Green are as brave as they come, but they have seen what bombs can do and they take no unnecessary chances.

One evening some months ago a crowd of men, women and children were entering the tube when an alert was sounded. The broad staircase, not very steep, was solid with moving humanity when a woman on the bottom step, carrying a baby, stumbled and fell. A man fell over her. In an instant scores had fallen in a dreadful pile, and when live and dead could be dragged apart the tragedy had taken 173 lives. It was a pitiful thing, and absolutely unpredictable, but additional handrails ought to make a repetition impossible.

• •

The scars of war in Bethnal Green, in the homes of the little people, are tragic and moving. In the City, in the vicinity of St. Paul's they are more majestic but no more moving. Great gaps have been torn in the old facade and the night when fire and destruction raged to the very doors of St. Paul's must have been a grim one. "I lived near here", said one conductor "and great fires were raging all around me. It seemed to me at that moment that the end of London had come".

We stopped for a brief visit to St. Paul's itself, a noble structure, the nobler for its scars. "That vacant lot", remarked our guide reminiscently, pointing from the car as we drove on, "was a shop with a shelter underneath. One night a bomb destroyed the building and broke through into the shelter. I spent fourteen hours there, in water up to my waist, helping pull out the dead and injured. Many lives were lost".

London is full of such stories, and behind the public confidence, the certainty of the people that these things will not have to be endured again, at least on a large scale, are such memories as those of the man I have quoted. London has paid a hard price for victory.

• •

Everywhere the rubble of ruined buildings has been cleaned up, and usually only the basement walls remain, so that it is not easy to reconstruct the full terror of the blitz. And in addition to the areas of concentrated damage scattered bombs have fallen in all parts of London, so that very often a boarded-up shop front conceals a spot of desolation, or the empty windows of a standing front wall show nothing behind it but ruins.

And other signs of war are everywhere — soldiers of a score of nations, guns in the parks, directions to shelters, supplementary water tanks kept full, street traffic that is almost entirely taxicabs and military vehicles.

Russians Fighting In Inner Defences Of Krivoi Rog

More Than Ten Foe Divisions May Be Trapped If Two Rail Lines Are Cut

CAPTURE KHOLM

By EDDY GILMORE
(AP Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 22 —(CP)— The Berlin radio announced today the evacuation of Krivoi Rog, iron ore city in the Lower Dnieper Bend.

Moscow, Feb. 22—(AP)—The Red Army pushed into the inner defences of Krivoi Rog today in a thrust so powerful that it seemed unlikely the Germans would be able to retain their grip much longer on this important iron ore and communications centre in the Dnieper Bend.

The fall of Krivoi Rog, coming on top of the loss of the manganese centre of Nikopol, would constitute one of the hardest industrial blows the Nazi war machine has suffered since the beginning of the Russian winter offensive.

A Soviet communique said Russian troops yesterday drove into the outskirts of the city, through which one of two German-held railways runs west from the Dnieper Bend. The other line runs parallel about 20 miles to the southwest.

A drive across these lines by the Red Army would trap a German force probably larger than the -0 divisions previously encircled and crushed in the Cherkasy pocket 140 miles to the northwest, field dispatches indicated.

On the northern end of the front, the Russian war bulletin said Soviet forces captured the big German base of Kholm, midway between Lake Ilmen and Novosokolnik, and a number of other points, including the town of Poddorye, district centre of the Kalinin region 25 miles northwest of Kholm.

Capture of Kholm came after Red Army troops cracked German lines south of the city, severed the highway running westward to Loknya and forced the Lovat river north and south of Kholm, the communique said.

West of Lake Ilmen other Red Army forces were driving on Pskov, German communications base, from three directions. These forces were cvredited officially with capturing approximately 112 towns and villages in yesterday's advance, including Soltsy and Volot, district centres of the Leningrad region. Soltsy is 24 miles northwest of Ino, which is 60 miles east of Pskov on the Staraya Russa-Pskov railway. Volot is 27 miles east of Dno.

More than 90,000 Nazis were killed in the Leningrad-Volkhov offensive and that another 7,200 were taken prisoner.

The 97,200 Germans killed and captured in the Leningrad region were in addition to 73,200 the Russians reported killed or captured in the Cherkasy tap in the Ukraine, and the 17,000 Nazis reported killed or captured during the storming Feb. 8 of Nikopol, Manganese centre 55 miles southeast of Krioi Rog. This makes a total of more than 190,000 Germans put out of action in about one month's fighting on the two fronts, Russian estimates indicated.

Rear Admiral Kirk To Command U.S. Task Force in Invasion

Washington, Feb. 22 (AP)—The United States navy has disclosed further details in the plans for the European invasion with announcement that Rear Admiral Alan Goodrich Kirk has been named commander of the United States task force operating as part of the combined naval force in Britain.

Also assigned to command of units of the task force are Rear Admiral John Leslie Hall and Rear Admiral John Wilkes.

Admiral Harold R. Stark is commander of all United States naval forces in the United Kingdom area.

The Allied Commander-in-Chief of naval forces for the western theatre is Sir Bertram Ramsay.

Beverage Alcohol Out of U.S. Surplus Of 1943 Potatoes

New York, Feb. 22 (AP) — The New York Times says that the United States government is planning an extensive marketing program, which includes the manufacture of beverage alcohol, as a means of disposing of 138,000,000 bushels of excess potatoes from last year's record crop.

Low-grade potatoes are being sent to two small plants making potable alcohol, according to a statement which The Times credited to Federal government spokesmen.

It also is planned to ship large quantities of surplus potatoes to Canada, to dehydrate part of the surplus for the armed forces and to convert other potatoes into cattle feed, the paper said.

Omaha, Feb. 22 — (AP) — A $5,000,000 grain alcohol plant, said by officials to be the second largest in the world, went into production here today.

The plant is owned by Defense Plants Corp., and leased to the Nebraska Farm Corps Processing Corp.

Officials say it will produce 17,500,000 gallons of alcohol a year, with 126,000,000 pounds of live stock feed as a by-product.

Held at Washington On Open Charge

Washington, Feb. 22 — (AP) — Robert I. Miller, 67, dean of Washington Municipal Court attorneys, was held on an open charge today in connection with the fatal shooting of a noted capital psychiatrist while Mrs. Miller, 42, was near collapse.

The dead man was Dr. John E. Lind, 57, a kin of Abraham Lincoln and senior medical officer at Washington's St. Elizabeth Hospital. Police said Mrs. Miller had entered Lind's automobile in the heart of the capital's shopping district yesterday. Almost immediately, Miller appeared, reached in the car, struggled with Lind and Lind was shot, once through the temple and again through the chest.

ALLIES STABILIZE ANZIO POSITIONS IN HARD BATTLE

Savage British And U.S. Resistance With Increased Air Power Probably Saves Day

8TH FRONT QUIET

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
Associated Press War Correspondent

Naples, Feb. 22 — (AP) — Heavy artillery barrages and small but fierce infantry clashes marked the fighting yesterday in the Allied beachhead south of Rome, where, 5th Army officers said today, savage British and United States resistance and their counter-attacks have definitely beaten the Nazi all-out drive to push the Allies into the sea.

Allied front-line troops and the Germans fired everything they had at one another at several points yesterday, but neither side gained any ground and positions all along the beachhead remained as they were.

Allied artillery, in a fierce exchange of fire, shelled German infantry and tanks forming up around Aprilia "Factory" east of Carroceto and apparently broke up preparations for a renewed enemy attack. None developed.

No Decisive Action

As another day passed without decisive actions either on the main front around Cassino or at the beachhead, 9th Army spokesmen interpreted relaxation of German pressure against the beachhead as meaning the German offensive to erase it had failed for the second time since the Allies landed at Anzio and Nettuno just a month ago.

The lull in fighting left approximately 100 square miles of the beachhead in Allied hands, with the front's boundaries running roughly from the coast west of Carroceto more or less in a straight eastward line about 1½ miles south of Carroceto to a point about two miles southwest of Cisterna, then due south to the beach again.

Germans Finding Out How Hard War Is Through Bombings on the Reich

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 22 —(CP)— The R.A.F. with its heavy ratio of Canadian and other Dominion personnel, in addition to doing a lot of other things, is making Hitler's speeches easier for him.

With the R.A.F.'s Bomber Command operating as it is now there is no need for Hitler to tell his Germans that this will be a hard year for them. The Germans, the record shows, learn the hard way, but if they do not know that the battle of Berlin is in full swing or how tough 1944 is shaping up, they will never know.

As January waned bombs crashed down on Germany at the rate of 100 tons of every hour of the clock, most of them on Berlin, smouldering and flaming and thoroughly disorganized, after three of Bomber Command's special doses in four nights.

After attack No. 13 on Berlin—No. 14 left the German capital virtually cut off from the outside world for a time—it was estimated in London that more than 250,000 British, Dominions and Allied airmen and airwomen at Britain's bases had so far been thrown into the fight.

Some experts figured the battle of Berlin, at that point, might be considered half over, a thought which should make any Berliner tremble. No one doubted but the battle of Berlin would stand as the biggest air battle of all time.

Some experts conceded that it may need 500,000 men and some heavy bombers to win the battle. thing like 20,000 sorties by Allied It may cost in round figures 6,000 men and 800 aircraft, the figures on personnel engaged including ground staffs, mechanics and armorers, bomb armorers and office staffs as well as the men who fly.

The aim of Bomber Command Chief Sir Arthur Harris' intention is to destroy Berlin as the nerve centre of the German war organization and to lay in ruins the city's great industrial plants which form a substantial part of the German war potential.

Perhaps half way through this job of destruction the records showed more than 20,000 long tons of bombs had wiped out most government buildings and scores of important war plants.

Cost to the R.A.F. has been well under five aircraft for every 100 sent out and for every bomber lost the air force dropped nearly 60 tons of bombs.

Greatest cost has been in trained airmen, something like 3,000 men with wings while at this stage it has been impossible to assess the toll taken of German military personnel manning ground gun batteries and searchlights, many crews of which have been certainly wiped out in the saturation of bombs.

Churchill Prefers Ringing of Bells As Victory Salute

London, Feb. 22—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill prefers the ringing of bells as a victory salute, rather than the roar of guns.

To the proposal by Capt. Leonard F. Plugge, Conservative, that cannon be sounded to commemorate major military successes, Mr. Churchill said today:

"Personally, I favor bells. We are likely to hear quite enough of guns anyway."

FIRST SITTING 21ST LEGISLATURE OPENS TODAY

66 Members Out of a Total of 88 Enter House for First Time

CAUCUSES HELD

Toronto, Feb. 22. (CP) — The new Ontario Legislature opens today, first sitting of the 21st Legislature.

A total of 88 members will file into the red-carpeted, high-walled legislative chamber for the opening at three p.m., and 66 of them will be entering the Chamber as members for the first time. Their inaugural session is expected to be a lively one, with Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative Government commanding but 36 votes against 34 C.C.F., 15 Liberals, two Labor-Progressives and one Independent-Liberal, former Premier Mitchell Hepburn.

But the veterans will be on the sidelines as the House opens, including six former Premiers—E. C. Drury, G. Howard Ferguson, George S. Henry, Mitchell Hepburn, Gordon Conant and Harry C. Nixon. Of these, Mr. Hepburn and Mr. Nixon are members of the new House.

Many members, new and old, have already been at work in caucus. A meeting of the cabinet took place late yesterday while a lengthy C.C.F. caucus was going on farther down a legislature corridor. No announcements came from either meeting.

Little Peace Time Pomp.

There will be little of the peace time pomp in today's opening, although Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews will inspect a naval guard of honor as he enters the parliament buildings to deliver the Speech from the Throne.

First Co-ordinated Raid on Germany Made From U.K., Italy

London, Feb. 22 —(CP)— The first co-ordinated air attack against Germany from bases in the United Kingdom and Italy was carried out today, with planes from the south and west hitting aircraft factories and other targets, United States Army Headquarters announced.

Internationa. at a Glance

(By The Canadian Press)

BRITAIN — Churchill proclaims unity of Britain, United States and Russia; foresees independent Poland; says strength of air attack on Germany will be stepped up as prelude to invasion; speaks optimistically of situation in Italy.

ITALY — Fighting diminishes on beachhead where German major effort has been foiled.

RUSSIA — Russians and Germans fight within Krivoi Rog in central Ukraine; German casualties in four weeks in south and around Leningrad total 187,000 killed or captured; Kholm and Poddorye fall to Red army.

AIR — Daylight raiders hit Gilze-Rijen air base in Holland and objectives in Northern France; German radio says Allied bombers, presumably from Italy, attacked southern Germany, Danube and Alps areas.

PACIFIC — Allies bomb Japanese from Paramushiro to Rabaul along 3,000 mile front; Americans complete capture of Eniwetok Island.

UNPRECEDENTED AERIAL ASSAULT HURLED AT REICH

5,000 Planes Drop Nearly 8,000 Tons of Bombs on Germany In Less Than 2 Days

BRUNSWICK HIT

London, Feb. 22—(CP)— British and United States medium and light bombers, sustaining the air offensive which nearly 2,000 U. S. heavy bombers and fighters punctuated yesterday with attacks on two Nazi aircraft plants at Brunswick and six German airfields, jabbed today at enemy targets in the Netherlands and Northern France.

It was announced that three British fighters were missing from R. A. F. night operations in which Mosquito bombers assaulted targets in Western Germany, attacked two enemy E-boats in the channel and laid mines in enemy waters.

London Barely Disturbed.

A German raid on England last night barely disturbed London, only a handful of Nazi planes crossed the channel, dropping a few bombs in Southern England. "Little damage and a small number of casualties were reported," an official announcement said.

The German news agency DNB said in a broadcast today that Allied bombers attacked targets in Southern Germany and the Danube and Alps areas at noon today.

The United States air attacks on Germany yesterday carried to new heights an Allied offensive against the Reich in which approximately 5,000 planes have dropped nearly 8,000 tons of bombs in less than two days.

German air raiders struck back at London early today, but although they dropped bombs at several points in the capital area, the attack did not approach in intensity those of Friday and Sunday nights, when fire-bombs did widespread damage.

15 U.S. Bombers Lost.

Yesterday's assaults on enemy targets were carried out with a loss of 15 U.S. bombers — estimated at 1 1-2 per cent of the force dispatches. Five fighters failed to return. Escorting fighters destroyed 33 Nazi planes and the reported total probably will climb after the bomber gunners' reports are tabulated.

The raids, in swift follow-up to the 2,000-ton R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. assault on Stuttgart Sunday night, crushed the two aircraft component factories at Brunswick which had been damaged severely by a record U.S. air aramda Sunday. Targets in Hanover and several large aircraft parks and other targets near the Netherlands border also were attacked.

38 P. C. of Industry K.O'd.

Maj.-Gen. Frederick L. Anderson, deputy in charge of the U. S. strategic bombing force in Britain, asserted Leipdig factories producing 38 per cent of Germany's single-engined fighter planes were knocked out by Sunday's record raid.

Anderson said the Bernburg plant, producing 30 per cent of the Nazis' twin-engined fighters, likewise was knocked out and restoration of the factories at Brunswick —without counting yesterday's devastating blows—had been set back "an additional three or four months."

The fighter kills during the operation brought to 94 the number of enemy planes shot down by fighters in two days. The previous two-day record was 87, established Jan. 29-30.

Recapitulation of Allied losses since the present gigantic operations began Feb. 20 suggested a decretaing scale of resistance.

Small Alert on London.

The R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. lost 79—including 18 Canadian—bombers in the opening assault on Leipzig early Feb. 20; the U. S. Army Air Forces lost 21 bombers in daylight attacks Sunday, but with their fighter escort destroyed 126 German planes; the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. lost 10—including one Canadian—bombers in Sunday night's Stuttgart raid, and the Americans lost 15 bombers yesterday.

An official announcement today described the force which attacked London as small, and said there also was minor activity over parts of south and southeast England.

Allies Stand United on Plans Making Certain Victory That 'May Not Be So Far Away'

Anglo-American Invasion Armies To Be Nearly Equal

(By JAMES M. LONG, ASSOCIATED PRESS STAFF WRITER)

London, Feb. 22 —(AP)— Prime Minister Churchill told the world today that Allied bombing far beyond anything yet "employed or indeed imagined" would strike Germany in every corner in prelude to the final smashing by British and American invasion armies of "approximately equal" power.

The three great Allies still stand "absolutely united" and "none of the ground made good at Moscow or Teheran" has been lost despite disquieting articles in the Soviet press, the Prime Minister declared in a confident but cautious war review in Commons.

The Allies stand united on war plans which make certain a victory that "may not be so far away," he declared.

No War-End Prediction.

Mr. Churchill said he could neither guarantee that the war would finish in Europe this year, or extend into 1945, and declared Hitler still is in "full control" in Germany, with 300 divisions in his army.

Half a million Nazis are fighting in Italy, and "Hitler evidently has decided to defend Rome with the same obstinacy as Stalingrad." But Allied leaders are confident of success, and reinforcements are pouring in from Africa.

Other Highlights.

Other main highlights of Mr. Churchill's first war review since the Teheran and Cairo conferences:—

AIR OFFENSIVE: The U.S. Bomber force in Britain "now begins to surpass our own and soon will be substantially greater still". This air campaign against Germany—the foundation for invasion and "our chief offensive effort at present"—will reach a scale "far beyond the dimensions of anything which yet has been employed or indeed imagined", with long-range bombers hitting Germany from Italy as well as Britain.

RETALIATION: The Germans are preparing on the French shore new means of attack on this country either by pilot-less aircraft or possibly rockets or both on considerable scale", but vigilant Allied air commands are "striking at all evidences of these preparations."

INVASION: While the British and American forces will be relatively equal at the outset, if this battle is prolonged "the continuous flow of Americans would make their force the greater".

ITALY: The "forces in the bridgehead are well matched", but "we are definitely stronger in artillery and armor" and air power. The fact there are "something like half a million Germans now in Italy is not unwelcome to the Allies", giving the opportunity to fight the Nazis. "We have sufficient forces at our disposal in Africa to nourish the struggle as fast as they can be transported across the Mediterranean".

JAPAN: The air power of Japan also is being overmatched and worn down, and Japan's production is "incomparably small compared with that of the great powers Japan has assailed".

NAVAL: British action alone has sunk 19 enemy warships and many auxiliaries since Jan. 1, 1943, and half the U-boats known to have been destroyed, and was largely responsible for sinking 315 enemy merchantmen. The Royal Navy in the same period lost 95 warships either sunk or disabled for long periods and 7,677 officers and men of the Royal Navy, and 4,200 of the Merchant Marine.

YUGOSLAVIA: Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) and his Partisans more than 250,000 strong are engaging at least 14 of the 20 German divisions in the Balkans.

No Distrust

Mr. Churchill said it had been asked whether articles in Soviet newspapers implied a cooling-off in Anglo-Russian or American-Russian friendship and a rebirth of suspicion.

The House cheered as he added, "I feel fully entitled to reassure the House on that important point."

The Allies, he declared, "are equally resolved to pursue the war at whatever cost to a victorious conclusion and they believe that a wide field of friendly co-operation lies before them after the destruction of Hitlerite Germany."

Britain is intensely interested in maintaining Poland's independence the Prime Minister continued, and is convinced that repeated Moscow declarations for a strong, independent Poland "represent the settled policy of the Soviet Union."

"I have intense sympathy for the Poles but I also have sympathy with the Russian standpoint," he added.

"I cannot feel that Russia's demand for reassurance about her western frontier goes beyond the limits of what is reasonable or just."

Foreign Secretary Eden is working with the Poles seeking a working agreement pending a post-war boundary settlement and a new statement may be made soon, the Prime Minister continued.

Mr. Churchill was in good humor and evoked frequent applause and laughter as he reassured the House of the progress of the war in Italy, at sea and in the air.

In broadcasts after the speech the German radio stressed Mr. Churchill's warning against hopes of an early German collapse and the statement that Nazi troops were fighting well. His disclosure on British naval losses was trumpted loudly. The broadcasts significantly ignored his promise of a greatly intensified aerial offensive although the Paris stations included this in their resume.

The Polish Question.

Speaking of his "sympathy for the Russian viewpoint" in regard to Poland, Mr. Churchill said:—

"Twice in her lifetime, Russia has been violently assaulted by Germany. Many millions of Russians have been slain and vast tracts of Russian soil have been devastated as result of repeated German aggression. Russia has the right of reassurance against future attacks from the west and we are going all the way with her to see that she gets it, not only by the might of her arms, but by approval and assent of the United Nations.

"The liberation of Poland may presently be achieved by Russian armies after these armies have suffered millions of casualties in breaking the German war machine. I cannot feel that the Russian demand for reassurances about her western frontiers goes beyond the limit of what is reasonable or just.

"Marshal Stalin and I also spoke and agreed upon the need for Poland to obtain compensation at the expense of Germay both in the north and west."

He declared that "unconditional surrender does not mean the German people will be enslaved or destroyed."

"It means, however, that the Allies will not be bound to them at the moment of surrender by any pact or obligation," Mr. Churchill said. "There will be no question, for instance, of the Atlantic Charter applying to Germany as a matter of right and barring territorial transferences or adjustments in enemy countries.

"No such arguments will be admitted by us, as they were used by Germany after the last war, saying that they surrendered in consequence of President Wilson's 14 points. Unconditional surrender means that the victors will have a free hand. It does not mean that they are entitled to behave in a barbarous manner, nor that they wish to blot out Germany from among the nations of Europe."

The Prime Minister devoted a long passage in his speech to the major efforts of the British Isles in

German U-Boat Crews Beginning To See Handwriting on the Wall

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

A Port in Northern Ireland, Feb. 22 — (CP) — It is a losing battle now for the German submarine packs in the North Atlantic and there are indications that the U-boat crews themselves are beginning to see the writing on the wall.

Survivors from destroyed submarines used to brag a lot to their captors but now they haven't got much to say. My impression is that the Atlantic U-boat assignment was all right back in 1941 and 1942 but for the past year their job has been nothing to envy. Their opponents were getting too strong.

Steadily and methodically the Allies' strength has grown for the Atlantic escort and anti-submarine war and here at this naval base when you talk to crews of Canadian and British fighting ships you find conclusive evidence that they have the upper hand in the marathon battle against the U-boats.

There will be more sinkings, but the heavy losses of a year ago when sometimes many merchant ships in a single convoy would be sent to the bottom aren't likely to be suffered again.

From the top commanders here to the sailors who man the guns and fire the depth charges there is a steadfast feeling of confidence that the worst is over and that with continued vigilance any major efforts by German submarines can be defeated.

Things Responsible

These are the things that have produced this favorable turn in the Atlantic battle:

1. Increase in the number of escort vessels—destroyers, corvettes, sloops, frigates—and improvements and ingenious developments in anti-submarine devices and instruments to locate U-boats under the surface.

2. More extensive air cover from coastal command aircraft of the Royal Air Force, the Royal Canadian Air Force and planes of the United States Navy. Acquisition of the Azores bases has been a vital factor in this consideration and now the convoys have air cover practically all the way across the Atlantic. At night the planes search out the submarines with searchlights and by day they maintain constant patrols around the ships.

3. Employment of offensive groups of destroyers, frigates, and corvettes to hunt out the submarines long before they get into position to intercept convoys. These "killer" groups are apart altogether from the escort ships, which mother the convoys across the ocean. The killers operate independently of the escorts most of the time and roam up and down the Atlantic on the lookout for every U-boat they can locate.

Stobie being in attendance to treat the injured lad. Thos. Thorne, Humane Society Inspector, was informed of the attack and investigated. He learned the dog responsible for the attack was owned on Bleecker Ave. and the matter was further probed today, when the owner was ordered to secure his canine for the next nine days.

ILL SOLDIER HOPES FOR RETURN OF DRESSING GOWN

Maybe the party responsibel for the taking of a man's dressing gown from the lobby of the City Hotel on Monday just doesn'tk now the circumstances or background of the case. No doubt if he did he would return the dressing gown with alacrity.

Actually the dressing gown, only purchased Monday morning, belongs to a returned soldier who has been ordered to Christie Street Hospital in Toronto as the result of his condition of ill health contracted while serving three years overseas. It would not only be a splendid gesture and no doubt relieve the mind of the party responsible, but the dressing gown is needed by the returned soldier, so how about it feller? After all the soldier lad did do his share in this war and now may be in hospital for many months during which time he would appreciate his dressing robe.

EARLY MORNING FOG BLANKETS DISTRICT

A dense fog drifted in on the Belleville area from the south and west early Tuesday morning slowing motorized traffic down to a snail's pace. As a matter of fact, when large transports did manage to roll into Belleville the drivers immediately parked their vehicles and waited until the heavy fog lifted some three hours later.

East of the city limits two transports, being driven in the same direction, were in collision, Provincial Police learned during the fog. One of the drivers reported the accident and told police no injuries resulted and the only damage resulting was to the radiator of the truck following. The lead vehicle applied the brakes with haste, when he came upon a motor car being driven with caution in the same direction.

The fog throughout the district lifted shortly after daybreak and motor vehicles were able to proceed on their respective routes.

Labor Board to Replace Labor Court in Ontario

Toronto, Feb. 22 — (CP) — Ontario Labor Minister Daley today announced the Labor Court of Ontario will be abolished and replaced by a Labor Board as a result of the Ontario Government's acceptance of the new Dominion Government labor code regulations.

"The Labor Court will automatically come to an end and be replaced by a board," Mr. Daley said in an interview. "The board will consist of at least five members, possibly more. I am planning to go to Ottawa as soon as possible to talk over with Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, (Federal) Minister of Labor, just how the board will be established."

He said further that the board "will not cost labor unions anything. They will not have to present their cases through lawyers, as in the court, which is part of the Supreme Court."

'Mr. X' Donates $1,000 To "Belleville" Fund

All through the campaign to raise funds for the equipping of H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" there have been rumors of a mysterious individual in the city known only as "Mr. X." He has been a figure of mystery to all but one member of the Corvette Committee, that one being Dr. James Semple, Minister of Bridge Street United Church. Dr. Semple has maintained the secrecy of the gentleman even after announcing to the committee treasurer this morning that "Mr. X" had donated $1,000 to the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" FUND.

The money was received by Dr. Semple today to be turned over to the committee. He reported that "Mr. X" made the donation with the expressed wish that the "BELLEVILLE" would long prosper and cover herself with glory and renown. He remains a mystery, but his patriotic and philanthropical generosity has been divulged to the public and, although contact with him cannot be established, Dr. Semple assures the committee that it is only for reasons of modesty that he prefers to remain known as "Mr. X."

HMCS Belleville Tag Day Was Most Successful With $701 Being Netted

Despite the severity of the weather last Saturday, the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Tag Day turned out an outstanding success, netting the Fund a total of $701.83. At a special meeting of the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Committee, the thanks of all were extended to every lady, girl and child who gave their time on Saturday to sell tags on behalf of this project and put it over so expertly. Especial thanks went to Mrs. E. J. Neate for her organizing abilities to which so much of the success is due, for her tireless efforts in contacting various women's organizations and managing the headquarters of the Tag Day throughout the day until late evening. Expressions of appreciation were extended to the four seamen who circulated through the city's places of business, hotels and offices and collected considerable amounts. Had the weather not been so cold, the opinion is that the total would have exceeded the $1,000 mark, but the results were exceedingly gratifying.

Personal contributions continue to flow into the committee treasurer, Mr. H. D. Bateman, and, although the campaign is officially closed, further contributions may be sent to Mr. Bateman by those who still wish to have an active part in the project. The latest list of contributors is as follows: :

House-to-House Canvassers Urgently Needed by Red Cross

Objective for the City Set by Headquarters at $25,000

An urgent appeal for canvassers to assist in the house to house canvass in the forthcoming Red Cross campaign has gone out from the Belleville campaign headquarters at the Riggs Motors building on Pinnacle Street. The national campaign to raise $10,000,000 throughout Canada for the work of the Red Cross will commence on Monday, Feb. 28th. Objective for the city of Belleville has been set at $25,000.

The slogan for the Red Cross campaign will be "The Need Grows as Victory Nears," exemplifying the vastly increased work of this organization as the offensive of the Allied nations swings into speedy action against the Axis powers. Food parcels for prisoners of war, hospital supplies and comforts for the armed forces, blood donor service and Allied Red Cross Societies, are only a few of the many endeavors of this international organization which does so much for the relief of suffering. And with every battle the need for its services increases.

G. A. Freeman Chairman.

General chairman of the Belleville Red Cross campaign is Mr. G. A. Freeman, with Mr. Ed. Bernstein as special names chairman. In charge of publicity and advertising is Dr. Bert Howard who will have the assistance of T. A. Wrightmeyer, Albert "Toots" Holway and James Binkley. Mr. J. Imlah will act as campaign treasurer.

Following an appeal for canvassers at the Rotary Club on Monday by Mr. Bernstein, practically every member of the club signified their willingness to participate actively in the forthcoming campaign. The campaign executive was promised every assistance possible by the club president, Mr. J. Deacon. The need for additional canvassers is urgent, however, it was pointed out by campaign officials, and those willing to act in this capacity are asked to communicate with headquarters, telephone 780.

ALLIES STAND

the war, saying it would prejudice the interests of the alliance if the other members including the Dominions did not know that Britain is playing her part.

He warned that the Germans are preparing on the French shore new means of attack on Britain "either by pilotless aircraft or possibly rockets or both on considerable scale", but declared the Allied air forces are vigilant and "we are striking at all evidences of these preparations".

U.S. Bomber Force Greatly Expanded

Mr. Churchill told Commons that "the U.S. Bomber force in Britain now has begun to surpass our own, and soon will be substantially greater still,' and termed the Allied aerial offensive "the foundation upon which our plans for overseas invasion stands".

This attack "must be regarded as our chief offensive effort at present', he added.

He said that the "honor of bombing Berlin has fallen almost entirely on us" and added that, excluding Dominion and Allied squadrons working with the R.A.F., the British Isles have lost 38,300 pilots and air crews killed and 10,400 missing, with more than 1,000 aircraft lost since the war began.

The R.A.F. had flown nearly 900,000 sorties—individual flights by an aircraft—in the North European theatre, he said.

The Prime Minister, giving his first war review since the Teheran and Cairo conferences, said that "Hitler evidently has decided to defend Rome with the same obstinacy as Stalingrad".

The fact there are "something like half a million Germans now in Italy is not unwelcome to the Allies", he added.

"Hitler and his police force are still in full control (in Germany) and the Nazi party and generals have decided to hang together", Mr. Churchill said, declaring he could give no guarantee that the war in Europe would end this year—or that it would not.

Speaking of the Italian front, he said 'the forces in the bridgehead are well matched. We are definitely stronger in artillery and armor and when the weather is favorable our air power plays an immense part".

Confidence in Success.

Allied leaders there are confident of final success, the Prime Minister continued, and "we have sufficient forces at our disposal in Africa to nourish the struggle as fast as they can be transported across the Mediterranean".

"We must fight the Germans somewhere unless we are to stand still and watch the Russians", he remarked.

It was Mr. Churchill's first report to the House since he recovered from an attack of pneumonia in the Middle East last December.

Answering a questioner before starting his war review ,the Prime Minister said a large-scale system of short leaves proposed to bring overseas troops home for a rest and then send them back was "entirely beyond our means of transportation".

But he added "such shipping as can be made available for other reasons than operational requirements and sickness is being used to bring back to home establishments the men who have been overseas for many years".

Relatively few have been overseas more than three years, he added.

Order Made at His Request

Mr. Churchill disclosed an order tightening censorship in the Mediterranean war area was made at his telegraphed request.

Asked if he had investigated the tightening up, he said, "Inquiries did not take me very long as I myself sent a telegram asking for stricter censorship on alarmist reports about the position in the bridgehead — not by the correspondents there but by persons in Naples and Algiers.

"Such words as 'desperate' ought not to be used in a battle of this kind when they are false and still less are they to be used if they are true.

"In the first case they needlessly distressed the public; in the second, they encouraged the enemy to attack. I am glad radio facilities have been restored to correspondents in the bridgehead.

"These were not the people who caused the trouble, but others in the rear. The liberty of the press is of high consequence. So also are the lives of the troops."

Emanuel Shinwell, Labor, asked, "Is it not true that newspaper correspondents have acted with the greatest discretion"?

Issued Statement

"I take full responsibility for trying to do my best to see that these matters are conducted in the proper manner," Mr. Churchill replied, "and I certainly thought from some of the headlines and telegrams coming from the people at Algiers and reporters in many cases of the American press, that the wrong impression was being given both to our people and the enemy of the situation of the bridgehead, and therefore issued some reassuring statements myself based on the statements of commanders and at the same time I telegraphed asking that there should be stricter censorship of alarmist phraseology.

"I did not in fact telegraph to General Alexander at all — I thought he was much too busy with the battle.

"I telegraphed to General Wilson who may have shown the telegraph to General Alexander. (Alexander is Allied commander in Italy; Wilson is Commander-in-Chief for the Mediterranean area.)

Used Great Discretion

"With regard to giving a general certificate of blamelessness to all newspaper correspondents wherever they have been at any time, I should like to say that they have discharged their duties with very great discretion and that this is particularly true of the men nearest to the enemy and in the same danger as the troops.

"It is the wish and the desire of the correspondents to discharge their responsibilities and help the troops in every way but at the same time accidents will happen in the best regulated families."

Asked whether as a onetime war correspondent himself, Churchill would not have resented writing dispatches to the policy dictated by the generals in the field, Mr. Churchill replied:—

"I certainly should never have been allowed in South Africa, where I was a correspondent for some time, to say that the position inside Ladysmith was desperate."

Asked if alarmist statements were made not by correspondents but be members of the Canadian and American governments, Mr. Churchill said:-

"I am only responsible for the part I took in the matter."

In his general war review, he declared:-

"I have never taken the view that the end of the war in Europe is at hand or that Hitler is about to collapse, and I have certainly given no guarantee or even held out any expectation that the year 1944 will see the end of European war, nor have I given any guarantee the other way.

"On the whole my information goes to show that Hitler and his police are still in full control and that the Nazi party and generals have decided to hang together,"

He placed the strength of the German army at about 300 divisions although many of these have been substantially reduced in number—but said their fighting quality is still high.

Turning to the bombing offensive on Germany, the Prime Minister said this, while absorbing 3,000,000 Germans, had drawn with other British and American activities, four-fifths of the German fighter force.

British Sink 19 Warships.

"This also has been of some assistance to the Soviet Union," he said. "This statement should be made in justice to the Western Allies."

He said the British navy and the R. A. F. have sunk more than half of the 7-boats known to have been destroyed from Jan. 1, 1943 to mid-February, 1044,' and added:-

"We have sunk by British action alone since Jan. 1, 1943, 19 enemy warships and also a large number of E-boats, escort vessels, minesweepers and other auxiliaries."

British action was "predominantly responsible for the sinking of 315 merchant ships aggregating 835,000 tons."

Mr. Churchill said 7,677 officers and men of the Royal Navy and about 4,200 of the merchant navy had lost their lives in Brititsh ships in the same period, but added that matters had improved as to merchant shipping lately.

He said "Britain has lost by disablement 95 ships of war" but did not classify them.

Air Chief Weapon at Present.

"The Anglo-American air attack on Germany must be regarded as our chief offensive effort at present," he said.

"The United States bomber forced in Britain now has begun to surpass our own and soon will be substantially greater still.

"The honor of bombing Berlin has fallen almost entirely on us.

"Excluding Dominion and Allied squadrons working with the R. A. F. The British Isles lost 38,300 pilots and air crews killed and 10,400 missing and more than 10,000 aircraft since the war began and made nearly 900,000 sorties in the North European theatre.

"In he four most recent raids by British and American aircraft on Germany, 9,000 tons of bombs were dropped.

Prove Their Value.

"These constitute the most violent attacks which have ever yet been made on Germany, and they also prove the value of saturation in every aspect of the air war.

"The Spring and Summer will show a vast increase in the force of attacks directed on military targets in Germany and German-occupied countries.

"Lon-range bombing from Italy will penetrate effectively to the southern parts of Germany.

"We look for very great restriction and dislocation of German munitions supplies no matter where their factories have been withdrawn."

"The whole of this air offensive constitutes the foundation upon which our plans for the overseas invasion stand.

"The scale of the attacks will reach far beyond the dimensions of anything which yet has been employed or indeed imagines."

Will Not Be Dissuaded

Disavowing any intention to be dissuaded from the full use of bombing, Mr. Churchill declared:

"The idea that we should fetter or further restrict the use of this prime instrument for shortening the war will not be accepted by the governments of the United Nations."

Warning Britain to expect retaliation with the Germans using automaton planes or rockets, he added:

"Retaliation by the enemy so far has been modest but we must expect it to increase.

"The Germans are preparing on the French shore new means of attack on this country, either by pilotless aircraft or possibly rockets or both, on a considerable scale.

"We long have been watching this with utmost vigilance.

"We are striking at all evidences of these preparations.

"Our production of aircraft, fighters and bombers, judged by every possible test, already far exceeds Germany's.

"Russian production is about equal to ours and American production alone is double or treble German production.

Japan Overmatched

"The air power of Japan also is being overmatched and their production is incomparably small compared with that of the great powers Japan has assailed.

"This air power was the weapon with which both marauding states selected as their main tool of conquest.

"There is a strange, stern justice in the long swing of events."

Mr. Churchill said that on the Italian front German reaction to the Allied landing had been "remarkable" and "Hitler evidently has decided to defend Rome with the same obstinacy as Stalingrad."

"The forces in the bridgehead are well matched," he continued.

"We are definitely stronger in artillery and armor and when the weather is favorable our air power plays an immense part.

Fighting Very Fierce.

Gen. Alexander, who has seen more fighting against the Germans than any living British commander, says the bitterness and fierceness of the fighting now going on at the bridgehead and on the Cassino front surpass all his previous experience.

"Our leaders are confident of final success and the troops are in the highest spirits—spirits of offensive vigor.

"The fact that something like half a million Germans now are in Italy is not unwelcome to the Allies. We must fight Germany somewhere unless we are to stand still and watch the Russians.

"We have sufficient forces at our disposal in Africa to nourish the struggle as fast as they can be transported across the Mediterranean."

The House cheered as Mr. Churchill added that this time last year he was "deeply anxious about the situation in Tunisia where we had just sustained an unpleasant check at Kasserine Pass—but I placed my confidence then in Gen. Alexander and in the British, French and American troops who were engaged in battle, and that is how I feel about it now."

Dealing with the various guerilla elements fighting in Greece and Yugoslavia, Mr. Churchill said:

"We should judge all parties and factions dispassionately by the test of their readiness and ability to fight the Germans and thus lighten the burdens on the Allied troops.

"This is no time for ideological preferences on one side or the other and certainly the government have not indulged themselves in this way at all."

100 Italian Ships Operating

Mr. Churchill told the House nearly 100 Italian ships are operating in the Mediterranean and that Italian troops and airmen are fighting alongside the Allies and rendering great service behind the lines.

Of the Italian government squabble he said he is "not yet convinced that any other government could be formed which would command the same obedience from the people, but when Rome falls the whole Italian situation will be reviewed. I should be sorry to see an unsettling change made at a time when the battle in its climax is swaying to and fro.

"We shall see much more clearly how to proceed and have much more varied resources at our disposal if and when we are in possession of the capital city.

"What we have agreed with the United States government is to win the Battle for Rome and take a new view when we are there."

He declared that in Yugoslavia the Partisans of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) numbering 250,000 are engaging at least 14 of the 20 German divisions in the Balkans.

Describing Tito's force as the only group in Yugoslavia who are doing any effective fighting against the Germans, he said Tito and Lt.-Col. Deakins, who parachuted to Yugoslavia as a British representative, both were wounded by the same bomb.

Greece Saddest Case

"The saddest case of all the 'diseases of defeat' is Greece," Mr. Churchill said.

"It is painful to see the confusion and internecine strife which has broken out thetre and which is to the advantage of the German invader who watches with contemptuous complacency Greek killing Greek with ammunition sent them to kill Germans."

Mr. Churchill said the fate of the Polish nation held a prime place in the thoughts and policy of the government and parliament."

"It was with pleasure that I heard from Marshal Stalin that he, too, was resolved on the creation and maintenance of a strong, integral, independent Poland at one of the leading powers in Europe," he said.

That declaration has been repeated several times and Mr. Churchill said he is convinced it represents the settled policy of the Soviet Union.

Slympathy For Poles.

"I have intense sympathy for the Poles but I also have sympathy with the Russian viewpoint", he said. "The liberty of Poland may presently be achieved by Russian armies after these armies have suffered millions of casualties in breaking German military might.

"I always have been of the opinion that matters of boundary readjustments should wait until the end of the war but the fact that the Russians now are fighting in Poland made it indispensiable that some agreements be arrived at", he declared.

Mr. Churchill said he and Foreign Secretary Eden for several weeks "have labored with the Polish government in London with the object of establishing a working arrangement upon which the fighting forces can act and upon which an increasing structure of good will and comradeship can be built between Russia and Poland".

Agreed on One Thing.

"One thing we agreed at Teheran to which we all are bound in a solemn pact is to fall on and smite the Hun by land, sea and air with all the strength that is in us in the coming Spring and Summer", he said.

"The task is heavy, the toil is long and the trail will be severe.

"Let us all try to do our best, to do our duty.

"Victory may not be so far away and will certainly not be denied us".

Mr. Churchill spoke for an hour and eighteen minutes.

Boy Scout Week

This week is being observed across Canada as Boy Scout Week and for its great work in character building the people of the Dominion give unreserved support of this noble movement. Its achievements are written in lives of many scores of thousands of young men and boys who have come into association with this cause. It has shown itself in the finest young manhood of Canada.

There is no financial appeal in connection with this observance but it is well that the public interest in this organization should be widespread for it has as its aim the development of the finest type of character among the youth and boyhood of this country. Its members are inspired to be good citizens, to honor God and their King and they receive commendable training in doing good deeds in a practical way. This is the great freedom which youth can have, to be trained to be and do the best unselfishly.

The Boy Scout Movement is a training in practical democracy, as well as in noble idealism. It is the product of freedom and the finer things of life.

In the time of war the movement has shown its value on the active front and on the home front. In the cause of freedom it has proved itself with every ounce of devotion in the lives of its members. This it has done for many scores of thousands and this it will do for the young now entering Scouting or soon to enter Scouting.

There are many organizations of society which are doing effective work but none is doing more than Scouting for the youth of the land. It satisfies the needs and demands of boyhood of today and it has a training for the days ahead when the post-war era is ushered in.

It has a worldwide appeal which only nations bent on aggression blocked. In the reception which the Boy Scout Movement has received can be seen the measure of the nations which welcomed it and those Axis powers that banned it. That is the proof of the genuine principles of brotherhood and good will which the Scout Movement inculcates.

The rising generation in Canada sees the achievement of the Scout Movement as it is revealed on every hand. Younger boys can have no more noble inspiration than the work of this organization. Parents should interest themselves in Scouting intimately and therefore be able to aid in the spread of the principles which it carries out in every day actions and deeds.

This movement gives the incentive to good deeds and to high moral and ethical standards. It turns the activities of boys into the best channels as for instance in these days when more than 87,000 are Scouts. Thousands have been giving assistance with Victory Loan, salvage campaigns, the sale of War Savings Stamps and the work of the Red Cross and other organizations.

This is Real Shangri-La

The United States has an aircraft carrier named Shangri-La, after the site of a fictious base in Tibet according to a James Hilton novel. Incidentally it may be recalled that when Japanese curiosity was high over the source of the planes which under Major-General James Doolittle bombed Tokyo on Sunday, April 18, 1942, President Roosevelt said they came from Shangri-La.

Japan may hear more of Shangri-La since a carrier bears the name. What it will be able to do in the war against the "Nips" can very well be left to the future to unfold. Forerunners of the Shangri-La played the other day mischief with the Japanese installations, shipping and planes at Truk.

What was a name of something mythical is now the name of something very practical, an airplane carrier which is the type of ship which has dealt hard with the Japanese. President Roosevelt made a joke of the Japanese curiosity two years ago and now the Shangri-La is going to war on the aggressor.

Raid Upon Raid on Germany

Germany and Nazi-occupied Europe have never seen the like of what has developed on the western front in the air war.

Four of the greatest blows in history have just struck and staggered German cities and Hitler's war machine. In fact all the greatest air raids in history have been made on Germany.

Night and day they came, Saturday night, Sunday, Sunday night and Monday—what a list of cities attacked with as high as two thousand planes raiding in daylight Sunday and Monday at Leipzig!

Night and day they came, Saturday and Sunday, in raids which took up where the others left off. Germany, the master aggressor nation, has brought upon its head these heaviest blows that man and city were ever called upon to take. On two of the raids about two thousand planes each were directed at the offending nations' cities.

What weight of bombs fell and how much havoc was wrought by the cascade of explosives from the skies over the week-end the Huns know, their cities reveal.

Something of the full penalty that is coming to that nation that allowed this war to be launched upon the world is now being felt.

But Germany has to suffer more than this. She has to pass through the furnace of the invasions from the Russian front and the other front or fronts. She has to see the defences she so proudly has extolled crumbled and her "invincible" armies flung reeling backward.

Hitler made many blunders. One of the worst was not in understanding the power of Britain and the United States to produce airplanes and airmen that shake the very structure of Germany every time they smash at the Hun and that is almost continually.

Oil for Own Lamps

(Detroit Free Press)

The United States furnished 80 per cent of the petroleum used to win World War I and is now providing 95 per cent of the high-octane gasoline to keep Allied bombers in the air. As a result of the loss of British and Dutch installations in Burma and the East Indies, and because of our highly developed refining industry, American oil reserves are being overtaxed.

Secretary Ickes' announcement that the government is ready to build a 1,200-mile pipe line to bring American-owned oil from the Persian Gulf to a port in the Eastern Mediterranean reveals we may have to import foreign oil to eke out our war-depleted reserves. Whether the American companies having oil concessions in the Middle East should finance these privately or with government assistance may be debatable. That we should follow Britain's example in acquiring oil sources in other parts of the world is simple prudence.

Interplanetary Flu

("Newsweek" Magazine)

You may now blame Mars if influenza has downed you this winter. Prof. Louis Backman of Sweden's Upsala University recently said it was quite probable that influenza and other epidemics of mysterious origin were started by germs from other planets, which had been pushed to the earth by the propulsive power of sunlight. Backman cited experimental evidence to prove that viruses could survive the temperature of 459 degrees below zero to which they would be exposed during their voyage through space. It was also thought far from fantastic to suspect that organisms not only might be propelled by the sun's rays but also might hitchhike earthward on meteorites.

"Outer Barbarians"

(Brantford Expositor)

For centuries a Chinese term for Japanese has been "Outer Barbarians." It still applies. Indeed it is more appropriate than ever before. That is how the little men of the Mikado's Empire will be regarded by civilized peoples for years and decades to come.

AUGUSTINE WASHINGTON

("This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased!"—Mat. 17:5.)

As once at Jordan from the skies a voice by John was heard,
If fathers of good sons could speak, would not all hearts be stirred?
Would not they tell us: There's no pride or oy of gain or deed
Like that of having lived to see the son they've loved succeed.

Of Augustine they'll little find who for the father looks.
Of him there's scarce a paragraph in history's many books.
Yet, like the Father of us all who gave the world a Son,
How great the pride of him must be who fathered Washington!

To be the father of a man! What better
joy could be?
To tell: "My son reached heights of fame that were denied to me!"
Would not all fathers given the choice pass gladly fortune by,
To say: " 'Tis my beloved son, in whom well pleased am I"?

White Trash

By W. L. CLARK
(In Windsor Star)

Without excusing Charlie Chaplin for any moral errors he may have made recently or in years past, something should be said about the white trash who beset actors and anyone of prominence or with a little money. So many girls will do anything for cash on the line or the promise of a part in a play or a movie. These girls hound a man and chase him from here to there, trying to get something on him, endeavoring to blackmail or otherwise force him into paying out money or using influence to get promotion.

It can be argued that the men should give the white trash a wide berth and not get mixed up with them. All right, but it is not always as easy as that. Some of these women are so persistent, so full of guile, they scheme their way into the centre of things.

The man, of course, is always blamed for the trouble. The girl is always depicted as a sweet young thing who has been wronged. Usually the girl is a pretty smart trick, who knows all the answers plus the answers to a lot of questions that are never asked.

By the way, Charlie Chaplin used to be the great American comedian. Since he got into trouble again, he is now referred to as the little British actor.

Notes From Britain:—

Canadian Army in Britain in Offensive Mood and Ready to Go Newsman Finds

By VERNON M. KIPP

(Special to Ottawa Journal and The Ontario Intelligencer.)

London, Feb 2.

It had been a day with the Canadian Artillery somewhere in England, and in the late afternoon our appointments took us to the quarters of a high Canadian field officer with whom we talked and had tea. He knows a good deal of the fighting in Sicily and Italy, he must have fairly complete knowledge on plans for the coming invasion of the continent, and he was full of confidence. And, asking questions in his turn, this man wondered if public opinion in Canada were fully prepared to carry on with the war in the Pacific as soon as Germany could be knocked out? That clearly showed the direction of his thoughts. I asked him if he agreed with General Eisenhower that the war with Germany would end this year. He did not answer in a word, but said he was always optimistic, and he is looking on to other fields.

This man told us proudly that the Canadian troops had done extremely well in Italy. We asked him to explain the slowness of the campaign there, and he said he thought people generally did not appreciate the difficulties of the terrain—a rough, easily-defended country of which the Germans were taking full advantage. However, he went on, from the beginning the Allies had contained enemy forces greater than their own, and had made steady gains. He expressed great pleasure at the co-operation in Italy of British and Canadian troops.

We asked him also if there was apparent any clear deterioration in quality of the German troops in Italy, as has been claimed. He said the best Germans, such as the Hermann Goering division, were as good as ever; hard, tough, skilled and determined. But, he added, there were second-line units perhaps a little readier to throw in their hand than they would have been a year ago. Sometimes this was because the Germans had impressed Poles, Czechoslovaks, and men of other races in their ranks, where they became centres of disaffection and, given the opportunity, leaders in surrender.

This officer could not discuss invasion plans, but he did make it clear to us that he is not among those who expect colossal losses in the Allied forces. It was his view that casualties should not be much higher than in the Italian campaign, proportionate to the numbers involved.

We had spent the morning with an artillery unit, the commanding officer a great genial chap who obviously loved his guns and lived for the day when he could sight them on an enemy position. The guns were set up in the open space about a small village, most of its buildings occupied by the artillerymen, and the gun-crews went through their drill for us with precision and enthusiasm—but they did not fire the guns. After the big fellows the C.O. showed us weapons small and deadly, including a two-man tank-buster in which he showed special pride. It is the British equivalent of the American "bazboka". One can operate it, but two are better.

Lunch was in the officers' mess, a private home without heat, with very little furniture, and a bit bleak. But the meal was excellent—indeed we have found that our Services, living on British rations, feed very well. The troops get more and better food than the civil population.

Outside birds were singing in the trees, the occasional rose was in bloom, and the perennial gardens were green and fresh. Canadian soldiers in their borrowed premises try to keep up the gardens.

The Canadian Army is dispersed over half Britain, and it happened that we saw no infantry, nor any tank crews. There was, however, a fascinating couple of hours in the huge establishment of No. 1 Base Ordnance Workshops where Canadian workmen repair and service Canadian army equipment from tanks to watches, guns to binoculars. A huge building full of roaring tanks was a thrilling sight. The establishment has 500,000 square feet of floor space and uses some 1,700 uniformed men—twice as many could be used if they were available, and the officers in charge would be glad of 300 members of the Women's Army for clerical and other light tasks. The men get an extra 50 to 75 cents a day as trades pay, and many of them are learning on highly-modern machines trades which will serve them well in peace.

The men seemed fast workers, their officers told us they were efficient, and everybody seemed cheerful. I chatted at his lathe with Pte. J. G. McIntommy, of 537 Gilmour Street, Ottawa, who asked that his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. McIntommy, be told that he is well and contented.

The visit to the Army ended with a dinner given us in London by Major-General P. J. Montague, in charge of Administration at Canadian Military Headquarters, with whom were associated Brigadier J. H. MacQueen, of New Glasgow, N.S., Deputy Quartermaster-General; Brigadier M. H. S. Penhale, of Ottawa, of the General Staff at Headquarters, and Brigadier Charles S. Booth, of Winnipeg, Deputy Adjutant-General, who is a member of the Canadian House of Commons.

From everyone with whom we talked, whether general or private, we had one very clear impression—that the Canadian Army is in an offensive mood, using this word in its military sense, is thoroughly fed up with waiting, and will welcome the order to cross to the continent. It is well armed, seems excellently equipped, is highly trained, and ready to go.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Someone has described the dog as "a heart wrapped up in fur." But the husky dog merits even more commendation. His qualifications are of a type that draws most praise in the far North, where friendship, skill, strength, endurance and bravery are highly valued. Huskies often stand 25 and more inches to the shoulder, and weigh around 100 lbs. at maturity. Their thick fur fluffs out in a soft cloud and their bushy tails swing forward over their backs. They have a "sixth sense" of direction that enables them to find their way through mists and blizzards. When lost, the driver of a team trusts the leading husky to bring him safe home...and the animal always does! Huskies scorn cold weather and are never attacked by snow and ice blindness as is man.

When natives of the North county went hunting 100 years ago they rounded up their husky dogs ... and their best bows and arrows. Today it's much the same story. The bows used are usually made of spruce wood. A thong of sinew takes the place of string. The arrows are also fashioned from spruce, with big flat-face knobs—no metal tips.

Bows and arrows have figured in stories of exploits from time immemorial. The long bow was the favourite national weapon in England during the early centuries of its history. It was of the height of the archer, or about six feet long, and the arrow was generally half the length of the bow. At one time, merchants were obliged to import a certain portion of bow staves with every cargo ....this to encourage and facilitate the use of the weapon.

CLEAN PEARLS IN BRAN SOLUTION

These days when jewelers are extra busy, how about doing a job on that glass necklace or string of discoloured pearls yourself? To clean your favourite glass or wood jewelry—simply dip it in soapy-rich, grease-dissolving suds to which a tablespoonful of ammonia powder has been added. Rinse thoroughly in lukewarm water. Rub dry with a soft cloth. As for making last year's pearls gleam like new, place them in hot water in which bran has been boiled with a little cream of tartar. Rub them gently once or twice between the hands and let remain in bran solution till water is cold. Now rinse thoroughly in lukewarm water. For most successful results, place pearls in sawdust to dry—or on white paper in a dark place.

NUGGETS OF KNOWLEDGE

In ancient times Sanacharib of Assyria marched against Egypt, and Pharaoh Sethos recruited an army and marched to meet the enemy at Pelusium, "which commands the entrance of Egypt."

What happened is related in the history of Herodotus:

"As the two armies lay here opposite one another, there came in the night a multitude of field-mice, which devoured all the quivers and bow-strings of the enemy, and ate the thongs by which they managed their shields. Next morning they commenced their flight, and great multitudes fell, as they had no arms with which to defend themselves.

"There stands to this day in the temple of Vulcan, a stone statue of Sethos, with a mouse in his hand, and an inscription to this this effect—'Look on me, and learn to reverence the gods.'

More than 1800 years ago Flavius Josephus, the historian of the Jews, wrote: "Every one ought to worship God according to his own inclinations, and not to be constrained by force."

In the foreword of the King James Version of the Bible the English translators capitalized pronouns referring to King James, but in the body of the Bible they did not capitalize pronouns referring to the deity.

James M. Cox, Democratic candidate for President in 1920, was so given to the use of superlatives such as "Astounding" when he was a young newspaper reporter that he was nicknamed "Astounding Cox."

Under date of June 2, 1816, John Quincy Adams, then U. S. Minister to England, made this interesting entry in his now famous diary:

"Sir James Mackintosh asked me if I thought Dr. Franklin had been sincere in the profession which he made here, that he lamented the Revolution which was to separate the colonies from Great Britain; which he said he did the day before he had left London, even in tears, I told him I did not believe Dr. Franklin wished for the Revolution—nor Washington. He asked me if any of the leading men had. I said, perhaps my father, Samuel Adams, and James Otis."

"Candelabra" means a large ornamental candlestick with several branches. Originally the word was the plural of "candelabrum," but "candelabra" is now often construed as a singular with "candelabras" as the plural. It is derived from Latin "candela," meaning candle.

Greeks in Greece never call themselves Greeks. "Greek" since ancient times has been a foreigner's name for the inhabitants of the country they called Greece but which the inhabitants called Hellas.

UNIVERSAL CARRIER

Often termed the "most useful vehicle in this war," the Universal carrier is the pet of the infantry, supporting and complementing their actions over terrain that would be impassable to almost any other means of transport. This speedy, lightly armoured, open-topped vehicle travels on caterpillar tracks at a speed comparable with that of road-confined automobiles. It can mount a Bren gun for action against enemy troops and aircraft, be utilized as a smoke screen layer, barbed-wire destroyer, for laying communication wires, and for many other types of work. The hard-hitting infantry have a tough affection for these speedy weapon carriers that can take as much punishment as the versatile infantrymen themselves, and still come back to hand out even tougher punishment to the enemy.

Picton and District

Hunters Shoot Female Wolf After Long Chase

Picton, Feb. 22 — Proving themselves king of wolf hunters, Nelson Moore and Alton Hineman of Point Petre yesterday shot their fourth wolf this winter. The animal gave them a two-day chase before it was finally disposed of. As a result they collect a $25 bounty offered by South Marysburgh Township, $40 offered by Prince Edward County and $10 by the Government, which they share. This was the second female they had shot and it is expected that the pack will be greatly reduced as a result. How the animals got into Prince Edward County is a mystery.

The animal was trailed until dark on the first day when it escaped by taking to ice floes though badly wounded by Mr. Hineman. On the day following, the men chased it through deep snow for hours before it again fled to the ice banks along Lake Ontario. Mr. Moore shot it and the animal tumbled into the water. Tracks were seen which led them to believe that at least two other wolves remain in that area, where they have wreaked havoc among flocks of sheep.

Now Believed Prisoner.

Pte. Keith Monroe, who was officially reported killed in action on January 17th., is now believed to be a prisoner of war. A card indicating this fact was received by his wife who is engaged in war work at Ajax, and was forwarded to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Monroe, here. The card was dated January 20th, and while not an official prisoner of war card, was of the type others have received previous to official notice being received.

Pte. Monroe went overseas with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in 1939 and had been serving with that unit in Italy.

Takes Charge of Parish.

Major the Rev. J. G. McCabe of Kingston has been appointed to take charge of the Parish of St. Gregory the Great during the illness of Rev. J. A. Meehan, who is confined to Hotel Dieu, Kingston.

Rev. McCabe returned from overseas last December, and was released from the chaplaincy service due to physical disability incurred while on active service.

He is a native of Merrickville and was ordained in 1924. For eight years he was Professor at Regiopolis College, Kingston. In 1932 he was appointed pastor of Trevelyan where he remained for seven years.

At the outbreak of war, Fr. McCabe offered his services as military chaplain. In January, 1940, he was named chaplain at Barriefield with the rank of Honorary Captain. In July of the same year, he went overseas where he remained for three and one-half years, during which time he was promoted to the rank of Major.

PRESTO MUSIC CLUB

The Presto Music Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Earle Monday evening when the following program was presented:-

Piano numbers were also given by Mrs. Hubbs playing Rhapsody in E flat by Brahms and "Scherzo in C sharp minor" played by Wm. Connor. Mr. J. D. Bankier, as guest soloist, sang two groups of songs, "Others", "Sweet Miss Mary", "Little bit of Honey" and "Rest Thee Sad Heart", Linden Lee", "Leetle Bateese'. Mrs. Franklin gave a reading from the Life of Clara Schumann.

After the musical program Mr. Alex Gordon showed two excellent movie films, one of a trip through the Adirondack Mountains and a colored one of his garden in full bloom.

The War Today— Where Is Japanese Fleet? It May Try to Avoid Big Battle

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The mystery of the whereabouts of the Japanese fleet which from time to time has anchored within the "invulnerable" shelter of Truk is bringing this column many inquiries from readers. Honesty compels me to admit that I don't know: Still there are some relative facts which are illuminating.

There hve been numerous occasions during the war when a large Japanese fleet was reported at Truk. This base, one of the strongest ever developed, could shelter the Mikado's entire Navy. However, the exigencies of global conflict have compelled the Nipponese to keep their main strength in home waters, to protect the Motherland, while Truk has been used as the chief station for the Central and South Pacific operations.

The American force which carried out the devastating raid on Truk last week undoubtedly was much disappointed it didn't find more warships in the anchorages, though unhappy Tokyo thinks they did well enough as it was. On Feb. 4 two photo planes took pictures of Truk.

The Japanese, who saw the photo planes at work and turned anti-aircraft guns on them, may have guessed the appearance of the photographers presaged a major attack and moved the greater portion of the Truk fleet to safe waters.

hTis would tend to substantiate the idea—widely held among naval men—that the Japanese will try to avoid a big naval battle until the day when they will have to defend themselves in home waters. It probably means also that they no longer will risk basing a large fleet on Truk, since the recent Allied advance into the Marshall islands will enable them to raid the base by sea or by air more or less at will.

Despite all this it would be a mistake to assume that Truk's value already has been nullified. It still remains the main barrier to progress towards the Philippines and Japan proper, and so long as it operates in strength it will provide support for numerous other island bases like Wake, Ponape, Guam, Bonin and Marcus.

FIRST SITTING

Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative Government went into power in the provincial election last August 4, electing 38 members on a 22-point program on which most of the government's legislation is expected to be based. However, the government's strength has been reduced to 35 by the recent death of Wallace Walsh, (PC-Haldimand-Norfolk), the absence overseas of Hon. Capt. the Rev. A. W. Downer, (PC-Dufferin-Simcoe), and the appointment of W. J. Stewart (PC-Toronto Parkdale), as Speaker. Today Mr. Walsh's seat is draped in black.

Seated on Both Sides.

Opposite the government seats are Opposition Leader E. B. Jolliffe and his 33 C.C.F. followers. The 15 Liberals under former Premier Nixon, holding the balance of power, are seated on both sides of the Chamber.

Former Liberal Premier Mitchell Hepburn sits as an Independent Liberal, on the government side of the House, close to the two Labor-Progressive members, A. A. MacLeod and J. B. Salsberg, representing Toronto seats.

Premier Drew has already indicated the government's intention of standing or falling by its legislative program, and both the C.C.F. and the Liberal parties have indicated their intention of supporting any government legislation which they consider is in the best interests of the province.

1,220,036 DISCHARGED IN U.S.

Lookout Kept For U. S. Plane Reported Missing

Point Traverse, February 22—A keen watch is being maintained over open waters off here, for the possibility of locating an American plane reported missing over Lake Ontario. Coastguardmen at Oswego, N. Y., some forty miles from here, reported the missing plane passing out over the lake during a blinding snow storm.

R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. planes which operate over bombing and gunnery ranges in this area, are keeping a sharp lookout over the ice-caked waters for any trace of the plane.

A plane operating from the American side, it is understood, covered an extensive area in the vicinity of the Galloo and Main Duck islands.

Speaker Discusses Labor Relations At Rotary Club

Labor problems confronting present day industrialists, and the importance of morale on the home production front as encouragement to workers for their utmost efficiency, were discussed before members of the Belleville Rotary Club at their regular weekly luncheon meeting Monday by Mr. Herbert H. Webb, member of the war production council of Munitions and Supply.

Speaking on "Labor Relations" gained from experience as a member of the war production board, Mr. Webb defined morale as a state of mind, which acts as a stimulant to greater endeavor under exacting circumstances. He claimed that morale came from knowledge which in turn meant proper understanding gained through close association with the facts.

He cited how production had been increased and how possible strikes had been prevented in certain Canadian war plants through explaining to the workers the vital necessity of the product, which they were producing. Prediction of the war's end could not be made until the Allies were equipped to carry the war on it was stressed.

Gives Reason For Cancellation.

Referring to the industrial transition, which he claimed was already on, the speaker gave the reason for the cancellation of many war contracts. The changed phase of the war today made equipment produced one year ago of little use. As an illustratiuon he pointed to the fact, that an anti-aircraft gun produced to meet with conditions two years ago, was of little use today in knocking out enemy pill-boxes. Men are being taught new jobs and are learning every day to make new equipment and will continue to do so until the war is over, he said. A new situation arises every day and new tactics devised to meet it mean a change of equipment.

The necessity of this new equipment must in many instances be stressed upon the workers to attain maximum efficiency, and the speaker urged this procedure of boosting morale on the production front wherever military authorities could safely release the facts.

The speaker advised businessmen to make a close study of the changing conditions in industry and urged that the conception of morale as based upon knowledge and understanding should be carried into the post-war period. It was particularly urged that employers not look upon their workers as merely employees but as the people with whom they worked and associated in business.

Mr. Webb prefaced his address with a few complimentary words about Belleville, in which he claimed there were 22 factories engaged in war production. He intimated that possibly no other city in Canada could surpass this record on a per capita basis.

President Jack Deacon acted as chairman for the meeting and introduced the guest speaker, while J. Owen Herity expressed the thanks of the club. "Sandy" Burrows acted as song leader with Leo Riggs at the piano, while Art Francis acted as sergeant-at-arms.

CELEBRATES 100th BIRTHDAY

She was married at Harwood in Northumberland county in 1864, her husband dying in 1904.

FAVORS BIMETALLIC MONETARY SYSTEM IN POST-WAR ERA

New York, Feb. 22, (CP)—Global adoption of a bimetallic monetary system in the post-war era was advocated today by Prof. Humphrey Michell of the staff of McMaster University, Hamilton, Ont., in a pamphlet published by the Monetary Standards Inquiry.

He said the dimetallic system would serve as a satisfactory medium for world trade and would avert repetition of the breakdown in international finance which took place after the First Great War.

Attempts by a single country to maintain a bimetallic standard have failed and always will fail, Prof. Michell said but a world-wide bimetallic standard is practicable.

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Feb. 21 — (CP) — Rt. Hon. Harold Balfour, British Undersecretary for Air, is a frequent visitor to Ottawa and he usually is able to bring his press conferences a few intriguing front-line yarns about the airmen of whom he is so proud.

Capt. Balfour was a fighter pilot in the First Great War and has flown many of the fastest machines in use now; but for ordinary station-to-station jumps he prefers one of the light, slow-landing "air jeeps" of the type used for artillery observation.

This week, with a glint of joy, he told how one pilot, flying one of those inoffensive little machines, was "jumped" by an enemy fighter with machine-guns, cannon and formidable speed. The Allied airman thought he was a gone gosling but he used his head.

Down he went in a straight dive, chose a nice tall tree and began circling it tightly a few feet from the ground.

The fighter pilot tried to circle too, but circling under a tree at nearly 400 miles an hour in something different from the same stunt at 60. In sheer exasperation the fighter sheered off and the "jeep" pilot breathed a sigh of relief and came down to earth.

Ready Reference: When the House of Commons is in committee of supply, cabinet ministers usually have senior officials of their department seated before them to help in answering questions. Some of them come in fortified by bulky portfolios filled with papers which, they hope, will contain the answers to every question diligent M.P.'s can ask.

Most impressive of all in the defence department set-up. The experts not only carry portfolios but they have a page boy haul in a bulky wooden filing cabinet which seems adequate to carry the personal history of every army man.

Odd Titles: There's a name for almost everything in the government service, but reporters were taken with one that turned up the other day in a tabled return: "Supervisor of dittoed contracts, 'main pool.'"

Housing Priority: "Women and children first" is the motto of Joseph P. Moses, a former Toronto architect and estates manager who controls the wartime housing conversion program in the capital. So far he has found 101 families places to live, but he has a wartime list of more than 1,000.

"Our motto is women and children first and we hope other landlords will take this up," he said.

Under the reconversion program, the Federal government takes seven-year leases on large properties, converts them into flats and apartments, collects the rents and at the end of the lease, turns them back to the owner as multiple-dwelling units.

Eniwetok Taken By U. S. Troops

Pearl Harbor, Feb. 22 — (AP) — Capture of Eniwetok Island by United States Army troops fighting in the Marshall Islands and bombing of Paramushiro and Shumushu Islands at the northern end of Japan were announced last night.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz reported Eniwetok Island at the western edge of the Marshalls had been taken, and Parry Island, another segment of Eniwetok atoll, was under heavy attack by American air and surface forces. The Marines already have captured Engebi Island in the atoll.

Search planes of the Fleet Air Wing dropped more than five tons of bombs on Paramushiro and Shumushu Islands the night of FeFb. 19, Nimitz said.

The Japanese have a navy base at Paramushiro. Shumushu Island is just to the north, and both form the northernmost segments of the Kurile Islands in the Japanese archipelago.

ST. PETERSBERG
(A letter from Judge G. E. Deroche)

Temperature today 76 high, 58 low. For some weeks it has been about that, with an odd day a bit lower or a bit higher—fine for playing in the daytime and for sleeping at night. An ideal life would be Belleville in the summer and Florida in the fall, winter and spring. We gave up the Belleville end of it reluctantly, because our children are married and living in Toronto including, of course, our little grand-daughter. Then, too, Mrs. Deroche has three brothers and a sister all married and living there so it was natural that we should desire to spend our declining years with those nearest and dearest to us. Not that Toronto was a better summer city than Belleville. This is a Tourist City, first, last and all the time, a city of tourists and for tourists. The permanent city population is about 60,000, and they have, even in this war year, about 30,000 tourists. Tourists are the life blood of the city. The city council, the Chamber of Commerce, the citizens generally, fall over themselves to amuse the tourists and make them happy, contented and comfortable. The city and Chamber of Commerce together spend $150,000 annually in publicity advertising, not for industries, but for tourists. The city supplies the Tourists Centre a large building where the various tourist clubs (one for each State, Canada being a State) hold their meetings and social gatherings. It is used every night. Willionis Park, covering a whole city block is used every day and almost every night by the tourists. It seats 7,000 people in the open with a fine large Band Shell for a platform. I attended an evening program there with 5,000 people present. It was Canadian night, and heard many fine things said about Canada from the platform. There, too, the city supplies a five-acre ground for the shuffle-board, bowlers, checkers and chess, cards and dominoes. The clubs themselves have erected most of the buildings and there are several of them, some two storey, and all occupied fully every day. The shuffle board club alone has 5,500 members, and they shuffle from early morning until late at night. The 105 courts are always fully occupied.

Again the city furnishes about three acres of waterfront for the Sunshine Club which also has shuffle board and all other games including horse shoes, and a good size grand stand. Isn't it a tourist city, most of the tourists are people who have borne the hurly-burly of life and seen their day and generation and, now, in the eventide of life, come south for health, rest and recreation. This city is called the Sunshine City. Our large daily newspaper has for several years given away its whole edition on each day in which the sun does not shine—covering all these period of years, the paper has been given away on an average of only 4½ editions each year. In many respects it is a unique city.

P. S. Today a large group of different types of aeroplanes, including Fortresses, 800 in all, will fly over Million Dollar Pier.

southern front in the lower Garigliano region British troops engaged in several small clashes with the Germans, but around the vital highway town of Cassino and the equally bomb-battered Abbey Hill overlooking it, only patrols were active. Guns of oth sides exchanged shells.

On the 8th Army front across the peninsula, Allied artillery fire scattered two small German attacks toward Indian-held positions in the Orsogno area yesterday.

French-Canadian troops beat off a German patrol of 30 men which attacked a battalion outpost Sunday night. At least one of the enemy was killed. Maritime troops captured two German infantrymen found in a slit-trench. The Canadian front was quiet except for these minor encounters, war correspondent Douglas Amaron of The Canadian Press reported. He said that poorly-dressed Germans have replaced German paratroops opposing the Canadians.

Army Unit Rescued.

A British 8th Army unit marooned in the snowbound mountains was rescued as its supplies were running out. Cloudy weather and recurring snowfalls defeated efforts to rush food to the unit by road or air, but ski and mule parties finally managed to get through.

Allied planes flew about 500 sorties yesterday while the Germans flew some 60 sorties over the beachhead.

Allied airmen attacked German positions ringing the beachhead, and struck at enemy shipping and communication lines including the railroad yards at Orte and docks at Imperia and Leghorn. Three German planes were shot down without any Allied loss.

German Mosquito torpedo boats attempted to dash into Anzio harbor and strike at Allied shipping there under cover of darkness Sunday night, only to be driven off by American naval patrol craft. One E-boat flew up after it was hit and Allied officers believed another was driven ashore.

Cancer of the Large Intestine

If all people could know and fully realize that cancer, discovered early, stands a very good chance of being cured, many persons would survive the disease and live to a ripe old age.

About one-seventh of all the cancers which occur affect the stomach and bowel. Of these, six out of every ten begin in the rectum and lower part of the bowel.

According to Dr. Hyrum R. Reichmann, of Salt Lake City, usually some disturbance in the lower part of the bowel occurs, before the cancer develops. By diagnosing such conditions and getting rid of them, cancers may be prevented.

The usual type of disturbance to precede the cancer is what is known as a polyp, or overgrowth of the lining membrane of the bowel. Such polyps are more likely to occur in the large intestine or rectum than in any other part of the intestinal tract. Unfortunately, early diagnosis of these conditions and even of cancer of the rectum is the exception rather than the rule. This happens for several reasons. First, the patient himself wastes a lot of time by attempting to diagnose and treat his own disorder, or by regarding his symptoms as unimportant. There also may be a delay in having an examination of the rectum made. Too, patients often disregard the advice given to them about having an operation performed, because of the fear that it may be unsuccessful.

When cancer of the lower bowel first starts, there may be no pain or other symptoms which would cause the patient to have an examination made. Pain appears only after the cancer has grown to a considerable size. Bleeding is about the first symptom to appear in eight out of every ten cases. Unfortunately, most persons who notice blood in the bowel movement are apt to attribute it to hemorrhoids or piles, which they consider unimportant and so do nothing about it. Another early symptom is a change in bowel habits. Any person who generally has normal bowel movements and who suddenly becomes irregular in his habits, should be thoroughly and immediately examined.

It is fortunate that there are two methods of examination which make early diagnosis of these disturbances of the lower bowel possible. One of these is the X-ray. The second is the use of the proctoscope. This is an instrument made up of a tube with lights, by means of which the physician can look directly into the lower opening of the bowel and examine the lining membrane of the rectum. Any disturbances which are present can be readily seen and, if necessary, a bit of tissue can be removed through the proctoscope for examination under the microscope.

Persons who have any of the symptoms which indicate a beginning bowel disorder should not delay in having X-ray and proctoscopic examinations carried out.

Handy Hair-Set

Apply a little brilliantine for a shining finish.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT'S always something. You get a short hair cut, have a permanent and your brain roof is a bouquet of lovely tendrils. Don't have to do a thing but rake the comb through it. No more bother with rolls. No nothing, in fact. You don't even have to have a wave set, just the ends pin-curled or put up on metal curlers. You can save time by doing your shampooing and curling. Elegant!

But the way your hair grows! It never grew like that before. In no time at all your three inch cut has extended to five inches, so you have to have a trim. And when you have the trim you cut away most of the curl. So you have another permanent, possibly in less than three months' time. Well, maybe the convenience of this style of coiffure compensates for the drain on the beauty budget.

Not for Long Face

The uppity hairdo is raging like a house afire, but the cropped thatch is almost as popular. The elevated effect makes young women look older, no doubt about it, but gosh-all-hemlock what's fashion for if not to give us change? The pompadour did a hide away for nearly forty years, time it was dragged out and put to use again. Only we do wish that long faced women wouldn't wear it. Hair spun back at the sides, lifted over the forehead makes the face look inches longer and much thinner.

Full Face

Another misguided lady is the one with the full face who has her hair fluffed out front, back and sider, then perches atop the fluff a little round muffin hat. Her head has too many curves. She is the one who needs the neat arrangement at the sides, locks upswept, and the lifted effect in front.

Blessed is the woman with the seeing eye and good judgment. Her beauty errors are practically nil.

Whatever hair-do you finally select, however, keeping it in perfect order at all times is a "must." Don't be too lazy to make your own pin curls now and then before going to bed, if your beauty shop ones tend to droop and straggle. Pat your wave carefully into place after loosening the curls in the morning, giving it a quick brush-up with brilliantine for a shining finish.

The Marry-Go-Round

Mary had a little lamb;
It's fleece was up-to-date
Nine-tenths of it was cotton waste
The rest was underweight.

Mixed Grill

"Man was made to mourn" . . . and so was woman. In winter we long for spring and its flowers; in summer we pant for cold weather and snow; when we are single we yearn for love and a mate; and when we are married we fight for freedom. A man spends his time in praying for rain and then wishing it would clear up; pursuing a girl and then trying to get past her; falling in love and then trying to crawl out of it. A woman spends hers eating too many sweets and then banting off the pounds; giving up love for a career—and then wishing she'd married; or trying to get along with him, or trying to get rid of him. Ho, and also hum!

After all, says Cynical Sybil, a woman rarely makes a fool out of a man without his whole-hearted co-operation. But a man can always make a fool of a woman who loves him—unless she beats him to it by making a fool of herself.

The average man makes love very much as he carves a turkey. Either he rushes in and mutilates the whole thing, or he takes so long to get started, that a girl loses half her interest.

Teeth are those good-looking and useful white things in your mouth that you have pulled just before the doctor says "Well then, it must be your tonsils."

"Getting married in wartime is one of the easiest things in the world," says Cynical Sybil. But so is getting the flu or getting in debt or getting arrested for speeding. So what?

A man who knows how to make his exit from a romance, gracefully and effectively, may be clever; but a real artist is the one who knows how to make the girl ring down the curtain herself.

Never imagine that a man is hiding his love. Love, like a cold in the head, is something that cannot be hidden.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Teasing and Tweezing the Eyebrows

Lovelies of the stage and screen no longer seek exotic and startling eyebrow effects; they're through with all that, prefer to have their faces look human instead of like masks. Quirky eyebrows robbed the face of expressiveness. An actress knows that a lot can be done with eyebrows to express surprise, dislike, irritation. And if the eyebrow is as thin as a whisp of darning cotton, it just isn't much good as an actor.

We've found out that the extremely narrow eyebrow is no help to the eyes, that one a bit wider has a softening influence. Also, that the place for the eyebrow is directly on the frontal bone, not above it, as happens when the poor thing is plucked along the southern border. That impulse has been pursued to the bitter end. You'd think that some of the violent, enthusiastic pluckers would have noticed that the higher the eyebrow goes, the smaller the eyes appear to be. But no, they go right on with their devastating tweezing.

Beauty specialists are making every effort to bring eyebrows back to normal. In many cases nothing can be accomplished. After years of yanking out the silky threads, the papillae, from which they emerge, have become discouraged, gone out of business.

Eyebrows are not merely ornamental; they serve useful purposes. They catch dust and perspiration and that is why they should be shampooed when the face is washed. Ever think of that? Children, those hasty face washers, never pay any attention to their eyebrows. A beauty specialist once told me that the eyebrows, placed prominently on the frontal bone, intercept overhead light and deflect it from the eye. I offer this information for what it may be worth. Maybe there's nothing in the idea, but who can say for sure?

Unless the eyebrows are extremely wide, they should not be made narrower. Of course, it is necessary to remove stragglers that have wandered from the fold. Sometimes a few scattered fuzzers at the far ends are better off the premises. Eyebrows must be neat of outline; to get them that way requires only a little tweezing.

Mascara is a better friend than the crayon, which is much too revealing.

A good rule for brushing; brush upward at the inner terminal, go straight along the frontal bone in the centre, brush downward at the far ends. If the lip ends have a natural upward turn, it may be advisable to give the eyebrows a tilt, so that lines will be harmonious.

The tendency toward more natural make-up is seen everywhere. Powder is applied sparingly, just enough to give a velvety finish. Rouge and lipstick are of softer tones.

Fashion Flashes

A FEATURE of various important evening events on the west coast recently has been the number of short-skirted formal frocks in white touched with pearl or sequin embroideries.

JUST MADE for wear with soft or tailored suits is the profile brim hat with high, manipulated crown. A good model uses pale jade green felt with all-over stitching and trims it with high standing bows of green faille.

EYES STILL TURN to a survey of the neckline on coats and frocks. Thus we note the collarless cardigan neckline a feature on many new Spring suits. It is used for a pretty suit in pink and black checked woolen made with a soft detail to accent the shoulder line of the jacket which is softly bloused in back.

THE CHALLENGE of shortages and other restrictions has been well met by handbag designers and manufacturers. One of the best of the new bags is a barrel-shaped model with plastic tortoise handles which when drawn together transform the bag into a full pouch. Nice in broadcloth or suede.

HANDS OUT for a pretty new glove. Ready for Spring is a glove of pastel blue capeskin shirred to one side where the cuff is draped and caught by a posy of hand-made felt flowers in blue, yellow and pink.

JUST WONDERFUL blouses are now in the shops. A beauty is a soft blouse made with a big bow-tied neckline. The fabric is pale blue chiffon with a wide check picked out in silver thread.

CLEAN GILT FRAMES WITH MILK

With spring just around the corner any day now, the housewife will want to start preliminary bits of housecleaning that brighten up rooms. Pictures and mirrors look ever so much better for frequent cleaning. Wash the glass or mirror carefully with a cloth wrung out of soapy-rich, grease-dissolving suds, and wipe off with a cloth dipped in clear water, taking care not to let suds or water lodge on the frame. Polish with a soft cloth. If the glass has a gilt frame, clean the frame by rubbing soiled spots with a soft cloth dipped in milk. Dry by dabbing with cloth, don't rub. To restore some of the original finish to a gilt frame, rub with a sponge moistened with oil of turpentine, which evaporates readily.

Religious Education Will Be Offered in Public, Secondary Schools Says Throne Speech

Plan for Highway Construction Will Provide 27,840,000 Man Days of Labor After War

WILL EXPAND MINING

Toronto, Feb. 22 — (CP)—Legislation dealing with post-war planning and employment as well as with such other immediate problems as education, labor relations, forestry development and agriculture was forecast today in the Speech from the Throne read by Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews at the opening of the first session of Ontario's 21st Legislature.

The 5,000-word speech, longest in years, dealt at length with educational matters and said that religious education would be offered in public and secondary schools. It also proposed increases in teachers salaries and said immediate courses would be modified so additional teachers could be trained immediately to meet an acute shortage.

Several measures for the improvement of labor relations would be submitted during the session, said the speech, specifically mentioning a bill to limit the work week to 48 hours and to assure an annual holiday of one week with pay for commercial and industrial workers. The new Dominion government labor code making collective bargaining compulsory in war industry would be extended to all industries in Ontario.

Big Highway Program.

As well as forecasting legislation to establish in the province a department of planning and development for the post-war period, the speech said that the Ontario Department of Highways has prepared plans for a four-year highway construction program which will provide 27,840,000 man days of labor after the war. Expansion of the mining industry, development of fish and game resources and forest areas would also furnish employment after demobilization of the armed forces.

Agricultural education in the province had been curtailed through the loan to the Federal Government for war training purposes of buildings belonging to the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph and the Kemptville Agricultural School. However the Kemptville school buildings would be returned to Ontario May 1 and the buildings at Guelph "at the earliest possible opportunity."

"Leadership in the organization and control of agriculture has in the past depended too much upon the government" and legislation will be introduced for the formation of county agricultural committees "so that practical farm operators may themselves advise in regard to suitable policies and have a recognized place" in their administration.

To Acquire Stockyards.

Action to assist in farm marketing problems was predicted, including the introduction of a measure to acquire the Union Stock Yards in Toronto "so they may be operated as a public enterprise in the sole interest of the breeders of the province."

In a reference to liquor and beer restrictions imposed by the Federal government the speech said that it was proposed to have only one permit in future for the purchase of spirits, beer and wine. Separate permits now are needed for three.

The speech—which was based largely on plans to implement the 22-point program on which Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative party campaigned in last summer's Ontario election—told of plans to limit the cost of power in southern Ontario municipalities to a maximum of $39 a horsepower. "Grants-in-aid which will make this possible at the outset will in a very few years be unnecessary."

There was a brief reference to the Active Service Election Act which provided for proxy voting for members of the armed forces serving outside Ontario. The speech said only that the Act, criticized by Premier Drew during the election last year, would be amended and gave no details.

New Financing Proposed.

Reorganization of the department of education had brought new vigor to the direction of education but "the most difficult single educational problem requiring solution is the unsatisfactory method of financing the maintenance of the schools of the province.

"Intensive study has been given to this subject and the results of the inquiries which have been made will be reported to the legislature where the subject will be fully discussed".

Development of Vocational Training in schools, a program of adult education and appointment of a committee to plan for the education of new Canadians were predicted.

An Ontario forest resources commission will be appointed to supervise the development of the 100,000,000 acres of accessible crown forests under the control of the department of lands and forsts, the speech said, referring also the establishment of the kirkwood forest management unit near Thessalon in Northern Ontario and the setting aside of park areas in the Sault Ste. Marie and Lakehead areas.

Two commissions had been appointed to deal with mining problems, one to deal with all phases of the industry and to make recommendations that would stimulate development of existing mines and the search for new ones. The other was to report on the supply, availability and utilization of fuel for domestic and commercial purposes.

Limited to Maintenance.

Current expenditure on highways during the year would be limited largely to maintenance. Capital expenditure would be confined to surfacing of roads serving military camps airports and war industries as well as completion of some bridges on which work already had been started.

Municipalities which had been setting up reserve funds from unspent appropriations for construction and maintenance were commended. Municipal legislation forecast included an amendment to the Municipal Act to permit municipalities to levy an additional business assessment to compensate for the tax on incomes and corporations suspended by Dominion-Provincial agreement. A bill also would be introduced to permit municipal authorities to accept a fixed sum in lieu of taxation on properties owned by Wartime Housing, Ltd.

A full-time public health program including adequate school health service was "long overdue" and "it is therefore planned to make it possible for local municipalities to implement Section 35 of the Public Health Act which already provides for such service.

Committees Set Up.

"The provision of adequate hospital care for all our citizens will require some time to fulfill but certain immediate steps are being taken to bring this about. Committees have been set up by the government and by the hospitals to study the problem with a view to inaugurating a new policy".

The speech said that 14,172 persons now occupy accommodation in the province's 15 mental hospitals designed for 11,000 persons. As a first step toward meeting this problem an additional 300 beds would be made available at the Orillia hospital. In addition a division of psychiatric research had been organized with a well-known British research physician in charge and it was proposed to extend mental health clinics to serve all parts of the province as soon as 57 physicians now on loan for special work in the armed forces were available.

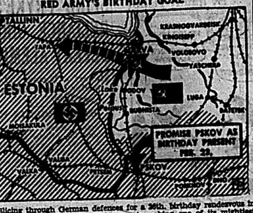
3 Hastings Holsteins Mentioned in Honor List

Three Hastings County Holsteins are prominently mentioned in the annual honor list just issued by the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada, in which recognition is given to the outstanding producers of the past year. Two are owned by James L. Broad, Belleville, and one by the estate of Donald Longwell, Foxboro. In the mature class of the 305-day division, Princses Sylvia Segis Inka, a member of Mr. Broad's herd, stood third for both milk and butterfat with her production of 780 lbs. butterfat from 20,759 lbs. milk. Her stablemate, Ethel Cornucopia Posch, stood second for milk in the junior two-year-old class of the yearly division with 18,050 lbs. milk containing 542 lbs. butterfat. The Longwell heifer, Molly Woodcrest Posch, was second for milk in the senior two-year-old class of the 305-day division with 15,419 lbs. milk and 501 lbs. butterfat. All three records were made on twice-a-day milking.

To gain a place on the Honor List an animal must have completed a record of performance test during 1943 that rated among the top five made in any part of the Dominion in its class for either milk or butterfat.

RED ARMY'S BIRTHDAY GOAL



Slicing through German defences for a 26th. birthday rendesvous in the vital city of Pskov, the Red Army is making one of its mightiest efforts to keep up a pace of five miles or more advance per day. On February 23 the Red Army will be 26 years old and Pskov is the outstanding prize of the northern battlefront, since it is the door into southern Etonia. With other forces in a Narva to Tapa drive, as shown on the map, German forces are thus being trapped in Estonia.

Trenton High School Holds Commencement Exercises

Trenton — (Special) — Bringing greetings from the Prime Minister of the Dominion, and the Minister of Education, Col. George Drew, Mr. C. W. Robb, Inspector of High Schools for Ontario opened his address at the Commencement exercises at the Trenton High School on Friday evening. Using the famous challenge of Churchill for "Blood, Sweat and Tears" he pointed to the spirit of the British people in their darkest hours and said that as they on that small Isle had risen to their emergency so Canadian youth of today were likewise rising to meet all emergencies. "Put a real challenge to the boys and girls," he said, "and undoubtedly they'll meet it." He praised the young men, who not so long ago attending schools might have appeared frivolous to some extent, but today are the very lads who are saving our country from the destruction of the common enemy. "Set a high objective in home, church and school," he said, "and it will be reached."

Mr. Robb was introduced by Rev. J. D. Martin and Mr J. F. Cox expressed the vote of thanks.

Miss Alice Wilkins, Valedictorian.

Valedictorian for the Commencement exercises was Miss Alice Wilkins, honor graduate of 1943, who also brought distinction to the school by winning four scholarships during the term. Miss Wilkins is taking a course in Nursing Science at Queen's University.

With the same marked ability which won for her honors at the Trenton High School Miss Wilkins outlined the period of five years' training there as being but a stepping stone to higher things, and told of the willingness of teachers at all times to assist pupils to find their goal in life. She spoke with considerable feeling of the many fine lads who had gone out from the school to serve their country in all parts of the land and in all branches of the service, Navy, Army, Airforce, Fleet Air Arm, Merchant Navy and even the United States Army Air Corps.

In closing she wished the school every success in its continued endeavour to give the boys and girls of the town and district the basis of the education needed to round them into citizens worthy of their country.

In the absence of the chairman of the Board, Mr. W. A. Reid, through illness, Mr. O. W. Newton acted as chairman for the evening and in speaking of the Commencement exercises said it was only through the full co-operation of students, teachers, parents and the Board that such an evening was made possible.

Principal's Report.

Principal W. G. Spencer welcomed all who had come out in the interests of the students, thanking particularly the parents, the staff and the Board for their kind co-operation.

In giving a resume of the activities of the school apart from their regular study periods, he said he regretted extremely the lack of athletics in the school due entirely to the abnormal conditions. Not only had many of the students left to give their services to their country but during the past three years all his male assistants had joined the ranks in some field of service. Literary work too, was slow he said, but the overseas edition of the T.H.S. Spotlight was being sent out regularly to all those in the service both inside and outside Canada.

Speaking of the social side of the year's activities, a Red Cross tea netting $100 was an outstanding event as well as two large dances and many smaller Friday night frolics. The orchestra, he said, with its 17 or 18 members was outstanding despite the fact that their leader, during the summer of 1942, had joined the Artillery. At that time the orchestra seemed doomed but one of its members, Don Mawsom, came to the rescue as leader and scored a huge success. A concert put on in the Trent Theatre last spring by all T.H.S. talent was said to be one of the finest ever held in that theatre.

Speaking of defense training, Mr. Spencer said every boy from Grade 9 to Grade 13 was given training in drill and on one occasion last spring Group Captain McBurnie, taking the salute at inspection, was so impressed that he had them taken to the air station where they put on a ceremony. On that occasion Wing Commander Cairns took the salute.

Much Money Raised.

$2,049.75 worth of War Savings Stamps were sold by the school during the year as well as donations made to Free French $12, Chinese Relief $261, Red Cross $123.85, Navy League $362.85, Minesweepers $10, British War Victims' Fund $13, Aid to Russia $100, Greek Relief $10.42—total of $892.56.

60,000 cigarettes at a value of $200 were sent overseas.

In speaking of the Honor Roll for those enlisted Mr. Spencer said already 405 names had been placed with many more being added almost every day. He spoke of the honor brought to the school by former students overseas who had won decorations: Brig. H. D. Graham, D.S.O. and Bar, E.D.; Lt.-Col. Bruce Sutcliffe, D.S.O., E.D.; Squadron Leader Charles Moran, D.F.C. and Bar; PO. Frank LaFrance, D.F.C., and others.

The attendance at the school was quoted as being an average of 246 or 96%, which the Principal considered excellent in view of the many attractive offers to youths these days for positions in stores, factories, etc., at high rates of pay. He commended the parents for seeing to it that their children secured education above all else and were not lured away by the money which might be earned on the spot.

Those Who Took Part.

Those taking part in the program for the Commencement included: the orchestra; Robert Blakely, euphonium solo; L.A.W. Dorothy Kinton, vocal solos, Frank Stojan, violin solo; Miss Alice Wilkins, Valedictory; A. W. 2. Doreen Dickinson, A.T.C.M., piano solos, and Shirley Jones and Brennan Maxwell, vocal solos.

Members of the orchestra included W. H. Wildman, A. Mus. A.D.C.M., leader, Phyllis Huffman, V. Beattie, D. Carswell, F. Stojan, G. Brown, G. Vanner, Wm. Weaver, R. Campbell, P. Gitelman, J. Blaney, R. DeMille, G. Diller, D. Hyde, J. Keane, A. Whaley, R. Blakely, H. Carswell and D. Kennedy.

She won the Leonard Foundation Scholarship (General Proficiency) of $200, the John Thorburn Scholarship in Science of Nursing $80, the Provincial University Scholarship, Hastings County, $400, and qualified for the Knight Scholarship in Biology valued at $675. However, Miss Wilkins' course in the Science of Nursing did not entitle her to accept the latter scholarship.

FO. David Griffin of Public Relations, Passenger, is Killed in Crash

AREA NOT DEFINED

Ottawa, Feb. 22 (CP) — The five crew members of a Liberator bomber down on the east coast are alive but FO. David Griffin, former Toronto newspaperman, was killed in the crash of the big aircraft, it was learned here today.

Griffin was a member of RCAF public relations branch.

Eastern Air Command at Halifax announced that the only passenger aboard the plane was killed, and it was learned here later than Griffin was the passenger.

A Halifax dispatch earlier said a U.S. aircraft brought the quest to an end. "The aircraft was found down on land but the location was not revealed," it stated.

The plane was first missed Friday when its radio went silent when in flight.

Meanwhile other aircraft continued their search for a two-engined aircraft which has been missing from the R.A.F. station at Debert, N.S., since Sunday night.

Next-of-kin of those aboard the aircraft have been notified, and names will be issued shortly.

Plastic Eyes May Replace Glass Eyes

Chicago, Feb. 22—(AP)— Plastic eyes, made from a material used for false teeth, may replace glass eyes after the war, Brig. Frank M. Lott. Chief of Dental Services for the Canadian Army, Navy and Air Force, said yesterday.

When shortages in glass eyes developed for treatment of casualties in the Canadian, British and Russian armies, the Canadian Dental Corps devised artificial eyes of acrilic plastic (methyl-methacrylate) a plastic also used in dentures, Lott said in an interview at the annual meeting of the Chicago Dental Society.

Before it is hardened by boiling, Lott said the plastic is soft and can be moulded to fit the individual eye socket. It can be given lifelike coloring, and the eyes cost little to make.

The plastic also is being used to make artificial ears and noses for wounded men, Lott said.

2 Sleepy Germans Are Captured In Slit-Trench

By DOUG AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in Italy, Feb. 22 (CP Cable)—Two German infantrymen who liked warmth in their slit-trench too much found themselves prisoners of the Canadians.

A 12-man patrol from a Maritime battalion probing enemy defences northeast of Tollo captured the Germans Sunday night. They were the first prisoners taken on that section of the Canadian corps front and their capture earned members of the patrol a week's leave at the British 8th Army rest centres in southern Italy.

At the same time as the sleepy, bedraggled Germans were being rooted out of their hole, other German infantrymen attacked a French-speaking battalion southwest of the Maritimers. The Germans were driven back, and at least one was killed.

Lieut. Russel Ganong of St. Stephen, N.B., whose father is a Major-General in Canada led the patrol which captured the two Germans. The Nazis popped their heads out of a trench three feet in front of Ganong. Sgt. Ron Sprague of Sussex, N.B., and Cpl. Ron Smelt of Peterborough, Ont., and were promptly taken in tow.

"We rushed them back as quickly as possible and although they were frightened at first they were quite happy by the time they got to company headquarters," Ganong said.

The Germans who came to this front only recently to replace paratroops were poorly dressed with rags for puttees and socks for gloves.

Apart from these counters the corps front has been quiet.

Creamery Butter Production Down, Cheese Is Higher

Toronto, Feb. 22—(CP)—Production of creamery butter in Ontario totalled 3,486,800 pounds in January, a reduction of 785,600 pounds from the production in the corresponding period of 1943, it was shown today in the monthly dairy report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

However production of factory cheese showed an increase, with 1,529,800 pounds compared with 1,500,600 a year ago.

Stocks of creamery butter held in dairies in the province totalled 2,912,300 Feb. 1, compared with 3,715,200 Jan. 1 and 1,882,000 Feb. 1, 1943. Warehouses in Toronto had butter holdings of 3,523,000 pounds Feb. 1, 4,851,000 Jan. 1 and 849,300 Feb. 1, 1943.

Commercial dairies sold 33,152,100 quarts of fluid milk with a sales value of $3,445,000—exclusive of the federal government's two-cents-a-quart subsidy—in January compared with 28,845,000 quarts with a sales value of $3,410,100 in December.

Highlights of Prime Minister Churchill's War Report

London, Feb. 22 — (CP) — Highlights of Prime Minister Churchill's war report:—

I have never taken the view that the end of the war in Europe is at hand or that Hitler is about to collapse and I have certainly given no guarantee or even held out any expectation that the year 1944 will see the end of the European war, nor have I given any guarantee the other way.

---

My information...goes to show that Hitler and his police are still in full control and that the Nazi party and the generals have decided to hang together.

---

The Anglo-American air attack on Germany must be regarded as our chief offensive effort at the present time...this spring and summer will see a vast increase in the force of the attack...long-range bombing from Italy will also penetrate the southern part of Germany.

---

There is no doubt that the Germans are preparing on the French shore new means of attack on this country, either by pilotless aircraft or possibly rockets or both...we are striking at all evidence of these preparations.

---

Hitler has apparently resolved to defend Rome with the same obstinacy which he showed at Stalingrad, in Tunisia and recently in the Dnieper Bend. .. his decision there in Italy to make a large secondary front is not unwelcome to the Allies. We must fight the Germans somewhere in this war unless we are to stand still and watch the Russians.

British and American armies at the outset of the struggle (invasion from Britain) will be approximately equal, but if its duration is prolonged the continuous inflow of Americans, built up at an enormous rate, will naturally give them superiority in numbers.

In Italy we are working for the present with the government of the King and Badoglio. In Yugoslavia we give aid to Tito. In Greece ... we are doing our utmost to bring about a reconciliation ... between the opposing factions.

---

None of the ground made good at Moscow and Teheran has been lost. The three great Allies are absolutely united in their action against the common foe...they believe that a wide field of friendly co-operation lies before them.

---

The fate of the Polish nation holds a prime place in the thoughts and policies of His Majesty's government and the British parliament ... I cannot feel that the Russian demand for reassurances about her western frontiers goes beyond the limits of what is reasonable and just.

---

It is ... election year in the United States ... I think we should not allow ourselves to be unduly concerned by anything that may be said or written there in the course of the great constitutional process which is taking place.

CHURCHILL TELLS OF PART PLAYED BY ROYAL NAVY

Accomplishments of R.A.F. and Army During the Struggle

London, Feb. 22 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill in his war review in the House of Commons today outlined the part played by Britain's naval forces in recent months and referred briefly to the achievements of her air and land forces.

The Prime Minister said he did not wish to make "any boastful statement" about Britain's role. But "the interests of the alliance (of the United Nations) as a whole may be prejudiced if its other members are left in ignorance of the British share in the great events which are unfolding."

The Dominions also had a right to know Britain is playing its part.

R.N. and R.A.F. Records in U-Boat Sinkings.

Mr. Churchill disclosed these accomplishments in the naval sphere since Jan. 1, 1943:—

Ships of the Royal Navy and aircraft of the R.A.F. have sunk more than half the U-boats "of which we have certain proof in the shape of living prisoners;"

They have destroyed 40 per cent of the "very large number" of other U-boats "of which either corpses or fragments provide definite evidence of destruction;

Enemy warships sunk "by British action" total 19, not including submarines; a large number of E-boats, escort vessels, minesweepers and other auxiliaries also have been sunk;

British action has been "predominantly responsible" for sinking 316 merchant ships aggregating 835,000 tons.

Since Jan. 1, 1943, 7,677 officers and men of the Royal Navy and about 4,300 Merchant Navy officers and men have lost their lives in British ships.

41,000 of R.N. Personnel Killed.

Since the war began, said Mr. Churchill, the proportion of merchant seamen from the United Kingdom lost at sea was about one-fifth of the average number engaged in this service.

Total personnel of the Royal Navy lost since the war began was just over 30 per cent of its pre-war strength; 441,000 killed out of 133,000, the total strength at the outbreak of war.

Since Jan. 1, 1943, Royal Navy warships have bombarded the enemy coast 716 times.

In that period 95 ships have been lost in action or disabled for more than a year.

Dealing with air warfare, Mr. Churchill said "the honor of bombing Berlin has fallen almost entirely to us. Up to the present we have delivered the main attack upon Germany."

R.A.F. Losses From British Isles.

Losses among men from the British Isles in the R.A.F. totalled 38,300 pilots and air crews killed and 10,400 missing and more than 10,000 aircraft.

Since the war began he said they have made nearly 900,000 sorties in the North European theatre.

British Army.

Mr. Churchill did not give any details or figures on accomplishments or losses of the British army.

He said: "the British army was little more than a police force in 1939, yet they have fought in every part of the world—in Norway, France, Holland, Belgium, Egypt, Eritrea, Abyssinia, Somaliland, Madagascar, Syria, North Africa, Persia, Sicily, Italy, Greece, Crete, Burma, Malaya, Hong Kong."

History will record how much the contribution of our soldiers has been beyond all proportion to the available manpower of these islands" he told the House.

Bombs Nearly Wreck Maj. Armstrong's New London Flat

London, Feb. 22 (CP Cable) — Maj. James S. P. Armstrong, Ontario's newly-appointed agent-general in London, had scarcely settled down in a new London flat before bombs nearly wrecked the building Friday night.

Doors and windows in the building containing the flat were blown out and incendiary bombs started a fire which took nearly two days to extinguish. Sunday night a few more bombs shook the building.

Maj. Armstrong, who was in his flat during both raids was not hurt although he said it was a close call.

The Agent-General is still living in his battered flat "which is well air-conditioned now."

In His First Speech M.P. Calls Commons 'Greatest Hot-Air Joint'

Ottawa, Feb. 22—(CP)— Robert McGregor (PC-York East) made his first speech of years in the Commons last night, and told why he had been silent.

He said:-

It is not very often I take up the time of the House for the simple reason that I feel this is the greatest hot-air joint I have seen for many years."

His speech was short. He was soon called to order by the speaker for speaking to a main motion when an amendment was before the chair.

Floor Polish Aids R.A.F. to 'Slip Up On' Nazi 'Peeping Toms'

London, Feb. 22 (CP)— Floor polish is enabling an R.A.F. Spitfire squadron in Southeast Italy to catch and destroy German "peeping toms", otherwise known as reconnaissance planes.

To obtain that "little extra" in miles an hour needed to overtake the speedy Germans, the Air Ministry said the squadron had rubbed ordinary floor polish on the Spitfire's surfaces, and it works.

BRITISH STEP IS FORCED BY MANPOWER SHORTAGE

London, Feb. 22. (CP)—A manpower shortage is forcing Britain to abolish ardft deferments in certain industries for men born since 1904, the Ministry of Labor announced yesterday.

Munitions and aircraft body building are among the works in which these men no longer will be exempt.

St. Michael's Triple Champion Rugby Teams Feted by K. of C., Presented With Windbreakers

Triple champion rugby football squads from St. Michael's Academy were honored and felicitations extended them for glory gained on the gridiron fields of Central Ontario at a banquet tendered them by the Knights of Columbus in their Council Chambers Monday evening during which time each member of the three champion interscholastic squads received a green and white trimmed windbreaker from the members and officers of the local council of the K. of C. No. 1006.

The occasion was one of rarity, as Coach Jack Doran presented before some 200 guests no less than three interscholastic championship football squads for the season of 1943, as the "Fighting Irish" from St. Michael's Academy captured all district honors last fall. They took the junior and senior six-man interscholastic football championships of the Bay of Quinte district in the C.O.S.S.A. and subsequently made more and distinguished gridiron history when they won the Senior Interscholastic 12-man football championship for the entire C.O.S.S.A. district and as Coach Doran remarked last night: "No school has ever questioned our right to the championship or challenged us."

A Great Night

It was a great night for the youthful gridders on all three of St. Mikes championship squads as the local council of the Knights of Columbus sponsored a testimonial banquet to honor a group of worthy future citizens. Many words of praise were heard in their favor by distinguished officials of the Knights of Columbus, with Rt. Rev. Mgr. J. F. Nicholson being introduced as the chairman of the evening by Lecturer Thos. Mascaro.

In paying tribute to the St. Michael's football squads, Mgr. Nicholson assured the visitors that he was proud of their sports achievements. "They have enshrined name and fame for us and I wish to congratulate their coach and leader, Mr. Jack Doran," stated Mgr. Nicholson as he also welcomed representatives from Albert College and the Belleville Collegiate.

Sports Essential

"These games are essential in the building of the young minds and bodies. They create fairness in sportsmanship that is needed so much in later life and I can say here that the glorious achievements of our Canadian boys overseas were founded on the sports fields of Canada," assured Mgr. Nicholson, as he added his personal congratulations to the team champions.

The presentation of windbreakers was made to each individual member of the three champion St. Mikes teams by George O'Brien, Grand Knight of the local council, who reminded those present that already one member of the team, Jerry Forster, was absent last night as he had joined the Canadian Navy. "The Knights of Columbus make these presentations for the excellent conduct and spirit of sportsmanship exemplified by you boys and may you wear these jackets with pride," concluded Mr. O'Brien as he requested the team to sing their battle song, "The Fighting Irish." Dick Fitzpatrick, captain of the senior squad, responded in a fitting manner, to give credit to Mr. Doran, their coach.

Coach Responds

Coach Jack Doran, who has directed sports at St. Michael's Academy for several years with success, reviewed the accomplishments of his three grid teams in 1943. "The boys always gave me fine co-operation and their success was due to the principal of playing as a unit and a fine school spirit," explained Mr. Doran.

Charles Dolan spoke briefly with his perennial wit and humor to the delight of the honored guests, but also assured them they would find the same problems in later life as in sports and "You will have to fight back if you hope to win the greater battle."

Others speakers included A. B. Collins, Past State Deputy officer of the K. of C., who reminded the boys wisely: "In life we find those who are born great; those who have greatness thrust upon them and those who have achieved greatness. Right now you boys are in the last group, who achieved greatness on the sports field. May it be a cornerstone to your future."

Flt. Lt. Padre Bigger, a graduate of Notre Dame College during the greatness of Knute Rockne's famed Irish football squads and who is now stationed at the Trenton Air Station, was an invited guest and related many anecdotes pertaining to the immortal Rockne, all of which were greatly appreciated by the youthful football players gathered about the banquet table. "Life is a school of hard knocks and when you learn to face the small ones on the field of sport, it is only a start in a great game where you must learn to keep fighting."

Frank Domenico thanked the ladies of the Catholic Women's League for the preparation of the splendid banquet, while Mrs. Wilson, president of the C.W.L., assured Mgr. Nicholson and the guests that the mothers were just as proud of their champions as were the men. Father A. L. O'Donnell, a staunch supporter of the St. Mikes rugby team, also added his congratulations, as did Geo. A. Lee, District Deputy of the K. of C.

Harold Barrett and Terry Scanlan led the community singing, while the music for the evening was provided by Bill Warham's Bon Ton Orchestra. Jack Marchem rendered a solo, Frank High gave two humorous readings and Jim Cowan, a solo by request. An ice cream eating contest among six of the football players, staged by Frank Domenico added mirth and laughter.

Mr. Pepper, sports director at Albert College, tendered the congratulations of a rival school in sport, while Homer Townsend, of the Belleville Collegiate, was unable to attend due to illness.

TRENTON FLIERS RETAIN SPOT AT TOP OF LEAGUE

Defeat Mountain View Bombers 11-6 in Service Loop Game at Arena

ALWAYS AHEAD

Packing a trifle too much punch in its forward lines for a team which appeared to be slightly off color defensively, Padre Maika's Trenton Fliers hung up a rather decisive 11-6 victory over the Mountain View "Bombers" at the Hume Arena Monday evening to retain their spot at the top of the district service league. The winners led all the way with period scores being 3-0, 6-2 and 11-6.

Scheduled as a doubleheader with all four teams in the district Service league to be in action, the night's entertainment turned out to be only a single encounter between the above two teams as the "Mohawks" from Deseronto failed to put in their appearance for the other half of the twin bill against "Sixardee".

Trenton Line Flying

Trenton's packed front line of Wilson at centre with McAtee and Raymond on the wings was flying high all evening and counted for approximately one half of the team's counters. Voss also made his weight felt accounting for four Trenton goals. For the losers Aube, Duquette, McReavey and Bauer stood out on the forward lines but the "Bombers' " weakness appeared to be in their defence, which permitted the Trenton boys to sail in practically unmolested on Reading in goal. At that, some of the Trenton goals were flukey although the majority were the result of cleverly executed combination plays or breakaways when the "Bombers" were playing everybody up in the last period to get close.

First Period Best

The first period undoubtedly saw the best hockey with forwards of both teams really flying in an effort to gain the advantage. Just before the halfway mark, Trenton went into the lead with their first line clicking. Wilson soloed from the faceoff to add another, and Ellis and Voss combined to make it three before the period ended. Mountain View boys were sailing in around the Trenton net but their shooting was off and they did everything but score.

Mountain View opened the second canto with a rush and twice caught the Trenton forwards back but could not seem to put the puck in the net. Duquette took a passout from behind the net to get the first "Bomber" goal at the four minute mark and added another on a Bauer-McReavey combination a minute or so later, when Tessier was sent off for tripping. Trenton got three back however when they were again at full strength with Voss, Wilson and Raymond clicking.

In the third period Trenton started out with a rush and added three quick ones before the "Bombers" made a comeback with a trio of counters. Mountain View sandwiched their final counter of the night in between two solo efforts by Voss and his linemates when the opposition was caught up the ice.

LINEUPS

HAWKS TAKE ON LOWLY RANGERS

By The Canadian Press

Tonight's only National Hockey League game sees the Chicago Black Hawks taking on the lowly Rangers at New York, and if the result is as expected, the Hawks will be sole possessors of the fourth and last play-off spot in the league standings.

At the moment the Hawks and Boston Bruins are still tied for that vital last play-off berth. A victory for Hawks tonight would boost them within four points of the 3rd-place Toronto Maple Leafs.

After their scoreless tie with the Maple Leafs at Chicago Sunday, the Hawks threaten to pour it on against the Rangers tonight. That game at Chicago was not only without goals; it was without penalties, and that sort of thing can't last.

Apart from the duel for fourth place the league standings should be largely unchanged after the midweek battling. Thursday's card has Toronto playing at Canadiens and Detroit at Rangers. Detroit in second place is three points ahead of Toronto.

Toronto, Feb. 22 — (CP)—Basketball is not a major sports spectacle in Canada although it qualifies in United States. Authorities give several reasons, including lack of suitable playing space, poor coaching and indifferent promotion.

Undoubtedly hockey's popularity is an important reason for basketball's failure to click. The seasons coincide and it is significant that basketball's boom on the Pacific coast in the last 15 years followed withdrawal of hockey as an important sport there. The same holds true in some parts of the Maritimes.

With good coaching, promotion and playing conditions, however, both basketball and hockey can thrive in the same city. An example was Edmonton in the era of the famous Commercial Grads, world women's champions. Immense crowds watched Grads games. Young players developed. Hockey did well, too.

PO. Frank Amsden of Winnipeg, R.C.A.F. sports officer at Malton, Ont., thinks basketball will boom after the war because it is played so generally at air stations.

Ab Rennick of the Toronto and District Basketball Association, says minor teams have not received proper encouragement. He believes missionary work such as exhibition tours by crack U. S. teams is desirable. Appropriate gymnasia were needed but, with encouragement, the game could rival hockey as in the States where basketball draws crowds of 15,000 and more.

Angelo Pastore, former University of Syracuse player, now at Merritton, Ont., says basketball became popular in the States through high schools playing night games and catering to the public as well as the student body. Graduates played for colleges or went into industrial leagues. Stunts were added to game programs to popularize the sport.

Pastore says the Canadian game could be improved. Canadian players were too anxious to make floor-long rushes and crowd under the basket instead of using pattern plays, waiting for the opening "which always comes."

Pastore is right to some extent, of course, but in some parts of Canada, particularly on the Pacific coast and in Windsor, Ont., formation play is in general use and the old helter-skelter brand has disappeared. This is largely due to proximity of United States cities and games with United States teams.

Influx of United States servicemen has spurred the men's game in Edmonton where it is booming now as never before.

New York Policeman Hits Headlines As Weight Tosser

By The Canadian Press

During his 39 years as a policeman in New York, Patrick Joseph McDonald, now 63 and a captain of Gotham's traffic squad, is still throwing some weight around—his own 310 pounds which is distributed throughout a six-foot-two frame. Beginning in the early part of the century, McDonald hit the headlines of sport pages because of his ability as a weight-tosser and because he tipped the scales at a mere 285. He recounted yesterday he established a junior athletic record of 37 feet and three-quarters of an inch for the shotput and the mark still stands.

Between 1911 and 1933, McDonald won the 56-pound throw 11 times in championship events. He copped the Olympic crown at Antwerp in 1920 with a distance of 36 feet 11½ inches and previously at the Stockholm Olympiad in 1912 he pitched the 16-pound shot 56 feet four inches to win that event. He had also won the U. S. National Senior 16-pound shotput six times between 1911 and 1912.

SPIKE PRYKE'S RELIANCE GIRLS DEFEAT ALEMITE

Stewart - Warner Lassies Suffer First Defeat in Cage Loop

BELL SARGENTS WIN

"Spike" Pryke's Reliance gals handed the Alemite lassies their first defeat of the City Girls' Basketball League season at the "Y" Monday night winning by the close margin of 30 to 28. In the second game of a dual bill the Bell Sargents chalked up their second win of the year by taking Deacons out 23 to 18 in two of the closest matches of the current season. The proceeds were given to the Corvette "Belleville" Fund.

The curtain-raiser was a ding-dong affair with Alemite leading by a scant 11 to 10 score at the halfway gong. However, paced by Arlie Gilbert and Kay Coathup, the Reliance quintette rallied in the second half to outscore the league leaders 20 to 17 and win 30 to 28 in the keenest girls' cage game of the season. It marked the first loss for Coach Frank Martin's "East-Enders" in six starts.

Arlie Gilbert was the chief marksman for Coach Pryke's winners getting 11 points, Kay Coathup and Miss Lazenby following in line. Betty Gilbert was the high scoring threat for the league leaders getting 11 points as Dot Mansfield notched nine.

Second Game Fast.

The second game was as equally well contested when the score stood at 11 to 10 at the midway mark in favor of Deacons. Strangely enough the two losing squads were leading by the identical same score at halftime only to drop by the wayside in the dying periods. However, Sargents, paced by Ruth Allison, bounced back to outscore Deacons 13 to 7 in the second stanza and win 23 to 18. The win advanced the Sargents into sole possession of third place and dropped the Deacons into the cellar slot.

Ruth Allison's 12 points and Miss Gariepy's eight were enough to win for Coach Harold Kokesh's "lockmakers". For Deacons, Joyce Woodhouse, "Pee Wee" Lepore and M. Miller each scored six points.

Marcel Cerdan Touted As Fair Middleweight

(By SID FEDER)
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Feb. 22. (AP)— From out of the recent Allied North African Boxing championships, the word drifted today that Tony Zale, Mr. Big of the world middleweights, may have quite a scramble on his hands from the French sailor-flailer, Marcel Cerdan, if the war ends in time.

The word on the thumping tar from France now 26 years old, gave him the unanimous vote as the boxer most likely to succeed, especially the way he tossed his blockbusters through the "senior welterweight" division. If you believe all you hear, he can pitch either hand like a 16-inch shell. He flattened two of three Americans he met in a round apiece.

Marcel is no newcomer to the business of denting ears. In fact, the International Boxing Union recognizes him as the middleweight champion of Europe—or it did when last heard from. The more reserved British Board of Boxing Control doesn't go quite that far, but concedes he's the head man in France.

Good Business

The temperance lecturer had warmed to his subject.

"Who has the most money to spend?" he thundered. "The publican. Who runs around in a fine car? The publican. Who has fine fur coats? The publican's wife. And who pays for all these? You, my friend you."

A short time later a man and a woman stopped the lecturer in the street and thanked him for his advice.

The lecturer looked gratified.

"I am indeed glad," he said, "that you have given up the evils of drink."

"Oh, no, we haven't done that," was the smiling reply. "We've bought a pub!"

(Hockey Chatter.)

Ralph Neal's "Combines" took Stan Jackson's Trenton kids over the well known jumps in Stirling last night winning 8-2, the homesters scoring six goals in the last period. Ray Goodchild was the big scoring threat for the Combines with three, Cousins getting one and three assists. The Trenton kids were blanked for the first two periods thanks to some sturdy backchecking on the part of the Combines. With a six goal advantage there's little doubt where the third game will be played, if Skipper Jackson's Trenton sextette can untrack themselves tomorrow night at home. A house of 970 saw the Combines humble Trenton in the same manner they started Belleville on the road to elimination the other week here.

At the Hume Arena Padre Maika's Trenton "Flyers" were much too good for Dan Cowley and his Quebec seniors now stationed at Mountain View. The "Flyers" cinched first place in the Air Force loop, thanks to the high-flying Raymond-Wilson-McAtee line who scored half of Trenton's goals last night when they won 11 to 6 over the Bombers. Maybe it's just as well the Mohawks didn't turn up. However, the real play-off battle will doubtless bring No. 6 Repair Depot in against the Flyers and these two squads already have two tie games.

(Alemite girls lose.)

Rallying strongly in the last half "Spike" Pryke's Reliance lassies handed Frank Martin's Alemite girls their first defeat in the girls' cage loop winning 30 to 28 last night. In the other game Bell-Sargents eked up a 23-18 decision over Deacons to move into third place. Even though Reliance had the satisfaction of winning, Alemite remain in first place, but their lead was considerably cut last night. The Gilbert girls, Arlie for Reliance and Betty for Alemite, were the chief scoring threats of the opposing squads gathering in 11 points each to make it a family-name contest. Kay Coathup, with six points, also helped Arlie roll up the Reliance score, while Dot Mansfield followed Betty for Alemite with nine points.

Strangely enough the two losing teams, Deacons and Alemite, were leading their respective games by an 11 to 10 count at halftime whistle only to fall by the wayside. Then in the second game Ruth Allison and M. Gariepy were the chief scoring threats for the winners, while J. Woodhouse, "Pee Wee" Lepore and M. Miller scored six points each for Deacons.

(Irish gridders honored.)

Jack Doran's triple champion interscholastic football squads were feted and honored by the local council of the Knights of Columbus last night when the "Fighting Irish" of St. Michael's Academy received windbreakers as tokens of appreciation from their admirers. Of course winning three Interscholastic rugby titles in one season isn't altogether an easy chore, but Jack Doran's charges ran off with the junior and senior Bay of Quinte six-man titles and then captured the senior 12-man football championship of the C.O.S.S.A. As Mr. Doran stated last night—"Maybe we only beat Stirling, but no other school challenged us nor disputed our claim to the senior C.O.S.S.A. crown." It was a gala affair and a credit to all and sundry who made the recognition of the prowess of the Irish possible. The kids enjoyed every minute of it and so did this corner as an invited guest.

(Congratulations, Jim.)

Interscholastic sport fans will doubtless recall James A. Rickaby, former sports director at the old O.S.D. at the outbreak of war. He was recently promoted to the rank of captain in the Medical Corps and assistant to the District Army Examiner of Military District Headquarters at Kingston. Captain Rickaby enlisted in October of 1941 after serving two terms as sports director at O.S.D. He was followed by Jim Hodgson, who is also in the army.

(Pete Reiser divorced.)

Mrs. Patricia Reiser was granted a divorce from Harold (Pete) Reiser, former Brooklyn outfielder, now in the Army, stationed at Fort Riley, Kan., by a circuit court judge in St. Louis. Reiser filed a general denial, but did not contest. A stipulation in which Reiser agreed to pay $50 a month alimony, plus $30 a month for support of their 11-month-old daughter, was approved.

The Los Angeles All-Stars defeated Fords at Windsor, Ont., seven years ago tonight to win a two-game series billed as the world's amateur basketball championship. The Californians—1936 Olympic titlists—followed their 4 to 31 victory over the Canadians in the first contest with a 28-19 verdict in the second game of the best-of-three series. It was two years ago next month Belleville fans saw their first Ontario provincial senior cage championship game here when the Trenton "Flyers" beat Windsor Alumni. The late FL. Brian Casey was one of the outstanding players with Buff Horton's Flyers that season.

LESSON NO. 309

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Learning to score is quite a chore. It strains your brains intensely. But you should learn what points you earn. It helps your game immensely.

Declarer is the player who tries to make the contract. Each trick in excess of six takun by declared is known as an odd trick.

Each odd trick pays in clubs or diamonds, 20 points; in hearts or spades, 30; in no-trump, 40 for the first and 30 for every odd trick after that.

When a pair wins 100 points for odd tricks bid and made, they get credit for making a game. When a pair has made a game, they are known as vulnerable.

In game-a-hand party bridge, credit is given for a game only if the 100 points were won in one deal. Such a game pays a bonus of 500 to a vulnerable pair; 300 when the pair is not vulnerable.

In rubber bridge, a pair gets credit for a game even if more than one deal is needed to accumulate the 100 points. But no bonus is paid for winning one game. Bonuses are paid for winning a rubber.

A rubber is won when one pair wins two games before opponents win two games. A bonus of 100 is paid a rubber winner if their side was vulnerable and opponents not; 500, if both sides were vulnerable.

Bonus points are also paid for bidding and making slams. Bonus for small slam is 750 when the pair is vulnerable; 500, when not. A grand slam bonus is 1,500 when vulnerable; 1,000 when not.

The making of a slam includes the making of a game. So, a slam bidder not only wins bonus points for slam. He also wins bonus for game. Besides these bonuses, he wins points for the odd tricks.

Count what may be made with this share of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A K 9 8 5
♥A 9 4
♦K Q 4
♣7 2
NORTH
♠Q 6 4 2
♥K 6 3
♦A 6
♣A Q 5 4

East and West have not won a game. North and south have. Then, south becomes declarer at a contract of six spades with these cards. He takes 12 tricks.

The total pay is 1,630 points. The six odd tricks at 30 each pay 180 points. Winning a rubber when vulnerable if opponents are not gives 700. A small slam when vulnerable pays 750.

The part of Achilles that was vulnerable was a heel. You may not think of a vulnerable bridge player in that way. But it's an idea.

AT THE BELLE — Alone at last, after a series of hectic adventures in M.G.M.'s "Whistling in Brooklyn," Red Skelton and Ann Rutherford get down to the serious business of loving. The picture has plenty of comedy moments and features, Jean Rogers, "Rags" Ragland and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE SEA WOLF"

The power and fury of the raging sea surged from Jack London's pen as he wrote his most famous novel "The Sea Wolf", and the new screen version of the story which opens tomorrow at the McCarthy Theatre, has translated that power and fury into the most dramatic and thrilling screen entertainment of the year.

One thought kept every hate-ridden man in the crew of 'The Ghost' alive — it was to see Wolf Larsen dead. A merciless tyrant, he ruled his shanghaied crews with methods that remind us of today's totalitarian dictators. Yet he is the possessor of a keen mind and an indomitable will. Through the genius of Edward G. Robinson's brilliant portrayal, Larsen comes to the screen a real-life character. Ida Lupino, who is fast proving herself one of the most accomplished dramatic stars in films today, manages to make the drab little castaway one of the most memorable feminine screen characters of the year. In the role of a rebellious crew member who dares to try for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness in defiance of Larsen, John Garfield does what is without doubt the finest acting of his career.

A ferryboat sinks in San Francisco harbor and two of the passengers — a frightened girl fleeing from jail and a sensitive young author — are picked up by Larsen's sailing vessel, "The Ghost". Prepared to thank the captain and be put ashore, they learn that, instead, they are virtual prisoners. The man, Van Weyden, is pressed into service as a cabin boy, and Leach, the regular cabin boy is told that he will henceforth be boat-puller. Leach protests and the Captain beats him up unmercifully. Ruth, the girl, becomes desperately ill, is treated indifferently by the drunken ship's doctor. During her illness, Leach takes pity on her, and the two become fast friends, then sweethearts. Van Weyden's job alongside "Cookie" is far from pleasant, for "Cookie" is a low, slimy coward who reports everything he sees and hears to Larsen. When he finds several sheets of manuscript that Van Weyden has written about Larsen's brutality, he takes them to the Captain. From this incident, Van Weyden learns a new side of Larsen's character. Far from being angry about what Van Weyden has written, he is pleased to be the subject of analysis. Van Weyden also learns Larsen's carefully guarded secret—that he is subject to periodic headaches which are followed by partial temporary blindness.

Mutineers on the ship make an unsuccessful attempt to murder Larsen, and after that life becomes even more unbearable for Van Weyden, Ruth and Leach. They escape from the ship on a lifeboat, and drift helplessly about the ocean. When their supplies are exhausted they sight a ship. It is "The Ghost" and it's sinking. Leach slips aboard, in a desperate attempt to get some water for Ruth. When he doesn't come back, Van Weyden and Ruth follow him aboard. Van Weyden goes to the captain's cabin, finds him having one of his attacks of semi-blindness. Van Weyden finds out that Leach has been locked up in the galley. Larsen draws a gun on Van Weyden as he starts to leave. Then with the boat sinking more and more rapidly, Van Weyden drives a bargain with him, the sort of bargain that is completely in keeping with Larsen's unusual character.

Fraught with drama, suspense and full-blooded action, The Sea Wolf is one sea story you'll never forget.

"Moonlight in Vermont"

Three of Universal's young contract players, Patsy O'Connor, Marilyn Day and Bobby Scheerer, are included in the cast of Gloria Jean's current musical film, "Moonlight in Vermont" which is the second feature attraction now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Also cast are the Jivin' Jacks and Jills, youthful dancing group; Russell Simpson, Pat Phelan and John Whitney.

AT THE BELLE

"WHISTLING IN BROOKLYN"

Romantic complications as well as a murder mystery further tangle the adventures of Red Skelton when he appears as Wally Benton, "The Fox," in M-G-M's "Whistling in Brooklyn", opening next at Belle Theatre. Ann Rutherford and Jean Rogers are the girls who make life complicated for Red when a beautiful reporter appears on the scene to cover Red's marriage to Ann and decides to annex Red herself.

The action of the film takes place in Brooklyn, as the title indicates, with "The Fox" tangling with the police in addition to a mob of gangsters. "Rags" Ragland is Red's friend and self-appointed press agent who innocently involves him in his dilemma by his meddling.

Three Varied Featurettes

Three entertaining and varied featurettes have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including Carey Wilson's amazing miniature "Brothers in Blood" revealing the story and importance of blood plasma for our fighters. The Canadian Belle Movietone News, and another ever-welcome Pete Smith specialty "Practical Joker" completes the program. The engagement ends on Wednesday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Women In Bondage"

One of the most amazing motion pictures of all those induced by the present war was revealed at the Capitol theatre last night with the first showing of the Monogram drama ,"Women in Bondage". It exposes conditions which have been little realized by the outside world, and gives a sordid picture of home life under the Hitler regime.

Gail Patrick and Nancy Kelly are co-starred in this startling film, and head a cast which is exceptional in size and the ability of its members. Miss Patrick is seen as a German woman who returns home during the war, after several years' absence, and is horrified at the degraded status which has been enforced on the women of her native land. Miss Kelly is a native girl who is arbitrarily prevented from marrying her soldier sweetheart, and who commits a cardinal sin when she cries out against the regime. The eventual punishment of both women furnishes the ultimate in brutality.

As indicated, the entire cast is excellent. Among the many who do fine work are Bill Henry, Tala Birell, Gertrude Michael, Alan Baxter, Rita Quigley, Felix Basch, Anne Nagel, Mary Forbes and H. B. Warner.

The story is strong fare, but reveals facts about the ruthless Nazi government which should undoubtedly be known by the outside world if only that we might realize the mental qualities of the leaders of our enemies. Pagan baptisms, mercy killings, sterilization, government-encouraged vice and the cruelties of the Gestapo are only a few of the subjects dealt with in the highly dramatic story.

"Here Comes Kelly"

"Here Comes Kelly", the added comedy which opened an engagement at the Capitol theatre last night, is hilarious fun, and just what the doctor ordered as an antidote for those troublesome times. The tempo of the story is maintained at a fast pace, and mirth-provoking situations follow one another in swift succession.

Not the least attractive feature of the picture is its excellent cast, with every player ideally suited to his role. Eddie Quillan is the flip, irresponsible young man about whom the story revolves, and Joan Woodbury is his sensible and often-perturbed sweetheart. "Slapsy Maxie" Rosenbloom is seen as a slow-witted gangster, and the fiery Armida as a cafe entertainer, while the supporting cast includes such talented entertainers as Sidney Miller, Ian Keith, Mary Gordon, Dick Elliott, Sugar Geise, Charles Jordan and Emmett Vogan.

The Canadian Universal News and the timely Canada Carries On subject "Target Berlin" complete the program. There will be a matinee Wednesday for these attractions.

TORONTO NAVY BEATS SAINTS

By The Canadian Press

The unpredictable Toronto Navy, No. 3 squad in the three-team senior series of the Ontario Hockey Association, last night staged a garrison finish on home ice to vanquish St. Catharines Saints 4-3 in overtime. Dropping their second fixture in a row, the visitors still cling to a three-point margin for leadership over Hamilton in the standing of the league in which there are only two more scheduled games, St. Catharines at Hamilton Friday night and Hamilton at Navy next Monday.

The Saints scored first against the Tars, with Mundrick doing the trick, but Barlow evened before the close of the first period. St. Catharines came back in the second to lead 3-1 but the third stanza saw Barlow and Benson notching one apiece to secure another deadlock. Benson registered the payoff counter in 8.07 of the overtime session.

The marksmen for St. Catharines were Mundrick, McAtee and Goble. Barlow and Benson upheld the scoring honors for the Bluejackets with goals each.

By winning the two remaining tilts, Hamilton Majors can finish the schedule in top spot with a 1-point advantage and thus be in a position to choose favorable playoff arrangements.

Former Sports Director at O.S.D. Now a Captain

Kingston, Feb. 22—Lieut. James A. Rickaby, former sports director at the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville, Ont., and assistant to the District Army Examiner of Military District No. 3, has been promoted to the rank of captain.

Captain Ricaby, following the completion of an officers' training course at Three Rivers', Que., was posted to M.D. 3 headquarters with the Directorate of Personnel Selection.

Educated at Riverdale Collegiate, Toronto, Capt. Rickaby was senior athletic champion in 1935. He was valedictorian at the Toronto Normal School upon graduation in 1939. He enlisted in October 1941, and received his basic training at Peterborough, where he was posted for 13 months with the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps at the military hospital.

His wife, the former Margaret Turnbull, is now residing at 546 Albert Street, Kingston, Ontario.

MAKES OLD CLOTHES DO

London, Feb. 22. (CP)—Princess Elizabeth, who receives no more clothing coupons than any other Englishwoman, is making one all-purpose outfit serve all winter. She has worn the same dress, coat, hat, shoes and gloves and has carried the same handbag every time she has been photographed since Dec. twenty-second.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma said, The Gils had quite a stormy meeting today, William, in fact we almost came to the point of disbanding the organization for good and all.

Yee gods you've hardly had your uniforms 3 weeks, pop said, and ma said, Yes, that's one of the things that finely induced us to agree on a compromize. It was all a question of stripes and stars. You know I told you about our sistem of each Gil carrying an autograph book for the servicemen to sign when we give them a lift, and a stripe is awarded for every hundred autographs, and a star for every five hundred, ma said.

That seems like a fair enough rate of pay, pop said, and ma said, There wasn't any question about it until today's meeting. It seems that 3 of the members happened to pick up officers, and they got together in secret and at the meeting today Kitty Summers spoke up in seeming innocence and proposed that an officer's signature should count anywhere from 5 to 20 points depending on his rank, and the motion was immediately seconded by Hanna Jeffries and Mary Deeter, the other 2 plotters. Well my dear, the 3 remaining members, including myself, objected strenuously. I pointed out that the very name of the Gils stands for Give Lifts to Servicemen and not service officers, and Maud Hews insisted that officers can afford taxicabs so they shouldn't really count even one point, and one word led to another toill finely the 3 plotters threatened to resign in a body, ma said.

Did you say it all had a happy ending? pop said, and ma said, Well yes. By the terms of the compromise a Gil is entitled to wear a carnation on her lapel for one day if she picks up any officer up to the rank of captain. A major or a kernel entitles us to wear a rose for a day, and in the unlikely case of picking up a general we can wear a gardenia for 2 whole days. So the organization is still intact, ma said.

And she started to do the bridge problem and pop got in back of the sporting page.

AT THE CAPITOL — One of the most brutal Nazi practices that of appointing "deputy husbands" for childless wives is exposed in "Women in Bondage" new at the Capitol Theatre. Gail Patrick and Alan Baxter enact the sequence. On the same program the comedy riot "Here Comes Kelly."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Some Skin Disease Common in Elderly People

As men and women grow old there sometimes appear various skin conditions which physicians consider due to changes in the glands as these glands waste away or stop their activity in the body. Two of these skin ailments are what are known as senile (old) warts, and senile old) keratoses—a harsh dry condition of the skin.

In The Practitioner (London) Dr. J. E. M. Wigley states the importance of distinguishing between senile warts and senile keratoses, as the warts do not change into cancers whereas the keratoses may be forerunners of cancer.

The senile keratoses usually occur on the exposed parts of the body as brownish spots with a dry, rough surface which later thickens and becomes scaly. If the scales are lifted a bleeding surface or ulceration remains, and cancer often develops.

In the treatment of senile keratoses, Dr. Wigley states irritating preparations should not be used as they may cause the spot to turn to cancer. Freezing with the carbon dioxide pencil is the method of choice unless the skin cancer (epithelioma) is already present. The carbon dioxide pencil should be applied with firm pressure for at least one minute. If the spot has already changed to cancer, radium is advisable.

On the other hand the senile warts are more apt to occur on the covered portions of the body, especially on the shoulders, between the shoulder blades, over the breast bone and on the sides of the abdomen. They are seldom found on the face and hands and are more common on a greasy skin and not a dry skin as with senile keratoses. The senile warts usually appear in younger men and women than do the senile keratoses. The wart is round or oval and "stands out" on the surface of the skin. It is soft (not hard like keratoses) with a horny or greasy scale. The color is yellowish gray, brown or even jet black. There are no symptoms, they grow slowly and do not disappear if left untreated. As these senile warts are harmless, no treatment is necessary. When patient desires treatment the carbon dioxide snow is applied for 40 to 60 seconds.

I am describing these two ailments fully not with the idea of readers supplying self treatment, but that patients should not neglect to consult their physician about either of these conditions especially as the keratoses so often develop into cancer.

CHAPTER 17

"Quite easily — but not by psychoanalysis. I went to the man in the case and suggested that he would be doing a good deed by giving me a small sample of his blood. He did so quite willingly. I typed it and compared it with the child's. It was type three. The child's was type one. Therefore the man could not be the father. The husband's, also, by the way, is type one, which, while it doesn't prove that he is the father, shows that he might be. Thus the child's resemblance to the other man was purely imaginary. I only wish all my cases were as simple as that," Metcalf added, with a smile.

Tony was staring at him nonplused. "And you told her about this?"

"Certainly. I sent the reports to her as soon as I received them."

"But if she knew it wasn't true," said the columnist, "McKibben couldn't have used the dictograph record to blackmail her."

"Of course he couldn't," Metcalf agreed. "I'm afraid your imagination has been running away with you."

"I'll be going then," said Tony, and got to his feet. "You have given me quite a lot to think about. If any more questions occur to me, I hope I may stop in again."

"Whenever you like," invited Metcalf, his hand on the knob of the door into the outer office. I am going away tomorrow for the weekend, but any time after Monday I'll be glad to see you. Perhaps I can convince you that a psychiatrist isn't merely a charlatan. I could see that that was what was in your mind when you came in."

"I've seen a light since then," conceded Tony.

"You are not convinced yet," he said, "but you are of two minds. You don't know what to believe. I'm going to do a very foolish thing —I'm going to give you some advice for nothing. The one question you want answered, as I understand it, is who killed Jack McKibben?"

"That's right," Tony agreed. "Can you answer it?"

"Perhaps I can. I am not so stupid as not to understand what you were insinuating in your column today when you said that the man who killed McKibben also lives on Central Park West. And I agreed with you. Only you were thinking of the wrong man."

"Who is the right man?"

Metcalfe's eyes were shining with amusement, not unmixed with malice.

"If you were really clever, Mr. Bigelow," he said, "you would have guessed before this. You would have guessed the minute you heard that Terry boy tell his story. He put the clue right under your nose but you have been too blind to see it." With that, the psychiatrist opened the door and bowed Tony out.

Tony was still slightly dazed from the effects of Metcalf's remark as he walked across the outer room, and the thought flashed through his head that that was exactly what the psychiatrist wanted. Well, he could always go back and ask more questions . . .

A fat, middle-aged woman waiting in the reception room glared at Tony. She was furious, of course, because she had been delayed in presenting her Superego for Metcalfe's inspection. Heaven knows, she didn't look as though she had any obsessions, except possibly one for whipped cream.

The columnist glanced at the lovely secretary, but she was already on her way to the inner door, looking very detached and efficient. Miss Scott—queer name for a girl so obviously Latin.

Tony walked out into the hall, turned to the left and tried the door of apartment 708, adjoining Metcalf's. It was locked, as he expected it to be, so he dropped down to the lobby, asked for the building superintendent, and explained that he wanted to take a look at Graham's apartment.

"But I can't let you do that, sir," the superintendent protested, "not without a written order from Mr. Graham himself."

"When will he be back?"

"I haven't had any word from him as to that, sir."

"How long has he been away?"

"He left on the fifteenth of March. It will be a month tomorrow."

"Have you been forwarding his mail?"

"Yes—to Hollywood."

"His wife's mail too?"

"Yes. She is out there with him."

"Has anybody been in the apartment since they left?"

"Nobody but me. I inspect it twice a week to see that everything is all right."

"On which days?"

"On Mondays and Thursdays, about the middle of the morning. I have a regular routine, you understand. All empty apartments are inspected in that way."

"Did you inspect it last Monday?"

"Yes, sir. And I inspected it this morning."

"Everything was all right on Monday?"

"Absolutely," the superintendent assured him. "Today, too," and Tony thanked him and departed.

He had his daily stint to think about, so he put the McKibben case out of his head for the time being, divided the cocktail hour between the Waldorf and the Plaza and finally got back to his apartment a little before seven. It was not until then that he remembered he had promised to call Herschel Schneider and tell him about his interview with Metcalf. Too late for the office of course, so he told Clarence to try the pent-house. At the end of a moment Schneider was on the line.

"Sorry I'm so late, Herschel," Tony apologized, "but I forgot all about promising to call you after I had seen Metcalf."

"That's all right, Tony. What did the doctor have to say?"

"He's a very clever fellow," Tony said. "I'm just beginning to realize that he didn't tell me a thing he didn't want to tell me. Half hypnotized me—"

"I told you he was a fake," Schneider put in.

"I suppose he is," Tony agreed, "but he certainly knows how to put himself across. He saw at once that I was shooting at him when I said that Jack McKibben's murderer probably lived on Central Park West, but he told me I was aiming at the wrong target. He as much as said that he knew who the murderer is."

"Psychoanalysis I suppose!" the lawyer scoffed. "He didn't mention his suspect's name, by any chance?"

"No, but he said that young Terry had shoved the clue right under my nose. What do you suppose he meant by that?" Tony asked.

"Sounds fishy to me, but I'll think it over," Schneider answered. "I have to go down to Washington tonight—back tomorrow afternoon probably. I'll give you the result of my reflections when I see you."

"All right," said Tony. "Think hard. I need all the help I can get."

Clarence came in as Tony laid down the receiver. "Gen'mun to see you, suh," he said, and handed Tony a card. It bore the name of Stuyvesant Bradford.

"He acts like he's mad about somethin'," Clarence went on.

"Show him in," said Tony, "I guess I can handle him," and a moment later Bradford strode into the room, face flushed and eyes shining savagely. He had a riding crop in his hand."

"Look here, Bigelow," he asked hoarsely, "are you a blackmailer, too?"

Tony saw that Clarence was showing a tendency to linger at the door and he motioned the house boy out.

"No, Mr. Bradford, I am not a blackmailer," he answered quietly, though his ears were singing a bit. "I think you will apologize for that question before you leave the room."

"Then what did you mean by that dirty slam in your column today?"

"There was no dirty slam in my column."

"Oh, yes there was—at least you intended it that way. You said my boy was growing more like his father every day."

"Well, isn't he?" Tony asked. "I happen to know that you are the father."

Bradford stared at him for a moment and some of the color ebbed out of his face.

"Give me a drink," he said, tossed his riding crop onto the desk and sat down heavily.

"That's better," Tony nodded and poured the Scotch. "Now maybe we can get somewhere."

"I'll be blasted if I know how you find out the things you do," Bradford went on, looking at him over the top of his glass. "I came down here to beat you up—"

"And you went to Max's place Monday night to beat Jack McKibben up."

"Exactly," Bradford agreed. "And before that I had been around to the office of a tricky psychiatrist named Jerome Metcalf to beat him up."

"You've been real busy, haven't you?" Tony commented.

"I've done a lot of running around," and Bradford smiled wryly, "but as a matter of fact, I haven't beaten anybody up — not yet."

"Your visit to Metcalf is news," said Tony. "What happened?"

"Nothing. He wasn't there."

Tony pushed a box of cigarettes in Bradford's direction and filled his pipe.

"Now then," the columnist said, "I'm ready to put all my cards on the table and I hope that you will do the same. I have always liked you because you have the reputation of being one of the few men in this town whose word is as good as his bond and who plays square. I would be the last man on earth to take what you called a dirty slam at you. What I wrote was certainly harmless enough of itself, but I used it because I hoped you would read a meaning into it which would bring you down here to see me, and I wanted to see you because I think we can help each other. Do we play ball or not?"

Bradford took a long drink of his Scotch, then blew a smoke ring thoughtfully into the air.

"I'm ready to play," he said at last and looked at Tony with eyes which were even a little friendly. "Also, I apologize. I've been behaving like a fool."

"All right," said Tony. "Here is what I know: I am trying to find out who killed Jack McKibben, not that I consider him a loss, but whoever did it was very clever and I'd like to show him that he wasn't quite clever enough. Yesterday afternoon I was present when McKibben's safe was opened. Locked away carefully in an inner compartment was a dictograph record. Duffy and I put it in a transcriber and we heard a woman's voice saying—"

"I know," Bradford broke in, "and last night at Max's place you stopped at my table and got my wife to talk and recognized her voice. Is that it?"

"That's it," agreed Tony quietly, "and nothing would please me more than to expose the scoundrels who would try to blackmail. The first thing I had to find out was where McKibben got the record."

"There is only one place he could have got it, and that's from Metcalf," said Bradford. "He is the only one to whom she ever made that statement."

"I figured out it might be that, but of course there was still the question whether Metcalf had given it to him or whether he had stolen it."

"It's my opinion they were working together," said Bradford.

"I thought so too, at first, but I'm not so sure now," said Tony. "I went aruond this afternoon and had a talk with Metcalf."

"And he confessed?"

"He admitted that he had such a record, but he seemed dumfounded when he heard that McKibben had a copy of it. More angry, perhaps than surprised—I don't know. Or he may have been putting it all on. No names were mentioned, you understand, but he told me that he had proved to the lady that she was mistaken. The way he did it seemed to me quite clever."

"It was clever," Bradford agreed, with a gloomy nod.

"Of course I didn't know all this last night," Tony went on, "so I was puzzled when I saw your wife looking so happy. I didn't see how she could be happy with that record in existence, but now I understand."

Bradford took another drink. His face was a little haggard, but his eyes were entirely friendly now.

"You can imagine what sort of a life I've been living," he said. "I thought my wife was going insane. I knew that she imagined some terrible disaster was hanging over her, but she denied it and would tell me nothing. Sometimes the way she looked at our boy frightened me. It got so toward the end that I was afraid to leave them alone together. And then last Monday she told me. She was afraid I would never forgive her. Forgive her! Why, I'm happy, too," he added simply.

"Good for you!" said Tony warmly. "It's rare to find a man big enough to be generous."

"Generous!" repeated Bradford, with a queer smile "I wasn't being generous—I was being selfish. I couldn't get along without her. Look here, Bigelow," he went on, after a moment, "I never supposed that I would mention this to any man, but I should like to tell you how I feel. I've been thinking about it a lot—more than I've ever thought about anything else. As a result of all this, Josephine and I are closer together than we have ever been. It sometimes takes a disaster to bring people together. We have started over again, this time on a straight track."

"So there is still one sensible woman in town!" Tony commented. "You ought to be proud that she's your wife."

"I am," said Bradford, and his eyes were a little misty.

Tony took a contemplative puff. "In a way you have Metcalf to thank for it," he remarked.

"I know it," Bradford agreed. "I was ready to kill him Monday, but since I've taken time to think it all over, I feel differently, even though I still believe he's a crook."

"I wish I could make up my mind whether Metcalf is a crook," Tony said.

"There must be something rotten somewhere. How did he explain McKibben having that record?"

"He didn't attempt to explain it. He said nobody could possibly get at his records. Just the same, somebody did. How did your wife come to go to him?"

"I had been worried about her for a long time," Bradford explained, "and had been making her go to our own doctor, but he hadn't been able to do anything for her, of course, because it was worry that was killing her. Then one day at a bridge game she heard some women talking about Metcalf and what a wonderful man he was for any sort of nervous ailment, and how he could make people snap out of their troubles, and all that, so she went to him without telling me anything about it. Later Josephine told me that she just had to tell somebody or go mad."

"I can understand that," Tony nodded.

Bradford went on telling of his wife's psychic problems: "I understand now, but I've have been mad then if I had thought that my wife was going to talk about such things with some other man. I can see now what a blessing it was she went. Otherwise she would probably have gone along all the rest of her life with that cloud over her."

Tony nodded solemnly. "Now I want to ask you some questions. What was McKibben doing with that record?"

"He was trying to blackmail my wife with it, of course. Called her up about a week ago and said he wanted to congratulate her on how handsome her boy was getting to be—more like his father every day—and he would like to talk to her about him. Josephine naturally was scared to death. She agreed to go down to his office. He showed her the cylinder and played it for her, told her it was for sale for twenty-five thousand dollars. If she didn't care to buy it, he intended to offer it to me. Very clever wasn't it?"

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

Kinsmen National Vice-Pres. Forest Compliments Club on Fag, Milk Funds

A special occasion was celebrated by the Belleville Kinsmen Club on Monday night at their regular meeting in the Hotel Quinte when the Kinsmen observed their 24th anniversary. The guest speaker of the night was Mr. Don Forest, National Vice-President of the Kinsmen Association who spoke on Kinsmen Education. The National Vice-President was introduced by Past-President Orliff Lloyd who outlined portions of his career in business and Kinsmen association. Mr. Forest was born in Dundas, Ontario, was president of the Montreal Kinsmen Club in 1937 and District Deputy Governor of the Kinsmen Association in 1942-43. He is a strong votary of club expansion.

Many complimentary things were said by Mr. Forest regarding the successfulness of the local club's Fag Fund and their Milk-for-Britain Fund. He expressed his approval of the recently set-up committee for the meeting of returned soldiers upon their return home to Belleville. As he expressed his congratulations for the two major endeavors of the Belleville Club, Mr. Forest stated that the Kinsmen Clubs of Canada have collected over $1,300,000 since the start of their Milk-for-Britain sponsorship. Saying that at the outbreak of war, many were of the opinion that the Kinsmen would never make a success of the project, that to expect to collect and send right out of the country this huge sum of money would never be put over. "Not only have we done it," said Mr. Forest, "but everyone thinks it is a grand idea."

Nine New Clubs.

Mr. Forest also stated that nine new clubs have been incorporated since the beginning of the year, making the total number of Kinsmen Clubs in Canada 109 at the present, with two or three more about to be formed. He advocated bringing into the association of Kinsmen Clubs, French or French-Canadian Clubs, that such a move as this would go far toward creating good relationships in Canada between the English and French speaking factions.

With a record of 48 per cent of their total membership on Active Service with one or other of the three armed services, the Kinsmen have every reason to be proud of their record in such a short period as only 24 years of existence. The membership rolls of clubs are being depleted by more members joining the services and the expansion program is necessary to assure the continuance of the work the Kinsmen have started, said Mr. Forest.

Mr. Forest expressed the esteem in which the original founders of the Kinsmen Association are held, and addressed himself to Major B. C. Sisler who is one of the originals. He made a number of suggestions to the local club as to the methods best used for educating new members and, after setting out a number of such plans, paid tribute to the extravagant success of the local club's Fag Fund again before concluding. He was extended the club's thanks and appreciation by Kinsman Bob Best.

Volunteers for Canvass

The business meeting of the club was held, at which time the president, Matt Currie, asked for the names of 30 members who would volunteer as canvassers to work in the Red Cross campaign. His Worship Mayor Harry Rollins was the first to raise his hand and volunteer.

A message from the National President of Kinsmen in Canada was read by Kin. Buster LaBarr which outlined a number of the objectives of the association and extended to all Kinsmen the compliments of the executive upon the occasion of their 24th anniversary. President Matt Currie made the reply of thanks for the club. A letter of thanks and appreciation from the Y.M.C.A. was read in which the Kinsmen were thanked for their part in last Sunday's open house at the "Y." Especial mention was made of Kinsman Gib Stackhouse, chairman of the War Services Committee and to the ladies who volunteered their services.

An announceemnt was made by Kin. Jeff Marvell that the Kinsmen would sponsor what will be known as Millionaires' Night and Carnival to be held in the Belleville Armouries March 29th to April 1st, inclusive, the proceeds to go to the Milk-for-Britain and Fag Funds. Kin. Orliff Lloyd asked the club to turn out in force to assist with the Armouries Carnival which is being put on by the Argyll Light Infantry (T) Reserve Army Corps as a means of repaying that organization for past favors and the co-operation they will receive during their own carnival. Kinsman Art Cruji volunteered to act as general chairman of the Kinsman carnival.

Kin. Frank Lang was complimented for his team's fine showing at the Saturday night bingo game last week, at which time the largest amount of money raised at one of these weekly games was raised by Frank and his team.

The newly-formed Trenton Kinsman Club were guests of the Belleville Club for the evening and were represented by the following charter members: Messrs. Milligan, Graham, McCrodan, Foster, High, Cretney, Strong.

Sgt. E. R. Bonter Given Special Mention in Press

Trenton — (Special) — Sergeant E. R. Bonter of Trenton and Sgt. E. A. Reynolds of Toronto, the first movie paratroop photographers in the Canadian Army have recently been given special mention in the London Daily Herald. This paper says both these men volunteered for this toughest of all camera assignments.

Both these men at the time of their being mentioned had eight jumps to their credit which entitled them to wear the badge of a fully trained paratrooper. Bonter was photographer for the Toronto Evening Telegram and a reporter for the Ontario Intelligencer before going overseas. The article states they will not be dropped in special vantage points but will have to go down with the rest of the paratroopers, according to Canadian Military Headquarters. If they manage to get their pictures developed and circulated they will be thrilling enough to keep people holding on to the edge of their seats wherever they are shown. But this is not the main purpose of the filming. The pictures will have great documentary value.

Sergt. Bonter was on a news roundup broadcast recently when he was interviewed by C.B.C. correspondent Peter Sterzberg.

Military Officials in Town

Colonel Rosser of Ottawa and Captain Bingham of Kingston were in town on Thursday conferring with Mayor H. R. Cory and other town officials, also representatives of various organizations including the Great War Veterans Association regarding forming a committee for rehabilitation of sailors, soldiers and airmen.

It is understood plans along this line are to be followed up immediately and committees set up to take care of this work. Already many of the boys have returned from overseas, some wounded, some ill and others discharged for various reasons, and it is for the benefit of these men that such an organization is to be established.

Marmora Twp. Farmer Catches Wolf in Trap

Marmora — (Special)—Mr. Dean McGregor and son of Marmora Township caught a wolf in a trap last Sunday. Mr. McGregor had a dead animal at the back of his barn for a fox bait and a couple of weeks ago while watching the bait, was surprised to see a wolf coming to feed. He took a couple of shots at it with a shotgun but failed to kill the animal. He then set a trap but later found the trap had disappeared. He set another and was surprised to find the wolf on Sunday morning. The wolf evidently had chewed all the claws off one foot to free himself from the trap the first time he had been caught, but came back again to feed and was caught by only one claw when discovered. Mr. McGregor will take the pelt to Belleville to collect the bounty.

Light Police Court Session

Apparently it's either a feast or a famine in local police court circles. Take for instance last week a lengthy docket welcomed Magistrate J. L. Lloyd on Tuesday, while Friday's court before Magistrate J. B. Garvin was so lengthy that an adjourned session in the afternoon had to be held to conclude the docket.

Today it was a much different story in the police court rooms, when Magistrate Lloyd took his position on the bench. Mr. Wm. McEwen, 15 Albion Street, had entered a plea of guilty and paid two dollars upon being charged with permitting his dog to run at large, the fee being paid before court.

Upon learning this Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson had the court room cleared (there were exactly two spectators) before he continued with the only case listed for trial, which happened to be a juvenile case with a 14-year-old lad charged with the theft of a watch.

Kenneth Lavallee, Tweed, told the court he had lost his watch from his boarding house room here recently and blamed the 14-year-old lad charged today. The boy admitted taking the watch and permitted a friend to sell it for $2. Constable Don Carruthers recovered the timepiece. Upon learning the watch had been sold by a third party, Magistrate Lloyd reserved judgment and instructed Deputy Chief Harman to have the boy responsible for selling the watch in court next week. "Let's get to the bottom of this", suggested His Worship.

CAR STOLEN IN CITY AND MARKER PLATE AT FOXBORO

Gordon Blue, No. 3 Moira St. E., reported the theft of his Ford coupe to city police authorities late Monday afternoon. The vehicle was stolen some time between midnight Sunday and noon on Monday, but the matter was not acqainted to the police until late Monday afternoon.

Later in the day Neil Harris, Foxboro, informed police the licence plate had been taken from his motor car at Foxboro. Now police are wondering if the party responsible for the stealing of Mr. Blue's car switched licence plates at Foxboro by stealing Mr. Harris' marker plate.

TOUGH RECOVERY JOB IN ITALY

Tense moment in toughest recovery job of the Italian campaign. Moving up into the attack against St. Leonardo two tanks went off the road in the dark, plunged into a 40-foot defile and lay piled one on top of the other. Canadian Ordnance Corps officers working with the Tank Brigade secured invaluable assistance of British R.A.S.C. personnel operating caterpillars. Moving the 32 tonners necessitated winching the first tank over on its side releasing the one underneath; then using three caterpillar tractors equipped with drum winches to haul the great machines up an almost vertical bank. British-Canadian team-play completed the job in a few hours despite mud and rain. — (Canadian Army Overseas Photo.)

Cpl. R. J. Wright Killed in Action

Marmora, Feb. 22. (Special.) — Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wright received official notification from Ottawa that their son, Corporal Robert John Wright of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, was killed in action in Italy on February 8th. The late Corporal Wright joined up with his regiment on the outbreak of war when only sixteen and four years ago was reported to be the youngest soldier in the Canadian forces. About two weeks ago he was mentioned in a news dispatch from Italy as being one of a number of N.C.O.'s taking a refresher course. Last week his parents received no less than four letters from him, all written in the cheerful mood, which have characterized his frequent letters to them. Twice in his army career, he has had minor mishaps. While in England he was slightly injured as his motorcycle on one occasion got out of control and landed him in a ditch. He was laid up for a few weeks in Sicily, as his motorcycle blew up under him. He was born in Marmora on February 25th., 1923, and attended Marmora Public School and St. Andrews' United Church Sunday School. His father saw service in the last war with the Canadian Army Service Corps. One brother, William Wright is stationed at Camp Borden.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended his parents in their bereavement.

As far as is known, Corporal Wright is the first Marmora born soldier to be killed in action in this war.

Sharp Debates in House Lead To Speculation Regarding Early General Election

Prime Minister Warns the Opposition There Must be Co-Operation

STORMY DISCUSSION

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Feb. 22 — (CP)—Parliament Hill today buzzed with speculation whether fiery debates in the House of Commons would lead to an early general election.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King in a Commons speech yesterday warned the opposition that if the government cannot obtain co-operation in dealing with parliamentary business "then we shall have to consider what our responsibility is."

This remark immediately was associated in political circles with a declaration by the Prime Minister Jan. 31, in his first major address after opening of the 1944 session. At that time Mr. King said the government did not propose a general election until the war was done, unless prevented from following this plan in some way impossible to control.

It was, he said, the intention of the administration — "with the co-operation of members of parliament generally" — to carry on with the prosecution of the war to the limit of its power.

Yesterday, the Prime Minister indicated he did not think the co-operation the government had the right to expect was being given.

He gave his viewpoint after the House had discussed for almost 2 hours a motion that Wednesdays be set aside for committee meetings, with no general sitting of the House. The motion, moved by the Prime Minister himself, ran into opposition from the Progressive Conservatives, including House Leader Gordon Graydon, and from some C.C.F. members. Finally it was approved by a recorded vote of 113 to 34.

Session Stormy

Mr. Graydon, as the chief Progressive Conservative spokesman, said he believed the setting aside of Wednesday for committee work would retard rather than speed the session.

The day's sittings in general were stormy, with Hughes Cleaver (L — Halton) running into opposition protests when he moved concurrence in a report of the War Expenditures Committee and upheld the policy of holding most sittings in camera.

When the House rose in the evening the discussion was on an amendment moved by Joseph Harris (PC — Toronto Danforth) that the report be not accepted but that evidence heard at in-camera sittings be tabled for study.

Mr. Cleaver said information desired by the committee could best be obtained at secret meetings. The committee had saved millions of dollars for the Canadian taxpayers. Renegotiation of shipbuilding contracts alone had saved from $30,000,000 to $40,000,000.

Coldwell Makes Claim

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. Leader whose charges against aluminum interests during the last session brought an inquiry by a war expenditures sub-committee, said the report approved by that committee was an attempt to "whitewash the deal." Instead of the report making clear his charges were unfounded, as it claimed, it had in fact supported most of them, Mr. Coldwell said.

Mr. Coldwell cited findings in the report which he said supported his charges that the Aluminum Co. of Canada was a monopoly; that its parent company, Aluminum Ltd., was part of International Cartel; that prices by the United Nations were exorbitant; and that the company was given under the contracts, whether deliveries of aluminum were made or not, a sum of $164,000,000.

Speaks on Amendment.

Mr. King, speaking on Mr. Harris' amendment, said information could be more readily obtained from witnesses, data concerning other governments' contracts could be kept secret, and the giving of aid and comfort to the enemy through statements vould be avoided by the holding of secret sittings.

Lionel Chevrier, parliamentary assistant to Mr. Howe, reviewed contracts given to the Aluminum Co. by the United Kingdom and United States and said the granting of special taxation concessions had been provident for Canada.

The total cost of plant expansions and power developments had been about $250,000,000. The United Kingdom had made a loan of $55,600,000 and the United States down payments of $75,350,000 since they had recognized the need of assisting tha company in financing necessary developments.

Special depreciation for taxation purposes had been granted by the Dominion government because it had "compelled" the company to complete the Shipshaw, Que., power development on a larger scale than had been planned and at a cost of $70,000,000 compared with an estimated $27,000,000 required for the same work in peacetime.

Discusses Proposal.

In discussion of the "Wednesdays for committees" motion, Mr. King said that "if the Prime Minister of Great Britain has found it necessary to say this to the Commons and the Commons had accepted it, I think I might claim that—having undertaken to see if possible that this government will carry on until the end of the war—my colleagues and I are entitled to the consideration of the House in the matter of the conditions under which we are to carry on."

"I do not want honorable members of this House to forget that, enjoying the concidence of this country as we do, having had it from all sides, from the opposition as well as from the press of this country practically with one voice that we should continue to varry on until this war is over, I believe we are entitled to say to honorable gentlemen opposite that we need an extra afternoon to confer on the great questions that are coming to us day by day," he said.

"If we cannot get that co-operation, then we shall have to consider what our responsibility is."

Advised to Read Hansard.

"I must say that what has taken place this afternoon has not made me believe any more strongly than I did hitherto in the co-operation we can expect from honorable gentlemen opposite."

Mr. King said he hoped Canadians would take Hansard, read the debate which had taken place during the afternoon "and see how many honorable gentlement opposite have spoken in terms of what is needed on account of the war effort of the country at this time, and how many have dealt with petty politics which they thought would be helpful to them and obstructive to the government."

PAPER WITHDRAWS STORY

"BULL SESSIONS" FOR FIGHTERS

After landing from an operational or practice flight, pilots of the R.C.A.F. fighter wing in England attend a "Bull Session." At this get-together mistakes, ideas and tactics are discussed with "The Chief," Wing Commander Robert Wendell (Buck) McNair, D.F.C. and two Bars of North Battleford, Saskatchewan, native of Nova Scotia, and destroyer of 17 enemy aircraft. "Bull Sessions" are a custom McNair instituted when he was in charge of the famous "Red Indian" squadron. "I found our sessions produced good results and kept them up," the Wingco says. # REDS DRIVE NAZIS BACK ON 150-MILE FRONT

133 German Fighter Planes Blasted From the Sky

Germans Continue Retreat Toward Pskov in North

Krivoi Rog Falls To Red Army Along With 300 Small Communities

ANNIVERSARY MARKED

London, Feb. 23—(CP)—A series of triumphs over the German invaders of Russia was fashioned for the 26th anniversary today of the formation of the Red Army.

Soviet troops, which swept the Germans from almost three-quarters of occupied Russia in a year, yesterday captured Krivoi Rog in the Ukraine and pushed their northern advance by taking 300 communities, sending the Germans retreating upon Pakov along a 150-mile curving front.

"The German Fascist war machine has been placed by the Red Army on the verge of complete defeat," said the Soviet Information Bureau.

Premier Marshal Stalin himself announced the capture of Krivoi Rog, which the Germans had defended with fanatic zeal in four months of bitter fighting.

Pakov has particular significance for the Red Army. It was there in 1918 that the Russians defeated the Germans in a battle which has been officially designated as the army's beginning.

The advance toward Pakov has brought the Russians to within 10 miles of Dno, half-way point between Staraya Russ and Pakov.

British Midget Subs Dimensions Disclosed

London, Feb. 23 — (CP) — Pictures released today in connection with the honors paid to the crews of British midget submarines which torpedoed and crippled the German battleship Tirpitz on Sept. 22, 1943, indicate that this new British naval weapon is about 40 feet long, with a deck beam of from five to six feet and a hull flare giving considerably more than ordinary width below the waterline.

The number of men winning medals for crippling the Nazis' mightiest battleship indicate that the craft, known to navy personnel as "Tiddlers," carry crews of from three to four.

The cryptic official accounts of the performance of the midget submarines also hinted at a cruising range of up to 2,000 miles, since they apparently made a volage of about 1,000 miles to reach the Tirpitz' hideout in a Norwegian fjord.

Lieut. Basil Charles Godfrey Place and Lieut. Donald Cameron, commanders of the X-6 and X-7, respectively, won the Victoria Cross for helping to carry out the "most daring and successful" attack on the Tirpitz. Both now are prisoners of the Germans.

The Conspicuous Gallantry Medal was awarded to engine room artificer Edmund Goddard and the D.S.O. to Sub-Lieutenant Robert Aitken, Richard Haddon Kendal and John Thornton Lorimer for their part in the feat.

Britain's Greetings Sent To Stalin, Red Army On It's 26th Anniversary

London, Feb. 23—(CP) — Prime Minister Churchill, in a message to Premier Stalin and all ranks of the Red Army on the army's 26th anniversary, today expressed "profound admiration of their glorious record."

"Inspired and guided by your leadership and by their love of the soil of Russia, trusting their skilful and resolute commanders, they will go forward to victory, and through victory to peace with honor," he told Stalin.

The British chiefs of staff messaged Marshal Klementi Y. Voroshilov "Our most sincere wishes for yet more brilliant successes, and for speedy and total destruction of our common enemy."

REMANDED FOR SENTENCE

Halifax, Feb. 23 — (CP)—Frederick Nolan, 16-year-old schoolboy, pleaded guilty yesterday to an armed robbery charge in connection with a $980 holdup at the Lord Nelson Hotel here last month.

Nolan was arrested in Montreal two days after an unmasked man carrying a cut-down rifle and a briefcase had held up the hotel cashier and forced her to open a safe.

Lull Settles Over Italian Fronts

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
Associated Press War Correspondent

Naples, Feb. 23 (AP)—Fifth Army troops threw back the localized German attacks west of Cisterna yesterday, Allied headquarters announced today, as Field Marshal Albert Kisselring brought his long range artillery into play and apparently regrouped his forces for another attempt at driving the Allies off the Anzio beachhead.

Nazi artillery lobbed shells at the nerve centre of Anzio and other beachhead objectives, and 130 German planes hit at ground troops, but the Allies countered with 1,600 aerial sorties, and gunfire against enemy troop and vehicle movements.

A lull continued in the fighting on the Cassino sector to the east.

Otherwise headquarters reported only normal patrolling from both fronts, with more snowfalls hampering movements in the mountains.

British guns shelled enemy troops and vehicles near the Nazis' main concentration point of Carroceto. Allied group troops could see the Germans busily moving their forces in the rear areas, indicating Kesselring was preparing for a renewed assault after repulse of his second major offensive last weekend.

The enemy also maintained steady pressure around the perimeter of the beachhead.

The Germans sorely needed a breathing spell, for they suffered the htaviest casualties of any comparable period of the Italian campaign during their four-day assault from last Wednesday through Saturday.

The German 114th Jaeger (rifle) division suffered particularly heavy losses.

Allied heavy bombers smashed at Regensburg in Germany in an assault co-ordinated with a blow from Britain, and also hammered the enemy airfield at Zagreb and harbors at Zara and Siebnik. Medium bombers pounded railway communications at three points. Fifty German planes were downed, while the Allies lost 15.

Twin Air Victory By Toronto Airman

London, Feb. 23. (CP Cable) — Two of six German aircraft destroyed in last night's attack upon Great Britain were shot down in 20 eventful minutes of fighting by Sqdn. Ldr. C. A. Anderson of Toronto, a pilot in a Canadian Mosquito squadron.

The victims—his first victories in combat flying—were a Junkers 88 and a Junkers 188, an improved version of the twin-engine 88.

It was the second time in five days that a Canadian scored a twin victory. Last Saturday it was announced that Flt. Lt. Bob Kipp of Kamloops, B.C., flying in a Mosquito with his pilot, FO. Huletsky of Montreal, had got a pair over an enemy base in Northern France.

Anderson, a former Sunday-School teacher in Toronto, was recently promoted from the rank of flight lieutenant. He is described by fellow officers as a "quiet, enthusiastic night fighter".

'Killers' of North Atlantic Have a Roaming Assignment

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent.)

A Port in Northern Ireland,' Feb. 23. (CP)—The "killers" of the North Atlantic are the destroyers, sloops, frigates and corvettes of the special Royal Navy groups which are on the offensive against German submarines lurking in the ocean for the great convpys from Canada and the United States.

These groups, with a number of Canadians serving in them, go out from this port and others to hunt the U-boats up and down the North Atlantic. The killers have a roaming assignment from the Azores to the Arctic Seas and Newfoundland to the Bay of Biscay.

Their work is entirely offensive and they supplement the job done by the regular escort vessels which stick with the convoys and fight off direct attacks on merchant ships and tankers.

This new tactic of hunting out the submarines has been a huge success in beating the enemy on the Atlantic and in this anti-submarine port when they talk of the killer groups, the veterans in the business immediately mention "Walker and Gretton", the top commanders on this job.

They are Capt. H. J. Walker, OMB., D.S.O., in the Sloop "Starling" who commands the top scoring group, and commander P. W. Gretton, D.S.O., and Bar, O.B.E., and D.S.C. In the Destroyer "Duncan", whose group is right on Walker's heels.

The men who sail in these groups are to the navy what the commandos are to the army—men with unusually daring assignments with a thrilling record of achievement and missions far from routine. They are the scourge of the U-boats and the Germans know it only too well. Several times they've sent out special long-range bombers to try and destroy the groups but they've failed. Walker and Gretton' till prowl the seas.

NO INDICATION FINLAND NEARER TO WITHDRAWING

J. H. Paasikivi, Former Finnish Cabinet Minister, Returns to Helsinki

DECLINES COMMENT

By JOHN H. COLBURN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Feb. 23 — (AP) — Juhu K. Paasikivi, former Finnish cabinet member whose arrival here Feb. 12 led to rumors that his government was trying to contact Moscow with a view to negotiating a separate peace, returned to Helsinki today without any indications that Finland is any nearer getting out of the war.

Paasikivi, who played an important role in negotiating the treaty that ended the Finnish-Russian war of 1939-40, left Stockholm by plane at 9 a.m. (4 a.m. E.D.T.), accompanied by his wife.

He declined to comment on the subject of Finnish peace negotiations, but he appeared to be in a less jovial mood than on his arrival, impressing correspondents as a man whose mission has been none too successful.

Resumes Trade Agreement

When asked if he planned to return to Stockholm, Paasikivi said, "I've been here too long already."

A possible indication that a Russian-Finnish peace is not likely in the near future came from Helsinki yesterday when it was disclosed that Finnish trade negotiations with Germany were resumed Feb. 16. This step was taken despite United States Secretary Cordell Hull's warning Jan. 31 that the Finns must break their alliance with Germany or suffer the consequences.

However, some diplomatic observers expressed the opinion that peace negotiations might not have gone beyond the sounding out stage and Finland still may find a way to quit the war.

There have been unconfirmed reports that Madam Alexandra Kollontay, Soviet Minister to Sweden, will go to Moscow about March 1.

If any peace move by Finland develops in the interim she might be in a position to carry the proposal.

Legislation May Be Stringent

Toronto, Feb. 23 — (CP) — The Globe and Mail says today Attorney-General Blackwell will attempt to solve the problem of law enforcement against slot machine operators by introducing a bill in the Ontario legislature which would make it illegal for anyone to "have or own" a slot machine.

The newspaper, noting that a bill on gambling devices was mentioned in the Speech from the Throne read at yesterday's House opening, said obtaining evidence to convict a gaming charge often proves difficult because under the criminal code certain machines are legal if played for amusement only.

Experts Agree Germany Still Has Formidable Machine at Her Disposal

By WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press War Correspondent

London, Feb. 23 — (AP) — In the opinion of many Allied military leaders — an opinion reflected in Prime Minister Churchill's speech in the House of Commons Tuesday —Germany still has a mighty war machine at her disposal.

Here is a picture of Nazi military might, as compiled from the opinions of two top Allied officers charged with assessing German strength, and from information obtained from an anti-Nazi German underground leader aiding the Allied cause.

None of these men believes that a combination of Allied bombing and Russian ground successes will cause a German collapse, although they acknowledge the contributions of both.

None of them believes that a civilian revolution is possible at the moment.

All are convinced that bloody, large-scale battles must be waged on the western front to beat the Germans into submission.

All say that German reserve stocks are low, but that German ground forces have no serious shortage of war materials.

About Same as in 1917

They agree German military strength is in about the same relative position as it was in 1917 in the First Great War.

In general they sum the situation up this way:

1. Civilian Strength: Allied demands for unconditional surrender and the Russian determination to crush Germany have hardened both civilians and soldiers to the point where they feel they must stand fast to the last.

German propaganda is still strong and grips the people's minds. Thus, although Allied bombings have created terrible hardships, the only outward result has been an increase in sullen hatred.

Eleven years of the Hitler regime have left the country devoid of leadership outside the Nazi party and the army, which is co-operating.

2. The German Army: Despite huge losses on the Russian front, estimated to have been between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 men in the last eight months, Hitler has not yet reached the bottom of the manpower barrel.

Increase Strength in West

The German Army still has the same number of decisions with which it started the war — more than 300. These divisions have dropped in strength from 15,000 to 10,000 or 12,000 men in some cases.

The German High Command in the past three months has been able to increase strength in the west — France, Belgium, Holland and western Germany—from about 40 to 60 divisions.

HITLER IS FACING CATASTROPHE SAYS STALIN

Praises Red Army for Smashing Germany on 26th Anniversary of Founding

ALLIES HARMONIOUS

London, Feb. 23. (CP)—All German attempts to "introduce disharmony in the camp of the anti-Hitlerite coalition" are doomed to failure, Premier Stalin told the Russian people today in a special order of the day commemorating the 26th anniversary of the Red Army.

Praising the Red Army for smashing Germany "to the edge of catastrophe", the Russian Premier again emphasized his contention that Russia has been bearing the brunt of the war effort, but declared:

"All the more hopeless will the situation of Hitlerite Germany be when the main forces of our Allies go into action and the powerful and growing offensive of the Allied States is launched against Hitlerite Germany.

"It should now be clear to all that Hitlerite Germany is advancing inevitably toward catastrophe. The hour of final reckoning for all the crimes committed by the Hitlerites on Soviet soil and in the occupied countries is approaching".

Stalin's proclamation, which was broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded here by the Soviet Monitor, said in one year the Russians won back three-quarters of the territory taken by the Germans since their 1941 invasion and advanced westward as much as 1,000 miles in some places.

Must Be Vigilant.

Stalin said the Nazis, aware of approaching retribution for their crimes, are resisting "with the fury of desperation" and are fighting for every foot of Russian soil. Therefore, he added:

"We must be vigilant and not allow over-confidence in our ranks, or complacency.

"There has never yet been a case in the history of war when an enemy jumped into the abyss of his own accord. In order to win the war it is necessary to force the enemy to the abyss and push him in".

The Germans, Stalin asserted, are seeking to save themselves by ordering total mobilization in the rear, "although Germany's manpower reserves are depleted", and by making desperate efforts to introduce disharmony in the camp of the Allies and thereby "drag out the war".

"Hitlerite diplomats are rushing from one neutral country to another, trying to establish contacts with pro-Hitlerite elements, and hinting at the possibility of separate peace, sometimes with our state sometimes with our allies", he said.

"All these subterfuges of the Hitlerites are doomed to failure".

GERMANS SHOWER HIGH EXPLOSIVES OVER WIDE AREA

At Least Ten Killed and Fires Started in Several London Districts

TEN PLANES DOWNED

London, Feb. 23 —(AP)— A substantial number of German raiders made a two-directional assault on London Tuesday night, showering high explosives and fire bombs over wide areas here and in other English sections causing casualties including at least 10 killed and starting fires in several districts.

The raiders stirred up a barrage which many agreed was the heaviest of the war. Ten of the enemy planes were destroyed, two by Sqdn. Ldr. C. A. Anderson of Toronto, a Mosquito pilot.

Making the 11th assault on London this month and the fourth in five nights, the attacks came in two waves over the east and south coast. They converged on London and then spread out.

The main cargo of the raiders was incendiaries, perhaps many of them the new explosive type the Germans say they are using. In size the attacking force appeared equal to any sent against Britain in recent nights, perhaps larger.

Barrage Last an Hour.

For more than an hour massive and continuous barrage was hurled skyward. Gun flashes combined with burning incendiaries to turn night into day.

Anti-aircraft shell fragments came down like metallic hailstones, kicking up spakrs from the pavement and clanking on rooftops. At least six persons were killed by these fragments.

Londoners going to work today saw cleanup gangs clearing bomb damage and sweeping the streets.

A number of schools, including a famous one in the London area, were among the buildings wrecked.

One house was destroyed and six others were damaged by incendiaries dropped in the outskirts of an East Anglian town and several casualties were caused at one town in the Home Counties.

An entire family of six was killed in one house. Next door three children were killed and another was injured. A number of persons were injured in a nearby village where several cottages were demolished.

The by-election was made necessary by the death Feb. 9 of Wallace Walsh, progressive conservative.

PEACE-TIME JOBS MORE PLENTIFUL THAN BEFORE WAR

Interim Report On Rehabilitation Is Tabled Before the Reconstruction Com.

PREPARED BY DR. WEIR

Ottawa, Feb. 23 — (CP) — When peace returns and the transition from war to peace economy is completed, there may be available to Canadians from 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 more peacetime jobs than were available before the war, said an interim report on rehabilitation tabled today before the Commons Reconstruction Committee.

The report was prepared by Dr. G. M. Weir, Acting Director of Training in the Pensions Department and tabled by Pensions Minister Mackenzie.

An official summary of the report said it was based on the opinions of more than 50,000 people in Canada and on a questionnaire filled out by 347,000 members of the armed forces.

Based on the opinions of these Canadians, the report said, it is believed:—

1. That full employment in the post-war period is feasible;
2. That professional opportunities will be increased by about 50,000, with need for doctors and dentists heading the list.
3. That construction and building, manufacturing and agriculture will offer the greatest opportunities for employment for men in the armed services; and that the three principal fields for women will be in professional, personal and miscellaneous service, vocational and clerical work.

Based on Assumptions

Dr. Weir said his report is based on assumption that growth of population and industrial development after the war will continue at as rapid a pace as in the past; that fairly full employment and gradually improved standards of living will be realized; that government controls will be relaxed; but that there will continue to be government direction and an extensive program of public works if needed.

The report also assumes, he said, that social services will be developed fairly rapidly; that post-war expansion will not primarily involve increases in jobs arising from "boom" conditions; that there will be effective conversion of war industries to peacetime pursuits; and that, in order to provide full employment, a reasonably high national income must be maintained to assure decent standards of living and adequate social services.

Mr. Mackenzie said in a statement to the committee that on the basis of the survey it is estimated that provision should tentatively be made for the vocational training of close to 200,000 young people now in the armed forces.

The minister said the comments and conclusions in Dr. Weir's report merely suggested the extent of the problem and the scope of the partial inquiry already made.

Claims Highways Revenue in 12 Yrs. Exceeds Expenditure by 209 Millions

Toronto, Feb. 23 — (CP) — The province of Ontario has received $209,000,000 more in revenue from its highways since 1932 than it has spent on them, Guy R. Marston of Simcoe said today in his presidential address to the 50th Annual Convention of the Ontario Good Roads Association.

Mr. Marston, county engineer for Norfolk County for 31 years, said "It would appear" that the money "has been diverted for other purposes."

"In 1929 the bonded indebtedness for provincial highways was $128,000,000," said Mr. Marstón. "In March, 1943, it was $332,000,000. That is a debt of $46,000 a mile for the provincial highways . . .

"From October, 1932, to April, 1943, the Ontario revenue from highways was $304,000,000. Subsidies to counties and townships during the same period were $43,000,000. Expenditures on provincial roads were $200,000,000, leaving a surplus of revenue over total expenditure of $61,000,000.

"Bearing in mind that $148,000,000 has been added to the bonded indebtedness of Ontario during that period it would appear that $209,000,000 has been diverted for other than road purposes. I have collected these figures from books issued by the Ontario government and from pamphlets issued by the Federal government.

"Last year county and township councils were asked for a five-year postwar program of roads. Some have asked no increase in expenditures, some 50 to 100 per cent, some 400 to 500 per cent. Apparently some councils think taxpayers can stand no further increase in taxes.

"People in rural sections need and deserve good roads and are willing to pay taxes to the various departments of government, but they feel they should know for what they are paying taxes and where the money goes. Thousands of young men have left the farms, not because of dislike of farming, but because they cannot be happy without good roads."

American Bombers Co-ordinate Blows From Italy, Britain

Sixty-One Bombers Lost But Enemy Aircraft Production Badly Crippled

SAVAGE OPPOSITION

London, Feb. 23 —(AP)— American bombers and fighters, striking powerfully from Britain and Italy in the first co-ordinated assault deep into Germany, crippled enemy aircraft production anew and knocked 133 Nazi fighter planes from the sky, U. S. Army Headquarters declared today.

Sixty-one big bombers were lost in yesterday's joint assault which included diversionary raids by planes based in Italy, the announcement said. It listed 41 bombers lost from the force attacking from Britain, and 20 missing from the U. S. 15th Air Force based in Italy.

(Allied Headquarters in the Mediterranean said only 15 Italy-based planes were lost yesterday, and a spokesman said 12 were bombers. This would make the day's total bomber losses 53.)

"In three days of record-breaking operations aimed at destroying Germany's capacity to maintain aerial resistance, American air force planes have accounted for 310 enemy fighters." Headquarters said, with 153 falling to fighters of the 8th and 9th forces in Britain, 117 destroyed by 8th Air Force bombers, and 40 by 15th Air Force bombers.

Savage Resistance.

The Germans threw up savage resistance as the Britain-based bombers struck the Junkers-88 assembly plant at Bernburg and airframe and component factories at Aschersleben and Halberstadt. The 15th Airforce bombers from Italy blasted two Messerschmitt factories at Regensburg, and bombed freight yards at Petershausen, 20 miles north of Munich.

An announcement said the Italian-based aircraft were in record strength. Fliers returning to Britain said the fighting was even more intense than in the Schweinfurt raid of last October, when the Americans lost 60 bombers.

Many Hit on Ground.

Heavy bombers flying from Britain bagged 34 enemy fighters yesterday, and their escorts knocked down 59, while the bombers of the 15th air force destroyed 40 Nazi craft.

Other enemy craft were hit on the aprons of factories and in parking areas.

A communique said the 8th and 9th air force lost 11 fighters yesterday and that two fighters of the force in Italy were missing for a total day's loss of 74 planes.

A headquarters spokesman in Italy said three fighters' were lost yesterday over the Anzio beachhead area, and that 50 enemy planes were downed during the day, including the 40 over Germany and 10 over the beachhead.

Not All Agree On What Beaver Meat Tastes Like

Columbus, O., Feb. 23—(AP)—There are Canadians who claim beaver meat is a delicacy.

There are below-the-border men who definitely agree and others who definitely don't.

In fact, they can't tell what beaver tastes like. They agree only that beavers make dandy dams.

The meat tastes like rabbit, lamb, mutton, venison or caribou, depending on whose report it is.

The Outdoor Writers Association of America ate beaver at its annual convention here Monday night. Some guests took "seconds" and some didn't down their "firsts."

Anyway, the Outdoor Outfitters of Ontario who supplied the meat contributed to all the 300 guests' entertainment and gave the man who was reminded of caribou a chance to bask in the admiration of his less cosmopolite table companions.

One comment dropped into the discussion sounded like "For me, I'll just take a good baked 'coon."

Tito's Partisans Swarm Down on Huns Inflict Major Losses

London, Feb. 23 — (CP)—Swarming down on the Germans in the Kalinovich area south of the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo, Marshal Josip Broz' (Tito) Partisans have inflicted major losses on the enemy, a communique of the Yugoslav Army of Liberation said today.

The communique, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio and recorded by The Associated Press, said during the last three weeks of January Partisan detachments cut the important Zagreb-Belgrade railway, main link between Germany and the Balkans.

Pope Pius Asks Rome Be Spared

London, Feb. 23 —(CP)— Pope Pius XII has appealed to the belligerents to save Rome from destruction by an agreement similar to those which spared Cairo and Athens, the Vatican radio said last night.

"Rome still, in spite of the war, is a centre of religion," the Pope was quoted as saying. "The belligerents agreed to spare the monuments of Athens and Cairo, and in the same way Rome should be saved. The Abbey of Mount Cassino already has been destroyed."

The broadcast was recorded by the Associated Press.

Bancroft and District

Fort Stewart Boy Killed in Italy

Bancroft — (Special) — Private Raymond Nelson Towns, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Towns of Fort Stewart, Ontario, has been officially reported killed in action in Italy on February 1st.

Raymond enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment January 20th., 1940. He arrived in England in May of the same year, remaining there until November of 1943. Raymond's older brother, Minor, enlisted with the Royal Canadian Artillery in March of 1943 going overseas in November of the same year. The two brothers never met since Raymond went overseas.

Raymond is sadly missed by his father and mother, five sisters, Mrs. Thomas Gilchrist, Mrs. Richard Welsh of Toronto, Mrs. Wilfred McWhirter of Ajax, Mrs. Roy Stoughton and Orpha of Fort Stewart, also two brothers, Roy of Fort Stewart and Minor who is now serving with the armed forces somewhere in England.

Private John Moxam Arrives Home.

Private John Moxam arrived home from overseas last week much to the surprise of his wife and family.

John enlisted with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment September 9th., 1939, at the age of 32 years, training three months in Picton prior to going overseas in December of 1939. The boy sailed over on the Ormandy having no unusual experiences having only sighted several sharks and schools of porpoises. During Private Moxam's stay in the Old Country his training took him throughout England, Scotland and Wales. It was during his six weeks of Commando training that Private Moxam received injuries which necessitated his removal to hospital for treatment and eventually led to his home coming. While on one of his Commando training schemes he relates that he had the pleasure of being billetted at Lord Bennett's estate. Private Moxam arrived in Canada February 13th and arrived in Bancroft the afternoon of February 15th. Although he was overjoyed at arriving home to be with his wife and family there were sad memories for him also as his father and one brother, Eric, had passed away during the time he was overseas. He has one brother also overseas, Pte. Douglas Moxam, who went overseas with the P.W.O.R.'s later being transferred to the C.I.C.'s. Just prior to John's home coming the two brothers arranged several days' leave which they made use of in sight-seeing the points of interest in the Isles.

Pte. John Moxam was among the troops sent to France in 1940 just prior to that country's fall before the German onslaught and said that when he left the beaches at Dunkirk he had no belongings to take along as all was lost in their rapid return to the Channel, and thence to England.

Pte. Moxam is now home on thirty days' leave and upon its termination he will report back to headquarters at Kingston.

Soldiers on Seven-Day Leave May Wear 'Civies'

Ottawa, Feb. 23 (CP)—A chance to return to "civvies," if only for a few days, has been granted to all ranks of the Canadian Army, including the C.W.A.C., according to an announcement in routine orders.

The order states that army personnel may be granted permission to wear civilian clothes while on furlough or pass of not less than seven days. They must leave or return to stations in uniform, however.

Thus ends, according to opinion in local military circles, one of the most widespread violations against dress regulations.

"In the past, it has been the temptation of many a soldier to put on his civvies, perhaps just for an evening of dancing, while he was on furlough," said one senior officer. "It's only natural for a soldier to crave a little change from the usual routine. Now he can indulge in that happy transformation without fear of apprehension or punishment."

Large Quantity Fats Required To Supply War Requirements

Canadian Legion to Start Fat Salvage Drive on March 6

When the final history of this war is written it will be found that those Canadian citizens serving on the home front contributed in many ways to the victories of our fighting forces. In the past there has been splendid responses to appeals for FATS which have contributed to the present liberal supply of glycerine for explosive and medical supplies and has helped make possible the removal of all restrictions from its use.

Fats in large quantities are still required for essential war purposes and the need for continuing to collect them is as pressing as ever. Salvaged fats help assure the supply of cutting oils for the manufacture of munitions, war equipment, compounds for drawing steel and processing metals, lubricant greases for launching ships, lubricants for tanks and railway rolling stock, fatty acids used in the manufacture of synthetic rubber, fatty acids for insecticides and disinfectants, basic ingredients for ointments, pharmaceutics, leather for footwear for our armed forces, processed oils for textile manufacturing, soaps, for a number of really vital purposes of which the following are only a small proportion: soap for hospitals, our armed forces, metals processing, synthetic rubber, finishing parachutes and wool processing.

The above is a list of some of the reasons why the collection of fats must go on. An intense campaign for the collection of fats will be started on March 6th, when the local committee of the Canadian Legion will appeal to the citizens of Belleville for this much needed essential war substance.

BOOK GIFT REFUSED

Madoc Twp. Council To Pay $25 Bounty For Each Wolf Killed

Wolf hunters in Madoc township will in future be better paid for their efforts to rid the district of the marauders which are being blamed for the raiding of sheep flocks in the area. At the last meeting of the township council members voted to pay a bounty of $25 for each wolf killed within the township. This will be paid in addition to the $10 bounty paid by the county and the bounty of $25 paid by the province. Total bounty for killing a wolf in Madoc township will now be $60.

In a rather short business session councillors passed a by-law appointing F. W. Allen as assessor for 1944 at a salary of $125, while the auditor's report was read and his fee of $30 ordered paid.

The following accounts were ordered paid: North Hastings Review, $33.10; E. T. Taylor, $15; Municipal World, $18.98. The relief accounts of H. C. Lloyd of $19.99 and that of Norman Whytock, of $6, both from January accounts, were ordered paid.

Evacuation of France's Mediterranean Coast Begins Says Paris Radio

London, Feb. 23 —(CP Cable)— Evacuation of France's Mediterranean coast began yesterday, said a commentator on the German-controlled Paris radio, because the French government considers southern France will be the first region invaded by the Allies.

This statement by Commentator Robert De Beauplan constituted a reminder that the time is not far off when weather will be suitable for invasion anywhere along France's coastline. De Beauplan said the blow might fall along a line from Nice on the Rivierra to Toulon and Marseilles on the eastern end of the Gulf of Lions to Perpignan on the west.

The commentator, however, also warned that if the Allies invaded elsewhere than in the south every region of the country must be ready for the sudden attack which would turn the area into a gigantic battlefield.

PEACE-TIME JOBS

While "far from being conclusive," they were offered on the basis that factual data collected from several thousand people are a better guide "in assessing the nature and extent of the rehabilitation problem than the intuition or judgment of any one official."

Dr. Weir is a former Minister of Education in British Columbia and has conducted several national surveys.

Mr. Mackenzie said the conclusions and opinions in the report were not offered as the opinion of the government or even of Dr. Weir, but were the consensus of "substantial numbers of people with specialized knowledge of the subject matter about which they were consulted."

A survey of women in the armed forces had shown that "an extraordinary preponderance" was in favor of stenography as a post-war occupation. Other high-ranking choices were homemaking, nursing, university courses, teaching bookking and clerical work.

In the case of men, a questionnaire directed to 18,720 students in 48 R.C.A.F. training centres across Canada showed the two principal preferences for post-war training to be electrical engineering and radio.

Many Wish to Continue.

A total of 1,201 wished to continue in the R.C.A.F., while 1,160 said their preference was for aeronautical engineering and mechanics. Much of this engineering training would be on the senior technical school level, said the report.

Inquiry among 4,000 naval ratings gave radio, motor mechanics, machine shop practice, electrical engineering and welding as the principal preferences. Those wishing to continue in the navy were sixth on the list.

Mr. Mackenzie said a questionnaire based on the possibility of educational and training courses being provided between the end of the war and ultimate discharge was directed to 9,435 soldiers, of whom all but 26 per cent had completed public school or had taken more advanced educational courses up to and including university degrees.

Of these, 61 per cent indicated a desire to have trade training, 35 asked for further educational courses and 21 per cent asked for both types of training.

University Courses

Mr. Mackenzie said the number of persons now in the armed forces who would register for university courses was expected to be from 30,000 to 40,000.

The opinion of Canadians that full employment is feasible after the war was gained mainly from a "simple questionnaire" submitted to more than 1,800 members of 10 Rotary Clubs in 10 leading cities across Canada, Mr. Mackenzie said.

These clubs represented a cross section of the business and professional life of their communities and members "may be expected to take a pragmatic rather than an idealistic viewpoint," the minister said.

"It is significant therefore that a very substantial majority of more than 1,300 Rotarians who answered the questionnaire specifically expressed the opinion that full employment in Canada is feasible."

The questionnaire was answered also by 190 others representative of R.C.A.F. officers, members of institutes of international and public affairs and members of the Vancouver Rehabilitation Committee.

"An interesting feature of the report is that representative Canadians themselves estimated the needs of permanent navy, army and air forces, together with munitions and equipment factory workers, at 135,000 persons," said Mr. Mackenzie.

Veterans' Land Act.

"The Veterans' Land Act phase of the armed services rehabilitation program, it is estimated, will absorb from 100,000 to 130,000, if the results of a questionnaire filled out by 347,00 of the armed forces can be taken as any criterion."

Mr. Mackenzie said a breakdown of the possible new post-war opportunities showed they may exist in the following categories:

Provincial Services 77,00 to $80,000; Municipal Services 7,500 to 10,000; Federal Services 10,000 to 20,000; Veterans' Land Act (placements) 100,000 to 130,000; Construction Industry (minimum annual average) 150,000 to 260,000; Canadian National and Pacific Railways 100,000 to 125,000; Armed Services, including Munitions and Equipment Factory Workers 135,000 to 150,000; Additional Professional Opportunities 50,000 to 60,000; Vovational Opportunities 500,000 to 1,000,000; Electrical Trades 3,000 to 5,000; and Retailing Business 100,000.

GIVEN $115,091 FOR DAMAGES

Toronto, Feb. 23—(CP)—One of the largest awards for damages in the history of the province was made yesterday by Mr. Justice Keiller Mackay in a judgment handed down at Osgoode Hall. John Alexander Martin, 54, engineer and tool maker, was awarded $115,091.29 in his action against W. G. Deutch and Sarah Deutch for injuries received when he was struck by a car owned by the former and driven by the latter on the Queen Elizabeth Highway near Burlington, Sept. 4, 1939.

COASTAL GUNS IN ACTION

London, Feb. 23—(CP)—British and German coastal guns exchanged salvos across Dover Strait early today in one of their heaviest duels in months. Coastal observers said the British guns were in action almost continuously for 30 minutes and scattered an enemy convoy trying to sneak up the French coast between Boulogne and Calais. Shell warnings which were sounded in all towns in the Dover area lasted for 90 minutes.

Most Stormy Scene in Years Develops in House of Commons

By JAMES McCOOK

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Feb. 23 —(CP)— The buttons came off the parliamentary foils in the Commons yesterday in a day of acrimonious debate that ended with leaders of the two main parties shouting at each other across the floor, their followers making the chamber rock with applause.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, were the principals in what veteran parliamentarians called the most tempestuous scene in years.

Through the long day member after member spoke on a motion to concur in a report of the House War Expenditures Committee and a Progressive Conservative amendment for tabling of the evidence on which it was based—evidence taken in camera.

Amendment Downed.

The House voted down the amendment, 118 to 50, and after lengthy discussion the motion for concurrence was withdrawn by Hughes Cleaver (L-Halton), the committee chairman.

It was a day of interruptions, points of order and points of privilege.

When the concurrence motion had been withdrawn, Mr. King moved for the appointment of a 1944 War Expenditures Committee.

Mr. Graydon said his party would oppose this move, believing the committee's work had been rendered largely unimportant because it had sat in camera. The Progressive Conservative members named to the committee would reserve the right to refuse to sit if its sessions were behind closed doors this year.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said his group supported formation of the committee but believed it should have open sessions unless the security of Canada were at stake. John Blackmore, New Democracy leader, said his group also favored the committee but believed a large percentage of its meetings should be open.

To Assist Treasury.

Mr. King said the committee's purpose was to assist the treasury in effecting economies in war expenditures; but the Progressive Conservative Party was unwilling to assist in securing such economies.

Mr. Graydon interjected that "the Prime Minister is not going to put words in my mouth again."

Mr. King said he was "amazed" at the Progressive Conservative position. The Opposition Party would have to assume responsibility for its action.

The rights of members were not taken away by appointing the committee. They were, in fact, given additional opportunity to inquire into war expenditures.

When a committee began a public investigation the public got the idea something was wrong. Munitions concerns should not be put before the public as institutions doing something contrary to the public interest. Public investigations would lead to sensational headlines which the people would be reading instead of paying attention to the war, effort.

"In Times That Are Very Grave Indeed."

"We are in times that are very grave indeed, much graver than honorable members have yet begun to realize, and we are heading rapidly into a situation which will be the most desperate this world has known," Mr. King said.

"I say, therefore, that for any body of gentlemen to refuse to assist the government in every way they possibly can in this war effort, in effecting economies, or to ask the government to take a step which will confuse the public mind and divert it from the winning of the war, into an effort to win elections and make political capital..."

Here Mr. Graydon jumped up amid protest from government members and applause from his own group.

"I rise to a question of privilege and I want the Prime Minister to sit down," said Mr. Graydon.

Mr. King said he would not sit down at Mr. Graydon's request.

"At the request of the speaker," said Mr. Graydon and Mr. King replied: "Certainly; and so far as the speaker is concerned I am quite prepared to follow the rules of this House. But I am not going ..."

Mr. Graydon interrupted to insist we had the floor. Both party leaders stood silent for a moment amid an uproar.

Mr. King then glanced at Speaker Glen and then took his seat. Mr. Graydon also sat down, and then rose when Speaker Glen asked him if he wished to raise a question of privilege.

"The Prime Minister has made a very serious charge against me and against this group which I at the moment lead, and that is, that instead of confining our efforts to winning the war we now are bending our efforts towards the winning of the election" said Mr. Graydon.

He said the Prime Minister should withdraw the statement.

Not a Charge.

Speaker Glen said he did not consider the statement of the Prime Minister a charge against the opposition leader. The statement was "an expression which is very common across thek floor of the House and I do not think a question of privilege arises out of it."

The motion setting up the 1944 committee was approved, without recorded vote.

The House will not sit today since members will be engaged in committee work only. The usual sittings will be held on Thursday.

R. H. McGregor (P.C.-York East), one of 25 members who spoke in yesterday's debate, said government speakers had claimed that a saving of $300,000 for each cargo ship built in Canada had been achieved due to the work of the expenditures committee, while the fact was that the contract price was about $575,000 higher than it should have been. The difference between the high and low prices on cargo vessels built for the government was $624,000.

The situation in private shipbuilding yards was good, but "bad" in those operated by the government, he said.

Munitions Minister Howe said the lowest-cost shipyard was government-owned and operated — United Shipyards at Montreal. Shipyards with long-established facilities were expected do well in price, compared with those which had to develop facilities and use untrained men. Costs in the Toronto shipyard were higher than those at Port Arthur, Collingwood or Kingston in Ontario but the costs showed improvement.

The minister said yards which did not do as well on price as some others could not be closed since their production was needed.

Within the last three weeks there had been urgent cables for help in delivering 4,700-ton ships to Great Britain, needed for "operations" within the next three or four months.

Conditions in the yards had improved recently and the expenditures committee could make another inspection and note these improvements, Mr. Howe said.

HURON MEMBERS TO MOVE ADDRESS OF THRONE SPEECH

Legislature Will Get Down to Business Following Outline of Program

JOLLIFFE CRITICAL

Toronto, Feb. 23 — (CP) — Ontario's legislators will get down to business today in the first session of the province's 21st legislature with the Throne Speech, outlining the Progressive Conservative government widespread legislative program, the first item of business before them.

Dr. Hobbs Taylor (Port Huron) will move the address in reply to the speech which was read at the opening sitting of the assembly yesterday by Lieutenant-Governor Albert Mathews. It proposes legislation dealing with post-war planning, education and labor matters as well as forestry, mining and agricultural development.

John L. McDonald (PC — Stormont) will second the address in reply after which it is expected the House may hear the first full-dress debate of the session between premier Drew and the new C.C.F. opposition leader, E. B. Jolliffe.

The first tiff between them came yesterday when Mr. Jolliffe made his opening utterances in the Ontario House, rising to speak to the Premier's motion for the appointment of W. J. Stewart (PC Toronto Parkdale) as speaker. He was critical of advance announcement of the choice of speaker but concurred in the choice of Mr. Stewart.

Quoted Arthur Meighen

He quoted former Conservative Prime Minister Arthur Meighen as once making a similar protest in the Dominion House, to which Premier Drew replied he was pleased to see the opposition leader already quoting a former Conservative leader.

Premier Drew explained and was supported by ex-premier H. C. Nixon, Liberal leader, who seconded the appointment motion, that the procedure followed precedent long-established here. Practice in the British parliament left the appointment motion to private members because the speaker there was chosen for life. He expressed the hope that Mr. Jolliffe would again find occasion to quote the former Conservative Prime Minister, and said he was sure the new speaker would benefit from the opposition leader's instruction.

Nixon Supports Drew

Mr. Nixon told the House that "a great deal of work to be done in preparation for the House session," falls to the speaker who, in his 25 years' experience in the House, always had been chosen in advance.

The incident quickly passed, but it may have set the tone for the coming session where Premier Drew's government commands only 35 votes in the 90 member House. The C.C.F. strength is 34 and there are 15 Liberals, two Labor Progressive and an Independent Liberal—former Premier Mitchell Hepburn, who missed yesterday's opening.

Perhaps the biggest point forecast in the Throne Speech was legislation to establish a 48-hour work week in Ontario and assuring one week's annual holiday with pay to commercial and industrial employees. The speech, covering other things, also proposed to offer religious education in the public and secondary schools of the province, and to raise minimum salaries of teachers."

ACCUSED DENIES CHARGE

Toronto, Feb. 23 — (CP) — Edward J. Logan, 67, charged with the murder of Mrs. Ann Donovan last Sept. 29, denied the charge in criminal assize court yesterday and said he couldn't remember what happened after seven o'clock the night of the 29th. Witnesses Monday testified Mrs. Donovan was heard in her room at eight o'clock calling out "Get an ambulance." She died of a knife wound in the abdomen.

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDESTS IN 1943

Picton, Feb. 23 — Among the members of the crew of the corvette Hepatica is Officers' Steward Eugene Way, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Way. He has been a member of the R.C.N.V.R. since March 1942. The Hepatica was the corvette which fought 20 foot seas and snow squalls to lay alongside a blazing tanker in the Atlantic and rescue the crew. As well, most of the 7,600-ton cargo of fuel oil and a deck load of planes were saved when they extinguished the fire.

Wounded in Italy.

Mr. Robert Hill has received official notification that his son, Pte. Ross Hill has been wounded in action. Perhaps the finest home in Prince Edward County, "The Willows", on the Bay of Quinte shore, just east of the town, has been sold by Mrs. Walter S. Fraser. The purchaser is Mrs. L. E. Saunders of Belleville. The purchase price was not revealed. This patatial residence was build under the most modern specifications by the late Mr. Fraser who had retired from business in New York to spend the rest of his life in Picton, his native town. He lived only a short time after the home was ready. It has since been occupied during the summers by Mrs. Fraser. The house is reputed to have cost $100,000 to build and is beautifully equipped. Mrs. Saunders takes possession April 1st. Mrs. Fraser is expected to arrive here from Hollywood, California, the first of March to dispose of the furnishings.

Returns to Canada.

After five months overseas Pilot Officer Leslie Rawlins has returned to Canada. After a short leave with his mother, Mrs. Henry Rawlins, he reports for duty at Rockcliffe. He spent some time on the Isle of Man before going to England. The trip overseas was made on a palatial liner but he returned on a smaller ship formerly used in southern waters and reports it was unusually rough.

PO. Rawlins is one of four members of this family in the services. His father, Henry Rawlins is a Chief Petty Officer in the R.C.N. V.R. at Halifax and formerly of the Royal Navy; his sister Eileen is a Corporal in the C.W.A.C at Kingston and a brother Arthur is an AC2 at Initial Training School, Belleville.

Wounded.

Mrs. Thomas Creighton has received a letter from her son, Pte. Robert Creighton, advising that he received a gunshot wound in the knee and was in hospital in Africa. The wound was the result of an accident. A revolver which was being cleaned by a companion unexpectedly discharged and he received the discharge. He had been overseas since 1939. His father, O.S.M. Creighton is stationed at Kingston.

Sheriff's officers started a search for 16-year-old David Warrichait, a son, after they were told by a surviving daughter, Arlene, 13, that he had taken a .22-calibre rifle late yesterday and informed her he was going into the fields to hunt. He did not return.

Duck Banded At Wellington Shot in Venezuala

Picton, Ont., (Special). Feb. 23.—Birds banded at Dayton Murphy's game sanctuary at Wellington, have been shot in many parts of the continent as well as beyond. A blue-winged teal which Mr. Murphy had banded in 1939 had been killed at Marcarbo, Venezuela, a card informed him. From this banding, a hobby with Mr. Murphy, many interesting facts concerning migration have been learned.

Motorists!

Apply NOW for your New Gasoline Licenses and Ration Coupon Books

On March 31, the present gasoline licenses and ration coupon books will expire. After that date no gasoline will be sold except on the presentation of a 1944-45 ration book. Applications for new gasoline licenses and ration coupon books should be made without delay.

Commencing April 1, under the 1944-45 rationing plan, the operation of which will be basically the same as that now in effect, all non-commercial vehicle owners will again be allowed a basic "AA" gasoline license and ration coupon book, containing 40 units for a passenger car, or 16 for a motorcycle.

Similarly, owners of vehicles eligible for a "Special" category, who can prove their need, will be granted an extra vocational allowance, fixed in advance for the year ending March 31, 1945. In determining the extra allowance — which will be measured to individual needs — the previous category and mileage of the car will not necessarily be an important consideration.

The extra vocational coupons will again be issued in books labelled "Special", and each book will contain not more than 60 units. To permit constant review of the needs of each category applicant, only one "Special" book, or portion thereof, will be issued at a time. The Oil Controller also has the right to refuse any application for a "Special" category, or to suspend any ration coupon book for an infraction of the regulations. The shortage of gasoline is still acute. Do not apply for a "Special" category unless your need is urgent.

On and after April 1, service station attendants will not accept gasoline ration coupons unless the license plate number of the motor vehicle for which they were issued is written in ink on each coupon. Every motor vehicle must also display on its windshield a 1944-45 sticker indicating the category of the coupon book submitted at the time of the purchase.

If the owner of a motor vehicle sells, transfers or disposes of it in any way, it is his obligation to see that the gasoline license and ration coupon book for that vehicle is returned immediately to the nearest Regional Oil Control Office.

PROCEDURE TO BE FOLLOWED BY APPLICANTS

For Category "AA" or "Motorcycle" Category

1 Secure Category "AA" application form at nearest Post Office.
2 Obtain 1944 motor vehicle permit and/or license plates.
3 Submit properly completed application form, together with motor vehicle permit and registration fee of $1, to an issuer of motor vehicle licenses.
4 From the issuer you will receive your Category "AA" or "Motorcycle" ration book, and the return of your motor vehicle permit stamped to show that a ration book has been issued.
5 Affix "AA" sticker to car windshield.
6 Write in ink on each coupon the license plate number of the motor vehicle.

For "Special" Category

1 Secure application form for both Category "AA" and "Special" category from nearest Post Office.
2 Obtain Category "AA" ration book and affix "AA" sticker to windshield.
3 After it is properly and accurately completed, mail special category application form to the nearest Regional Oil Control Office, along with motor vehicle permit.
4 If you are granted a special category, turn to the first page of "Special" ration book, where the number of units you will be allowed for the year ending March 31, 1945, will be noted. On the basis of this allowance, plan your next year's driving.
5 Affix "Special" category sticker to windshield.
6 Write in ink on each coupon the license plate number of the motor vehicle.

(Only registered owners of passenger-type motor vehicles—other than commercial motorcycles, buses, taxicabs, and drive-yourself cars—who must of necessity use their cars in essential business, are eligible to apply for a "Special" category).

GUARD YOUR RATION BOOK

When you receive your 1944-45 gasoline ration book, guard it carefully. Do not leave it in your car. If, because of your negligence, it is lost or stolen, it may not be replaced.

One of His Greatest Speeches

With his usual comprehensiveness and sense of balance in weighing the course of the war, Prime Minister Churchill on Tuesday again uttered words of confidence and prediction as to the might which the Allies will hurl at Germany and to ultimate Allied victory.

"Absolutely united" he claimed to be the stand of Britain, Russia and the United States on everything pertaining to the course of the war. Hitler has been making every effort to cause a rift between the great Allies but without hope. Russia, United States and Britain have testified to the union of attitude of these Powers.

Any German hope that the war will not be carried to a victorious conclusion, satisfactory to all the Allies, is worthless and in vain. Mr. Churchill went farther in his report and said that the members of the United Nations not only were equally resolved to pursue the war at whatever cost to a victorious end but also to carry on their friendship into the post-war period where they see a wide field of co-operation open.

The air raids which attack Germany will mount far beyond anything as yet "employed or indeed imagined," he said and the Allied air powers will strike Germany as a prelude to the great invasion by the English-speaking powers of Britain and the United States.

The British Prime Minister acted with his usual carefulness of utterance as to the duration of the war. He has always made that clear and he reiterated this on Tuesday when he said "I have never taken the view that the end of the war in Europe is at hand or that Hitler is about to collapse and I have certainly given no guarantee or even held out any expectation that the year 1944 will see the end of the European war nor have I given any guarantee the other way." This statement together with his expression of confidence of victory should inspire all people to that complete absorption in the resolution to push the war effort to the utmost.

What may be linked with the above statement will be his warning that the Germans are preparing on the French shore new means of attack on Britain by pilotless planes or rockets or both.

Mr. Churchill touched on a viewpoint of the present campaign in Italy, saying that as Hitler has decided to make a large secondary front in Italy this will not be unwelcome to the Allied Powers as it provides an opportunity of engaging the Germans in battle.

His tribute to Russian determination to reassure herself against the possibility of future attacks by Germany which has twice in a generation attacked Russia was associated with his statement that Britain will go all the way with Russia in this regard to see that she gets this reassurance not only by the might of Russian arms but by the approval and assent of the United Nations. On the Polish question he said, "I have intense sympathy for the Poles but I also have sympathy with the Russian standpoint. I cannot feel that Russia's demand for reassurance about her western frontier goes beyond the limits of what is reasonable or just." He hinted that a new statement may soon be issued and that Foreign Secretary Eden is working with the Poles on a working agreement pending a post-war boundary settlement.

In warning to Germany he said that "unconditional surrender does not mean the Germans will be enslaved or destroyed but that the Allies will not be bound by any pact or obligation. The victors he declared will have a free hand but that "does not mean that they are entitled to behave in a barbarous manner nor that they wish to blot out Germany from among the nations of Europe."

Mr. Churchill brought the assurance of the Allied leaders on the Roman front that their plan would succeed.

Along with the success of the war against Germany, the Prime Minister pointed to the successes against Japan whose air power is overmatched and whose production is incomparably small as compared with the Allied output.

The British leader saw "a strange, stern justice in the long swing of events in the air war against the two Axis powers for the enemy trusted in air power "as their main tool of conquest" and that has been turned against them both.

He sums up the review in these words, that stir inspiration:

"The task is heavy, the toil is long and the trail will be severe.

"Let us all try to do our best, to do our duty.

"Victory may not be so far away and certainly will not be denied us."

U. S. Navy in 1945

Over thirty billion dollars is the program for 1945 for the United States Navy. This is the evidence of the determination of Uncle Sam to smash forever the evil menace of Nipponese aggression. The figures should stagger Japan after the losses she has sustained in shipping, in her fleet and to her air force and the occupied islands in the Pacific. Here it is, broken down, eight billions for new ships, four billions for aircraft, three and a half billions for the naval aeronautic bureau, two billions to arm merchant ships, numbering 5,000, fifty millions for drydocks, nearly seven billions for naval pay and allowances.

If ever a nation is in for a whipping and lashing it is Japan.

Democracy is wide awake and is showing the world of the Axis that democracy can fight and fight better than the Axis lands who are slaves of militarism, and can carry on to the greatest victory of all time.

Feed Lack Cuts Out Fur

Feed shortages due to the war are blamed for a large decrease in fur-bearing animals in Sweden and Norway, it is revealed in Stockholm. Before the war started Sweden had 5,010 fur farms, employing 6,000 persons. This force is reported to have been cut one-half, with current operations carried on mainly in connection with agriculture. Official figures show that last year Sweden had 26,000 blue fox, 64,000 silver fox and 56,000 mink on fur farms. In 1939 the silver fox numbered 150,000, blue fox 44,000, and mink 107,000. Norway which before the war was the world's largest producer of silver fox, is estimated to have contributed not more than 60,000 skins in 1943.

Single Track Speed

(Cleveland Plain Dealer)

What railroads are doing by means of central traffic control on single track lines can be no better shown than by the experience of a mid-continent road which is operating 400 miles under that system. It says freight trains on that stretch are beating their old schedules by three hours and that when another 100 miles is added the total cut in time for the total haul will be from seven to ten hours. The cost of the control system will be about $2,500,000. To double track the line would have cost about $37,500,000.

A train despatcher sits in an office and operates the whole works, including throwing switches and changink signal lights. The train crew, instead of running on written orders, merely observe the signals. The model of the road, which is before the despatcher's eyes, continually shows him the position of every train and condition of every switch. An interlocking device practically rules out mistakes.

Saying It With Music

(Montreal Herald)

A German newspaper reports that phonograph music is being played in German retail stores to relieve the nervous tension that afflicts both customers and salespeople as a result of the empty shelves.

"Old Mother Hubbard" might be an appropriate theme song.

To "Hamburg"

(J. M. S. in Letter to the Spectator)

Sir:—I submit respectfully that Mr. F. D. Merralls's suggestion that we speak of "coventrating" instead of "hamburging" will not quite do. "To coventrate" is to devastate 5 percent of a centre of war production. "To hamburg" is to devastate very nearly 75 percent.

Wonder is involuntary praise.—Young.

ASH WEDNESDAY

Ashes upon the head
As sorrow for our sins.
Now let our prayers be said
As Lent again begins.

Ashes! A custom old
By which remorse was signed
By members of the fold
For sins of every kind.

So in this troubled year,
With God and right assailed,
May our remorse appear
If we, somehow, have failed.

If we the hand have stayed,
Or followed a paltry bent,
Or faltered or delayed,
Let us today repent!

To have conquered the wilderness—to have put a log cabin in the face of tremendous difficulties—was enough to make the backwoods settler feel like dancing a "victory polka". It usually cost more than he could afford to employ a workman from the nearest town to instal glass in his windows. Therefore before he had finally triumphed in his task of home-building, he had to learn to be a glazier of sorts. In the stores he could buy boxes of glass cut in different sizes. With his carpenter's tools. . . . .and care and cuswords. . . .he could fit the panes into the home-made window frames, and at long last shut out the draughts that had made his family shiver by night and by day.

The Montreal Gazette of 1847 recorded the fact that a glass factory was in operation in Vaudreuil, Quebec, in that year. It is probable that other Canadian mills were also engaged then in the production of the hard, vitreous, brittle article that is called glass.

During the 19th century great improvements were made in the clearness, tenacity and strength of glass. By analysis it was learned that metallic oxides should be used to produce different colours—knowledge that previously had been kept secret or was unknown. Investigation brought forward the types of glass having the best effects on the growth of plants; the best coloured lights for desired purposes; many other new kinds of glass for different uses. . . As for this poser "Who were the first glass blowers?" —"It's a question to stump the experts. Every age has handed down to us from many countries specimens of glassware that compare favorably in beauty and finish with any that can be made today.

SOME THOUGHTS ON CIVIC MATTERS

The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,

May I have a little space to call attention to some things that appear to me to need prompt attention.

We have a Post-War Planning Committee from which I resigned as chairman last fall, because we had already made a number of recommendations, and I figured that there, our usefulness ended for the time being. I also told them we had no guarantee if we went further, that the City Council would back up our efforts. The Committee however thought differently and (without me of course) proceeded regarding plans for Sewage Disposal and the Council—as I expected—turned them down.

Now this war will end some day and we will need to turn to something else for employment. This may happen at any moment and without notice, and I think the Council will be guilty of gross negligence if they have not got through all the preliminaries, plans, specifications etc., for some sort of necessary work.

Sewage Disposal is a pressing necessity and I can see no reason why this work should not be got under way, to call for tenders at any moment when the war, or the European part of it at least, is finished.

Flood Control is another matter that should have had attention years ago. There seems to be some fogginess on the subject and the Council does not seem to know that when I was Mayor and Judge Cameron was our M.P., a great deal of work was done on this project. At the time there was talk of the Province and Dominion contributing handsomely to all schemes for creating employment (1938) but Messrs. Hepburn and King were at loggerheads and on that account the scheme fell through. However, the Chief Engineer of the Dominion Government had gone into the matter thoroughly, had recommended a dam at the sharp turn in Canniffton Road, about 2-300 yards north of the Railway Bridge (narrowest point) to cost about $30,000 at that time. This would make an 18' head of water that would also cover the same area formerly flooded by the Lazier Dam, and would not flood any other property. Ice to be held there and water allowed to spill out. This sounds like common sense to me, and would prevent very destructive recurring floods—so he said and he ought to know better than the arm chair engineers who think otherwise. Why not get on with the preliminaries?

One more point about our Public Utilities. Some months ago a committee of five went to Toronto to see about getting our own Hydro profits turned over to Council in reduction of taxation. They came back and reported that "this is against the law". I thought everybody in Ontario knew that 20 years ago. What we want is, to have the law changed and several others besides, and we are going to insist that it be done. Who pays for Hydro's bad or uncollectable accounts? The Property Owner, not the tenant. Who pays the colossal loss on the gas utility? The same fellow. I understand that in addition to $13,000 a year for debentures, we are now saddled with a further operating loss over the past few years of $10,000. How long will our jelly-fish property owners stand for this sort of treatment? If the gas is needed by the Army or the Navy, let Department of National Defence pay for it. Otherwise let us scrap the whole business now and forever more. The pure unadulterated steal has been going on for fifty years, and there can be no prosperity in Canada until all this sort of monkey business ceases, and we have an awful lot of it.

Yours very truly,
JAMIESON BONE.

A Virus Infection With Symptoms Similar to Appendicitis

Fifty young men were sent to a military station hospital to undergo operation for appendicitis. The attack occurred suddenly while at work, playing football, sitting in a classroom, or taking a walk while off duty. The pain was "knifelike" causing many of them to double up. "This pain awakened them out of a sound sleep and on one occasion struck a medical officer as he was reaching for his alarm clock". This medical officer had had his appendix removed and when all these cases arrived he was of help in finding the real cause of the pain. The fact that in addition to the pain in the appendix region, there was also nausea and vomiting, also pointed strongly to appendicitis.

A striking feature of this pain was that it was always worse at night. This was true of every patient as a number were able to remain on duty several days because the pain became severe and grew worse through the night. It was after an uncomfortable night that they reported to hospital. This fact and also the fact that the face was flushed presenting a brick red appearance immediately aroused suspicion that there was a disturbance of the roots of the nerves in the appendix region.

In the Journal of the American Medical Association, Captain Winfield L. Butch and Lieutenant Colonel James C. Harberson, Medical Corps, Army of the United States, relate the above facts regarding these fifty cases of suspected appendicitis. Other symptoms present were drowsiness, and pinkish red throat (no throat symptoms).

Certain definite characteristics of the pain enabled the physicians to diagnose it as nerve root pain, not appendicitis. Thus, pain was brought on by coughing or deep breathing; bending of the neck without causing abdominal muscles to tighten caused the pain in appendix region in about half the cases; sitting up, keeping knees straight brought on the pain. These characteristics and getting worse a night showed nerve root disturbance.

The fact that the number of white corpuscles (the disease fighters) was not increased was also a definite sign that pain was not due to acute appendicitis. These fifty cases with symtoms of appendicitis—pain in appendix region, nausea and vomiting, suddenness of attack—show how easily it can be mistaken for appendicitis.

The War Today— Unity of Big Three Powers Outstanding Point in Address

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Prime Minister Churchill's unadorned war review before the House of Commons yesterday was another of his masterful speeches and one which must increase Allied confidence in the state of the global conflict.

Without encouraging over-confidence—indeed with warning of hard days to come—the Prime Minister's summary clearly showed that the Allies are on the road to victory both in Europe and in the Orient. However, he displayed his usual astuteness in refusing to predict when the European war will end. He couldn't guarantee it would be this year, or yet that it would extend into next year, but (just a fillip of cheer) it "may not be so far away."

"Absolutely United."

Of far greater importance than the date of war's end was his assurance that the big three—Britain, Russia and the United States—still are "absolutely united." This was the outstanding point in his speech.

Unity among these dominant powers is vital not only to the winning of the war but to peace. A rupture in the partnership likely would mean a third great war.

Mr. Churchill's insistence that Britain is intensely interested in maintaining Poland's independence is a statement which applies equally to the United States.

I take that to mean that while the western Allies recognize that unity among the big three is essential to peace, yet this doesn't involve the abject surrender of high principles by any one of the trio, we stand erect.

Mr. Churchill was answering the fear expressed by some that Russia intends to take over not only the Polish territory she occupied in 1939 but perhaps other Polish territory as well. He asserted his conviction that repeated Moscow declarations for a strong, independent Poland "represent the settled policy of the Soviet Union."

The Prime Minister confirmed that he and Premier Stalin had agreed at Teheran "upon the need for Poland to obtain compensation at the expense of Germany both in the north and west." This means that the Allies have contemplated giving a reconstituted Poland the German province of East Prussia and some territory adjacent to Poland on the west. So at least much dismemberment of the Reich is under consideration.

EXPERTS AGREE

Each year a new military class brings 600,000 to 800,000 teen-aged recruits into the army. Allied officers say these youths are fanatical fighters.

There is no scarcity of arms, although production has been heavily cut. The Germans have been able to draw upon reserves which are adequate, but now are dwindling seriously.

The German army has lost little of its mobility. Recently there has been evidence that an entire infantry division was moved from southern France to the Italian front in less than a week, which is an excellent record bespeaking organization and adequate transport.

No Shortage of Tanks

There is some shortage of tanks, but defensive warfare in which the Germans now are engaged uses fewer tanks. They have created no new armored divisions, but instead have converted many to armored grenadier divisions, which use about 250 tanks instead of 400 and have increased defensive fire power.

The German defensive works along the invasion coast probably make it one of the most formidable military obstacles ever conceived.

3. Air Strength: In contrast to the army, the air force has been striking less and less vigorously, and some believe the crack in the Germany military front — which developed in the navy in the last war — may come in the air force this time.

German air losses have been enormous and their fliers have shown no consistent ability to deal with the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. night bombers or the day bombing of the U.S. air forces. By concentrating on fighter production, however, the Germans have maintained their front line defensive strength at a fairly high level.

Still Has Kick Left

Increasing German night attacks upon England and Allied night losses, which recently reached a new high of 79 on a single night, indicate that the German air force still has a tremendous kick left.

4. Seapower: German seapower hsa been so weakened it is not expected to be a serious factor in an invasion of western Europe and except for submarines may not even put in an appearance.

The principal sea problem facing the Allies is that of making amphibious landings with warship and air support against strong shore defences.

In general: The Germans are expected to have land superiority when the fighting begins. Weakness in the air, with Allied seapower versus the German land defences, constitute the unknown factors.

214,350 TONS ALUMINUM SHIPPED TO U. S.

Washington, Feb. 23 — (CP) — Canadian aluminum sent to the United States in 1943 amounted to 428,700,000 pounds, the War Production Board reports. This compared to 262,800,000 pounds shipped to the United States in 1942. Owing to a transmission error, the 1942 figure was given erroneously Monday as 262,800 pounds.

VOICE OF THE TURTLE

John Van Druten's "The Voice of the Turtle" is one of the most popular comedy hits playing on Broadway at the present time.

Some people seem to be under the impression that the phrase, "the voice of the turtle," refers to the sound made by the reptile called a turtle.

The phrase is from the Bible. In the King James Version "turtle" always refers to a bird and never to a reptile. Generally it occurs in conjunction with "dove," but in three instances "dove" is omitted.

The Song of Solomon 2:11-13 says in part:

"For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land; the fig tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grapes give a good smell.

Incidentally, that is one of the most beautiful descriptions of spring in the Holy Land in all literature.

Numbers 6:10 says: "And on the eighth day he shall bring two turtles, or two young pigeons, to the priest, to the door of the tabernacle of the congregation."

Jeremiah 8:7 says: "Yea, the stork in heaven knoweth her appointed times; and the turtle and the crane and the swallow observe the time of their coming; but my people know not the judgment of the Lord."

In all these instances the context shows clearly that "turtle" means "turtledove."

In fact, "turtle" was not generally applied to reptiles until after the King James Version was made. Throughout Shakespeare "turtle" means a dove, and that is the meaning of the term in the poem entitled "The Phoenix and the Turtle," generally attributed to Shakespeare, who did most of his writing before the King James Version was published.

Etymologists derive "turtle" from Latin "turtur," which means turtle-dove and which possibly was of imitative origin.

The word was not applied to the tortoise until the 16th or 17th century.

It is supposed that in the latter sense the word is a corruption of French "tortue" or Spanish "tortuga," signifying tortoise.

The Oxford dictionary supposes that British sailors originated the usage by assimilating the foreign word to the common "turtle."

"The voice of the turtle" in the Bible and in the title of the play is the cooing of the turtledove, not the metallic croaking of the tortoise.

SOCIAL SECURITY SCHEME PROPOSED IN SOUTH AFRICA

Old Age and Invalidity Pensions Envisaged in Proposal Calling for Annual Expenditure of $438,000,000

Cape, Town, Feb. 23. (CP)— A social security scheme involving an annual expenditure of £98,000,000 ($438,000,000) has been tabled in the Union of South Africa house of assembly.

The scheme provides for Europeans, natives and other racial groups. Old age and invalidity pensions are envisaged as well as unemployment training, sickness and maternity allowances to mothers, widows' benefits, funeral grants, dependents' allowances and family allowances.

The social and economic planning council which commends the scheme points out that the cost of all government services, central as well as provincial, is estimated to reach a grand total of £160,000,000 (715,000,000) by 1955.

Hon. J. H. Hofmeyr, minister of finance, in introducing additional estimates intimated there is reasonable certainty the present financial year will not end with a deficit in spite of the fact £3,800,000 ($17,000,000) more is being spent than was estimated and receipts from goldmining are down.

The finance minister stated that £100,000,000 ($447,000,000) — half from revenue and half from loans— is no longer enough and more money will be asked for in the second estimates. The budget will be introduced in March. The first instalment of South Africa's contribution to UNRAA is £25,000 ($112,000).

Shipping Commission Report.

The interim report of the shipping commission appointed in 1941 emphasizes that the expansion of South Africa's merchant fleet will mean heavy financial loss without compensating benefit to the country. It recommended that the existing three ships be replaced after the war by modern motorships of 9,000 and 10,000 tons to operate as far as possible of liner runs in the Indian Ocean and other eastern waters and that a fourth be added to trade with West African ports south of Dakar if privately owned shipping is lacking.

Since the war began South African ports have handled 38,000 ships with a gross tonnage of 163,000,000 to which the country supplied 5,000,000 tons coal and £20,000,000 ($89,000,000) worth of food. Forty large convoys from Britain carrying 2,000,000 men were provisioned apart from 40 convoys travelling from the Union to the war fronts. Not a single transport ship was lost in South African waters and 6,500 were repaired in Union ports.

ASSEMBLY

Various Talents Displayed.

Once again, two members of our school gave of their ability and time to present engaging entertainment for the students in the assembly.

This week the first to appear was Fay Campbell who gave a delightful reading telling of the escapades of a young girl at her big sister's wedding. The story was smoothly delivered and had a good reception from the students.

The next participant was Stanley Hagerman who gave a masterful rendition of Paderewski's Minuet in G. Stan's technique was very forceful and as any fine performer will, he immediately won the hearts of his listeners. As an encore, he played "This is the Army," and the school joined in singing on the second chorus.

Ingenious Announcements.

The creative mind of the younger generation was demonstrated at our meeting last Wednesday, as two very original announcements were made.

The first occurred when Mr. J. (Fearless) Watson suddenly appeared suspended from the upper section of the stage on a precariously unstationary stool. He proceeded to ask the students to attend the Dramatic Society Tea Dance which was being held that evening after school. At first, Jim seemed to be swept off his feet; as anyone could see he didn't have a leg to stand on, but with Mr. Turner's help he managed to keep control of the situation, and before the admiring eyes of the students he rose to great heights of oration. In fact it might be said that James is quite a rising character in the school.

No sooner had the listeners recovered from this meteor-like appearance, than two of the female members of our school, concealed in the rooms adjoining the assembly hall, proceeded to take the air as "Station B.C.I.V.S." and announce the coming of a basketball game on Friday in the Girls' gym on which the Senior Girls played Albert College. (The brand of basketball played by these girls commanded the attention of a large crowd at their last home game and did so again.)

Tea Dance.

On Wednesday the Girls' gym was once again the scene of another successful Tea Dance, sponsored this time by the Dramatic Club Society. The students' enthusiasm for these dances has been shown in our earlier Tea Dances, and Wednesday was no exception as the gym was crowded with B.C.I.V.S. students and also a number from Albert and St. Mikes. The students seemed to enjoy themselves immensely and when 6 p.m. rolled around, they left the gym hoping that the next dance would not be far off.

Sports.

On Thursday night at seven-thirty p.m. the Jr. Boys' basketball team played hosts to the Stirling boys' team, and after a hard-fought and cleanly contested game emerged as victors, the score being 18-11. This was the first game the Stirling team had played and after they have participated in a few more games, they will be tough for any team to beat. They play a strong close-checking type of game, one that is hard for a smoother team to cope with. Our boys experienced an "off night" and under the circumstances considered themselves fortunate to win at all as they were playing well below their usual standard. Vince Massey looked best for the Jrs. with six points, Rollins and "Sliver" Cameron also turning in a strong game. Our Juniors are easily the class of the league and if they continue practising, should experience little difficulty in capturing Bay of Quinte honors for this year.

On Monday, Feb. 14, the Boys' Senior Basketbal team opened the Senior C.O.S.S.A. League on Albert College floor, and were edged to 25-21 by a fine Albert team. It was one of the best games seen in local basketball circles for some time, both teams playing a relentless close-checking game which resulted in a great number of personal fouls being called. The Albert College team set up a zone defence which the Collegiate boys found hard to penetrate. "Abe" Mason gladdened the hearts of the few faithful Belleville rooters by scoring a basket in the early second of the game. Albert retaliated but B.C.I. kept their lead and ended the first quarter 5-4. However, from then on Albert took the lead and were never headed from then till the final whistle. The Albert team play a very fine brand of basketball. Gord Bankier was high scorer for the Collegiate with ten points, while Mason had six, and Wood and Boyce each got two points, with Garrow sinking a foul shot for a single point. For Albert, McLeod was outstanding with ten points, Watson and Fulford each making six points.

The first game of C.O.S.S.A. was played between Albert College and B.C.I.V.S. Sr. Girls on the Collegiate home floor. Scoring for the Collegiate team was very high; although the Albert girls played a fast and well played game, they were unable to chalk up the points.

Passing was exceptionally well done, better than in any preceding game. The highest scorer of the game was Margaret Taylor although every forward on the Collegiate team scored. The game ended with score 21-3 for the Collegiate girls.

Cuff Notes.

The school was well represented in the activities which took place this weekend. In the Quinte Skating Carnival, Barbara Bews, Margaret Williams, Joyce Cooper, Wallace Muir, Kaye Martin played leading parts and represented the student body in fine style. Mr. D. Bews of our staff, and president of the Skating Club, portrayed the King in "Ole King Cole's Court."

The quartet performed at the "Y" for an assemblage of airmen. They did their first numbers without make up and wound up the program as four heart-broken negroes bewailing the fact that "Nobody knew the Trouble they had," Sylvester Cavanagh was so overcome by this heart-rending ballad that he found it necessary to wring his sodden handkerchief spraying a bucketful of tears in all directions.

Bill Davies, a former student of B.C.I. is joining the Navy the end of this week. Bill was our leading artist and poster painter while he studied here. Sunday afternoon, Barbara Bews opened her home honoring Bill and her guests; all were of one opinion that they had "one swell time." Louis "Ed" Bradshaw, a Navy man now was home during part of this last week.

Social Notes.

10C was to have a form party of the sleigh-riding variety on Friday night Feb. 4 to which they were going to invite 10B. Undaunted by the lack of snow and therefore the non-appearance of the sleigh they just changed a few minor details and had a scavenger hunt instead. Mr. McGuire officiating as chief cook formed a very efficient assembly line with the "show." It must have been a wonderful form party because they are still talking about it.

9C had a form party on Friday night Feb. 2. First of all they went to the show and then "rolled" merrily along accompanied by the sound of their own singing to the home of Isobel Armitage. There they continued having a wonderful time dancing and playing games. One of the highlights of the party was a cake. It was not an ordinary cake because it had the letters "9C" inscribed on it. It was their first form party and it was really a super-duper affair.

P.S. 50c (fifty cents) was left over which they donated to the Blanket Fund.

9A had a form party on Friday night Feb. 4. Having gathered at the home of Mary Lou Wishart, they had a good time dancing in spite of the sudden illness which forced their hostess to be absent.

The five eleventh grades united to have a dance in the Conservative Club rooms on Friday night Feb. 4. A little bit of spice was added to the dance in the person of Jim Ransom. Jim was attired in a bright shirt and a yellow tie with various colored spots. Going out into the wide world has changed Jim since the days in 10A 1942-1943. Margaret Taylor and Don Freeman were the winners of the spot dance and Mary Lou Pigden and Douglas Coleman were the winners of the elimination dance. Quite a number of straw seemed to wander (?) into people's hair.

10E, D and F joined forces to produce what evidently must have been a lovely skating party. The Spot Dance resulted in Mr. Reid and Barbara Maxwell "toting" around huge suckers. Dolores McAnich and Bruce Burns, the winners of the élemination dance, joined their ranks with two huge suckers. Judging from the "cat swallowed a canary" look on the participants faces, it was a lovely form party.

Khaki Closeups

By DOUGLAS AMARON

(C.P. War Correspondent.)

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, Feb. 23.—(CP)—Khaki closeups:

A British army tradition which dates back to the days of Queen Victoria is responsible for five flourishing black beards in the pioneer platoon of the Royal Canadian regiment.

The tradition that one N.C.O. and four other pioneers be allowed to wear beards died out before the last war, though some regiments still observe it, and was revived in the Canadian Army by the R.C.R.s' a few days after the battalion came into Italy.

The battalion colonel, now a brigadier, ordained that beards be grown and offered a prize to the pioneer with the best-looking growth at the end of the first month. The prize, a bottle of champagne, went to Pte. Tom Blanchette of Windsor, Ontario.

"I think mine was better", said Sgt. Tom Gray, London, Ont., but I was more or less out of the running because I was the sergeant".

Gray and Blanchette are still wearing the beards with which they started five months ago. The other pioneers, Pte. Lawrence Gibbons, London, Ont., Pte. C. H. Bowman, Hamilton, Ont., and Pte. J. G. Gilgardner, Kitchener, Ont., have, for one reason or another, had to shave them off since then, though their new growths are quite luxuriant.

Pioneers are the night hawks of the battalion. They clear mines and booby traps, repair roads, prepare some defences and do other similar "sapper" jobs, most of them under cover of darkness. . .

Puttee Patter.

Entertainment, once a sore point among soldiers of the Eighth Army is now being brought as close to the front lines as military authorities will permit. ENSA shows have been given in San Vita and Lanciano, both still within range of German guns.

Tommy Trinder and Leslie Henson, two of Britain's top line entertainers, have given shows in the Canadian area, while the regular touring ENSA parties stay as long as two weeks at a time, giving two shows daily to capacity audiences.

Strange reaction to this entertainment came from Pte. Louis, Canadian of Pine Falls, Man. Shells, mortars and bombs have not affected his morale, he said, but ENSA shows "bust it wide open".

"It's the music that gets me", said Louis, member of a scout platoon. "It makes me homesick, and that's bad".

LONDON LETTER

By MARGARET ECKER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 23. (CP)—It hasn't been hammered into the ground by block-busters — the England most Canadians dream about seeing one day, the England of Jane Austen-ish, Bronte-esque, Dickensian things.

It's still there, in spite of bomb craters, defence emplacements and teeming, rough-and-tumble soldiers from every Allied country.

Between four and five, there's still tea before the fire, with the curtains drawn against the winter greyness, in the 14th-Century rectory at Perivale. There's still roast beef and Yorkshire pudding to be had at the Whyte Hart at Bletchingly.

You can still have your pint of bitter with bread and cheese at one of the Cheshire Cheese's elbow-worn tables in London, much as Oliver Goldsmith did.

Long-haired boys, and bespectacled girls in slacks still sprawl on the floor in Chelsea garrets and argue about Epstein, Robert Helpmann's "Hamlet" and Karl Marx.

Stripe-trousered men, carnation in buttonhole, still raise their hats as their city-bound bus passes the cenotaph in Whitehall.

These are the things that warm Canadian hearts toward England, in spite of the pinpricks.

There's a big noisy dine-and-dance place outside the gate at Perivale, but once under the oaken arch, the path is much as it was when the first priest built the little grey stone church around 1380.

There's a gap in the hedge and you see the rectory, little and low, of grey stone, plaster and oak beams so old they seem to be petrified.

"These are some of the newer graves", said the rector, pointing to lichen-covered slabs through which you could see the date, "1740". The church is tiny and dim and smells of the aged.

The rector's son has been missing since Dunkirk, but you don't talk much of war here—the chat clings to gentle things.

The past has a different face at the Hind's Head at Bray or the White Hart at Bletchingly. The Hind's Head stands in the shadow of the church of the turncoat vicar of Bray who adjusted his politics three centuries ago to those of his King. Consequently he always ate well, drank well and remained the vicar of Bray.

His spirit lives at the White Hart. There's always a blazing fire in the oak-beamed pub where the Duke of Windsor, when he was Prince of Wales, often stopped in on his way through Maidenhead. There are still good wines to be had with the well-cooked game dinner, and liqueur for your coffee.

This is the England of a gentler, more mellow age, you think, until an army convoy of tanks and transports roars by on road to war.

Revival of Native Arts Recommended

London, Feb. 23., (CP) — Mass education campaigns among Africans, including the use of the movies and radio, and the revival of native arts and industries are recommended in a report by a sub-committee of the Colonial Advisory Committee on Education in the Colonies.

The problems are of grave urgency, says the committee, if the "explosive temper" caused by changing native outlook is to be wisely controlled. Among proposals for improving local crafts and artistic developments the committee includes the introduction of more mechanical devices and modern ballroom dancing and games.

The committee urges co-ordination of the work of all educational, social, commercial and industrial agencies of British African dependencies in a mass drive against illiteracy.

THE ORDER OF ST. JOHN

SERVING HUMANITY Since 1099 A.D.

The Venerable Order of St. John is the oldest Order of Chivalry in the world. In 1099 A.D. members restored the old hospital of St. John in Jerusalem and provided a body of men, called the Brothers of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, to attend the sick. Later, the Order became a fighting Brotherhood and consisted of Knights to defend the Hospital and the sick, as well as Brothers to nurse them.

Always the Order lived up to its motto—"Pro Utilitate Hominum"—for the service of mankind. Today the Order of St. John, which controls the St. John Ambulance Association and Brigade, still serves humanity. Through the Association it teaches the science of First Aid and Home Nursing; through the Brigade its members put this instruction to practical use rendering a First Aid and Nursing Service throughout Canada and the British Empire.

Wartime has brought about a wide expansion of the Order's activities. But when peace comes this great work will go on, as it has for nearly a thousand years, for the Order of St. John is dedicated to serving humanity.

For further information, get in touch with your local St. John Ambulance Association Branch or Brigade Division; or write Commandery Headquarters, 321 Chapel St., Ottawa, Ontario.

Victory Recipes Tested, Approved By Dominion Experimental Kitchen

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief, Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture

Simple, practical recipes—easy in the making and good in the eating—every woman who has to meet the ever present three-meals-a-day problem welcomes new ones.

Here are several such recipes from the testing kitchens of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

First an Oven Stew, an all-in-one main dish to be popped into the oven and forgotten until dinner time, while you go about your other work. For supper, how about a Potato Cheese Souffle served with Vegetable Slaw? A jellied salad is a handy thing to have in the icebox at the weekend, to be brought out for Sunday supper. And a new cake recipe that is as delicious as it is different, and requires no icing, will quickly become a family favourite.

Oven Stew

2 slices bacon or salt pork
1¼ lb. beef-chuck, cut in one and a half inch squares
*1 large onion, finely chopped
2 tablespoons dripping
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups tomato juice or water
1¼ teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
*6 medium onions
6 medium carrots
6 medium potatoes.

Brown salt pork and beef, then remove to a casserole. Saute onion in dripping, stir in flour, add tomato juice or water and seasonings and simmer for 3 minutes. Pour over the meat in casserole. Arrange vegetables on top of meat, sprinkle lightly with salt, cover and bake at 375 degrees F for one and a half hours. Six servings.

*Fewer onions may be used, or they may be omitted if not available.

Potato Cheese Souffle

2 cups mashed potatoes
1 cup grated cheese
2 eggs, separated
2 tablespoons melted fat
1-3 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon mustard

Mix grated cheese thoroughly with potato. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon coloured and combine with milk, melted fat and seasonings. Add to the potato mixture and beat smooth. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a well-greased baking dish, set in a pan of hot water and oven-poach in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F, until set, about 40 minutes. Six servings.

Jellied Beet and Celery Salad

1½ tablespoons gelatine
¼ cup cold water
1½ cups boiling water
1-3 cup cold vinegar (mild)
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1 cup diced beets
½ cup diced celery

Soak gelatine in cold water. Add boiling water. Stir until gelatine is dissolved. Add vinegar, salt and sugar. Chill until partially set. Add beets and celery. Pour into individual moulds. Chill. Unmould on lettuce leaves. Six to eight servings.

Vegetable Slaw

1 cup coarsely grated cabbage
1 cup grated celery
2 cups grated raw beets
¼ cup French Dressing
1½ teaspoons horseradish

Combine all vegetables. Add the horseradish to the French Dressing and combine with the other ingredients. Six servings.

Quick Whole Wheat Coffee Cake

1 cup whole wheat flour
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour or
1 cup and 2 tablespoons sifted pastry flour
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
3 tablespoons sugar
1-3 cup mild-flavoured fat
1 egg
¾ cup milk

Mix dry ingredients thoroughly in a large bowl. Cut in fat until mixture resembles fine oatmeal. Beat egg, combine with milk and add to dry ingredients, mixing quickly and lightly. Spread batter in a greased eight-inch square cake pan and sprinkle with Cinnamon Topping (below). Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees F, for 35 minutes.

Cinnamon Topping

¼ cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1½ tablespoons mild-flavoured fat

Cut fat into other ingredients until mixture is crumbly. Use as directed above.

The Marry-Go-Round

Marry The Boy!

I expect that Margery Wilson and I are the only two writing women who have dared to express approval of these wartime marriages.

Of course I do not refer to those silly, mushroom romances which spring up in a day, and wither as quickly. They are as dangerous in peacetimes as in wartimes, if not quite so prevalent.

But if you know that it's real love between you, I say "Marry the boy!" Every woman has her right to love! And that memory and possibly a child of his will make your life worth living—if he does not come back.

The other day I read of a woman who had been engaged to a man for fifteen years. Then she gave up hope and married another man, much to the chagrin and fury of her vacillating lover. WAS he surprsied! And sore!

Sometimes I wonder why and how so many sensible girls become entangled in these soul-deadening, "now you've got me and now you haven't" affairs, which keep them hovering on the edge of uncertainty, and end in a blind alley, or more often, in the man suddenly finding and marrying a younger woman. Why should any girl cheat herself that way?

For love is the most important thing in life to a woman, bar nothing—not even her career. But love, like homeopathy, has a primary and a secondary effect.

Just at first, falling in love, like a facial massage, completely transforms and transfigures a girl. But after awhile—say a few years—the emotion is apt to leave her looking haggard and wan, if the engagement is strung out.

Yet many a brave and conscientious young serviceman will not marry the girl he loves because he does not think that it will be fair to subject her to all the hazards he will have to face; or because he may have to start life all over again. But any girl who loves him would far rather take the chances with him, whatever they may be.

Marriage is to an engagement what a certified check is to a promissory note. A husband is a sure thing—somebody to think about tenderly and prepare a home for hopefully. He doesn't wear out a girl's nerves, keep her on the ragged edge and spoil her beauty sleep as a sweetheart or a fiance does, either in peace or war-times.

A husband, when he's home, may want to absorb his wife's thoughts and TRY to establish a dictatorship over her life and amusements—but only a sweetheart really succeeds. There is nothing like a long-drawn-out-love-affair to rob a girl of all her hope, pep, color and personality. She is obliterated—sunk!

Yes, love does strange things to a girl. Especially, the uncertain, lingering, protracted love-affair. No engagement should last more than a year or so. Then it's time to marry or quit!

Personality Keynote of Success

A charming personality helped Alice Faye to success

By HELEN FOLLETT

CAREER GIRLS average top notch in appearance. You see them in shops and offices and some of them are ladies of fashion. You wonder how they find time for the wave set and the manicure; yet they manage. Beautifying efforts go raging on despite an unhappy world at war.

It is time to take a step still farther forward. It is well to keep in mind that business success depends to a certain extent on personality and manners. The girl who brings home the bacon is looking for advancement. Personality is the impression—favorable or otherwise— that she makes on employer and customers. It depends upon what she thinks, how she looks, what she says, what kind of a girl she is.

To be pleasing, agreeable and charming to one's fellow creatures makes life sweeter, gives a woman a sort of glow and loveliness. The sour disposition shows. It doesn't get anybody any place. It stamps unpleasant lines upon the face that no cosmetic can erase. It reacts upon other people, depressing them. It makes a woman standoffish and she loses her friends as well as her good looks.

Tranquillity Agreeable Trait.

There are clerks in stores who are indifferent, seeming to regard the customer as some sort of a curse. There are customers who are overbearing and snobbish. But there are nice saleswomen and nice customers and they go to bed at night with a clear conscience. No unpleasant memories of arguments because they manage to side step themselves.

Tranquillity shows upon their faces. You like to look at them. They have pleasing voices. They are the salt of the earth.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Self-Consciousness

What the self conscious girl does not realize is that she is just one among millions of shy individuals. She fancies she is "different". Timidity is a common curse. Many great actresses have suffered from stage fright, night after night, all their lives long.

When the distinguished guest arises to make a speech at the banquet, he may have a thumping of the heart. It may be silly, but there it is.

A letter, signed "Worried Mother", has come to this department. The writer says that her fifteen-year-old daughter hasn't any friends that if by chance she is invited to a party she stammers and stutters, doesn't know what to say, is utterly wretched, comes home and bursts into tears.

"She is as pretty as can be", writes the mother. "I buy her smart clothes and she wears them well. She gets high grades in school, reads good books, plays the piano fairly well. I can't see why she has such a poor opinion of herself; that seems to be the root of the trouble."

The child is consumed with an ever-present fear—fear of other people and their opinions. The only way to combat fear is to cultivate courage. The child must make herself approach people and mingle with them she'll never get anywhere if she doesn't. She'll be a social misfit all her life.

Shyness starts in early childhood; and it is then that something must be done about it. The wise mother will invite other children into her home, have little parties, urge her timid daughter to enter into play and games. She won't let her hang to her skirts, be always with mama. She mustn't be the kind of woman who, as Richard Hughes once expressed it, "has an uprush of maternity to the brain". It won't do to guard a child too tenderly, to plan everything for her, do everything she wishes. Don't tell her what to say when guests come; let her say it. The more she depends on mother, the more timid she will become.

Even the most self contained individuals have their moments of uncertainty—make remarks that they fancy are stupid, but that other people don't notice at all.

The teen-age girl must express feelings of friendliness and comradeship; in order to do that, she must cultivate an interest in her fellow creatures; the greater her interest in them, the less her thoughts will dwell upon herself. Mental tension must ease up, relax.

She not only underrates herself, but she overrates others, who are probably about as she is, maybe not as bright or as clever, she should hand herself a little apple sauce, cultivate a bit of health conceit and self respect. It has been done. It can be done again.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Would Rather Face Bullets Than Wife's Accusing Eyes

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I fell in love with my wife I lacked the courage to tell her I was a widower with two children. She had said she didn't like widowers, either grass or sod. Now it happens I'm making an allowance to these children of my first wife, who are living with their grandmother, and I haven't had the courage to tell my wife—we've only been married a few weeks—about this arrangement. I'd sooner face a firing squad than confess I've been lying about my past history.

J. L. C.

There's absolutely nothing to do but to come clean about your past. Tell her after she expressed an opinion about grass and sod widowers you lacked the courage to confess you were one of the outcasts. I believe she'll reinstate you in her good graces if she really loves you. But you just can't keep on procrastinating with the truth.

Soldier Wants Sweetheart to Move Nearer Camp

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years old and am employed, as my mother needs my help. I have a boy friend in the service who loves me very much and I love him. We plan to marry in the future.

My boy friend is in camp about forty miles away and wants me to move nearer to him so we can see each other oftener but I don't want to move away from home. Do you think it advisable to do as he says?

R. N.

Your decision not to move away from home seems sensible to me. Forty miles, in these days of buses and trains, is not like being a continent apart. And to pull up stakes, to be a little nearer to a soldier boy than forty miles, seems ill-advised, when soldiers are being constantly moved all over the country and overseas.

Dreads the Influence of the Returning Soldier Boy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 21 years of age, and the girl I love is 20. I've been going with her for two years, off and on and now that I'd like to go 'steady," she won't give me an answer.

I heard that a friend, with whom she had never gone out, is coming home on a furlough and she promised to go out with him. She asked me whether she should do so or not. I told her that as I'm not married to her I had nothing to say about it, but felt if she loves me as much as she claims she does, she won't keep that date. It may mean the end of our affair if she keeps the date, and I love her too much for that to happen. What shall I do?

J. L. M.

You say you're not married to the girl and have no right to interfere with her plans. Neither are you engaged, which leads me to wonder if perhaps this young lady might not be using the soldier as a club to bring about a more definite understanding. Going "steady" these days does not imply a definite engagement. It's a "reserved seat in the parlor," as a girl wrote me the other day.

Conservation Clips

Powder puffs last longer than you think, if you wash them! Swish through good lukewarm suds, rinse carefully and when dry use a soft brush to raise the nap. Keeps puffs always fresh and dainty too.

Kitchen Policing

Saboteurs in your kitchen? Never—not if you watch:

—the paring knife, peel vegetables only when necessary and peel thinly.
—soaking water, prepare vegetables just before mealtime.
—long slow cooking; put vegetables on to cook in a small amount of boiling water, cook quickly.
—air, cover vegetables when cooking.
—overcooking, vitamins can't be kept waiting, cook vegetables only until tender.
—throwing out vegetable water; save it for sauces and soups.

Fresh While They Last

Hard to keep dried raisins, apples and figs? Leave them in paper bags and you'll find mould, weevils or they'll be hard as rocks. Easy to keep them fresh in glass jars, lids screwed on tightly. Good for crystallized peel, glace cherries or prunes, too.

A Step in Time

Saves a hundred steps a week, or maybe more, if you never leave one room for another without first looking around to see if there is something that should be taken with you.

Disappearing Dust

Dust will settle in the most exasperating places, book tops, baseboard crevises, wood carving, bric-a-brac. An ordinary two-inch paint brush is just the ticket for whisking it away.

Fashion Flashes

WHY NOT look pretty while doing household tasks? A lovely little house dress is of wash percale a large rose print on pale beige. Large practical pockets edged with eyelet embroidery ruffle as is the deep U neckline.

Just wonderful for Spring wear is a soft shirtwaist frock in brown or navy paper thin taffeta with a narrow pencil stripe in white. Neckline ties in a big self bow. Tiny white pearl buttons down front and on cuff tabs.

In Sunny climes, the brightly hued cotton suit is getting a big play. A delightful suit cut on smart lines with softly-shirred skirt and jacket with lumberjack sleeves, is of red, white and green checked and plaided cotton. Worn with sheer white cotton blouse with deep round neckline. Grand for town come summer.

Good refreshment for the suit is a generous supply of gilets. Red and white and blue gingham checked taffeta is used for a nice gilet with a ruffled front and tiny self ruffles edging collar and bow.

A good choice for the smart matron is the small hat worn at a forward-tipped angle. Black novelty straw braid makes a smart hat trimmed with a large red rose and red and white hyacinths and green filiate. A white chenille dotted black veil gives a soft look.

We can't deny that the floor-length evening frock is appearing frequently of late. A graceful model is of black silk crepe with triangular insets at midriff and high rounded neckline. Inserts are of pink satin embroidered with seed pearls and tiny mother-of-pearl sequins.

Infections of the Liver

The liver may be attacked by various germs. During wartime a liver disease called epidemic hepatitis has been known to spread through camps. During the first World War, numerous epidemics of this condition were noted and the disease seems to be on the increase during this war. Severe damage to the liver may occur as a result of epidemic hepatitis and, according to Dr. N. G. Markoff, of Switzerland, disturbances of the lungs may develop following the disease.

Epidemic hepatitis seems to occur about one to six weeks after a person is exposed to it. The disorder occurs most often in the winter, between November and January. Young persons up to the age of twenty-five years are affected most frequently.

According to most of the authorities who have studied the disease, it is probably caused by a virus, that is, an organism so small that it cannot be seen under an ordinary microscope. The first part of the disease is much like grippe. There may be some sneezing and coughing without symptoms other than fever. This period of the disease may last for about three weeks. During the second period there is no fever and few other symptoms, and this period lasts only a few days. During the third period of the disorder there is again a rise in the temperature to 100 or 101 degrees, and such symptoms as pain in the abdomen, sickness to the stomach and vomiting appear. The liver enlarges and there is tenderness over the right upper part of the abdomen. As a rule jaundice, a yellowish-green discoloration of the skin, then develops due to the presence of excessive amounts of bile pigments in the blood and tissues. This jaundice may last for from two to four weeks.

In one epidemic which occurred in Greece, severe headache was a prominent symptom. In other epidemics there were severe pains and cramps in the muscles of the back and legs. An epidemic of this type was observed in Russia. It has been noted that as soon as the jaundice develops most of the other symptoms clear up. During pregnancy, epidemic hepatitis may be especially severe.

It is suggested that patients with epidemic hepatitis be separated from other persons to keep the disease from spreading. In treating the disease, injections of large amounts of a glucose or sugar solution are injected into the veins. The use of insulin—the secretion from the pancreas needed by the body to utilize sugar—also is helpful. Liver extract, vitamin K and niacin (which is part of the vitamin B complex) have also been used. Various drugs, including the sulfa drugs, have been tried in this disease but have not been found of any particular value.

Educational Revolution Possible As Result of Adult Training Plan

Ottawa, Feb. 23 — (CP) — Dr. G. M. Weir, acting director of training in the pensions department, said today before the Commons Reconstruction Committee that an educational revolution is possible after the war when the Dominion launches its greatest adult education program.

Speaking after tabling of his lengthy report based on the opinions of thousands of Canadians on rehabilitation, Dr. Weir referred to the educational opportunities being offered to members of the forces.

Businessmen's replies to questionnaires indicated they might display "over-timidity" in respect to employment possibilities, but at the same time they expected great industrial expansion in the post-war period, he said.

Despite such incongruous opinions, some of the most competent observers believed there not only would be full employment after the war but also insufficient trained workers for available jobs.

Continuous Studies of Opinions of Forces

Continuous studies of the opinions of men and women in the forces are desirable, said Dr. Weir.

John R. MacNicol (PC—Toronto Davenport) said he would like to see some "concrete evidence" that the government is planning jobs at which men can be put to work immediately after the war.

"It is re-jobbing we want, not re-training," he said.

Members of the armed forces were for the most part highly trained and many would be ready to go to work immediately on discharge.

"I hope the government will plan a large program of self-liquidating works to be paid for by the federal and provincial governments and by municipalities. These could be works that must be done; which should have been done long ago."

Pensions Minister Mackenzie said plans for such post-war projects are being drafted and "that will be one of the main jobs of the minister of reconstruction who is to be appointed by the government."

Vincent Dupuis (L—Chambly-Rouville) said education was in the exclusive jurisdiction of the provinces and their co-operation was needed. He asked what had been done in Quebec.

Dr. Weir said he conferred with Premier Adelard Godbout and received co-operation in the province. Nothing would be done under the training program to violate minority rights.

Assistance to Dentists

Dr. Weir told G. S. White (PC—Hastings-Peterboro) men desiring to be dentists after war service would get assistance in finishing a course if they made adequate progress.

Guidance

In reply to a question by Victor Quelch (ND—Acadia), Dr. Weir said the government will "assuredly attempt to guide men into the right job".

"However, we are not going to use compulsion", he said. "This is a democracy.

"We want to train men for jobs which will be available. For that reason, continuous industrial surveys should be made".

In reply to another question, Dr. Weir said qualified discharged men are entitled to university courses equal in length of time to the time spent in the forces. If a man could not complete a course in the allotted time, his case would be reviewed and probably he would be allowed to continue.

"It would be in the interest of the country and the government to graduate as many dentists and other professional men as possible", he said.

An allowance of $42.20 a month was paid to a discharged single man taking a university course. A married man was paid $62 plus dependents allowances.

Mr. Dupuis said the allowances paid for children should not be on a graduated scale.

Mr. Dupuis asked if all universities were given "equal opportunity" by the government. Recently the R.C.A.F. had needed some medical graduates and took most of them from McGill University and only one from the University of Montreal.

Dr. Weir said he was not familiar with the case, but that possibly the selection had been made on the basis of merit.

"There is no discrimination, international or otherwise. All universities are dealt with in same way and on equal footing".

Answering Mr. MacNicol, Dr. Weir said businessmen were "hesitant' to say how many men they might employ, they wanted to have information on Canadian and international post-war policies before committing themselves.

The committee then adjourned until March 14.

William A. Fraser Heads Committee Public Accounts

Ottawa, Feb. 23 (CP)—Chairmen of the Commons standing committees were named today and in each case the chairman is the same as last session. They include:

Privileges and Elections: D. F. McCuaig (L-Simcoe North).

Banking and Commerce: W. H. Moore (L-Ontario).

Public Accounts: W. A. Fraser (L-Northumberland).

Standing Orders: W. H. Golding (L-Huron-Perth).

Mines, Forests and Waters: J. R. Hurtubise (L-Nipissing).

Possibly the most important of the standing committees is Banking and Commerce. This session it will have to study revision of the Bank Act. Its Chairman, Mr. Moore, has guided the committee for several sessions.

The general meeting at which the committee chairmen were named was presided over by W. H. Taylor, chief government whip.

A motion by W. R. Macdonald (L-Brantford City) that all last session's chairmen be reappointed brought objection from M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, that such a procedure was contrary to the rules of the House. He expressed belief each standing committee should choose its own chairman, just as special committees do.

The meeting carried Mr. Macdonald's motion after several members praised the work of last year's chairmen.

Couldn't Sell Cattle And Couldn't Buy Meat Meal Tuesday

Toronto, Feb. 23 —(CP)— Agriculture Minister Kennedy told yesterday in an interview about an aged farmer from Clinton, Ont., who couldn't sell 35 of the 55 head of cattle he had brought to Toronto and also couldn't buy a steak in a restaurant because it was meatless Tuesday.

"So he came to see me," said the Minister. "I told him about the problems of marketing and the problems of shipping space. He thanked me kind of bashfully and went away. But it's certainly a strange commentary on our times. There was no market for his cattle and yet he couldn't get a meat meal."

British Fighting Continues Along Jungle Lines

Bougainville, Northern Solomons, Feb. 23 — (AP) — Brisk fighting continues along the jungle lines of Bougainville despite Allied occupation of the Green Islands, Lt.-Gen. Millard F. Harmon, commander of South Pacific ground forces, said today.

Most of the action has flared in patrol clashes beyond Allied lines, but it appears the enemy in still trying to bring sizeable forces against the Allied perimeter.

A headquarters spokesman said the sector is so strongly fortified now that nothing short of a major invasion force could threaten it.

Churchill's War Review Acclaimed By British Press

London, Feb. 23. (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill's war review in the House of Commons yesterday was acclaimed by the British Press today as an illuminating statement of British foreign policy and an encouraging reassurance of harmony in the Allied camp.

Almost without exception London editorial writers seized upon the Prime Minister's assertions yesterday, that Britain, the United States and Russia "are absolutely united in their action against the common foe" as an outstanding feature of his address.

"No part of the Prime Minister's speech was received by the House, or will be received by the country, with greater satisfaction than his firm declaration that in relations between the three major allies none of the ground made good at Moscow and Teheran has been lost", said The Times of London.

Full of Information.

The Daily Mail declared that Churchill's speech was "full of information and therefore one of the most valuable he has delivered".

"His most valuable assurance", The Mail said, "was that no political ground has been lost among the allies since the Teheran Conference This word was necessary, for the indiscretions of Pravda and the reception in some quarters here and in America of Russian constitutional reforms had led to a regrettable revival of mutual suspicions".

The News-Chronicle also declared the Prime Minister's "forthright statements on inter-allied relations, on the Soviet-Polish dispute and on internal troubles in Yugoslavia, Greece and Italy" should go far to "dispose of rumorings, whisperings and ill-founded guesses which have been poisoning the atmosphere".

The Daily Mail said Churchill's words should have special significance to the Poles and added that they "would be well advised to bring to an end forthwith their dispute with the Russians over post-war frontiers".

Called Undramatic.

The Daily Telegraph called the review "remarkably undramatic" and said the real justification for Churchill giving first place to the air offensive "is the prospect that the air defences of Germany can be knocked out owing to Allied production . . . and that German war production can then be completely paralyzed."

The Western Mail said "the most significant passage was the warning that Mr. Churchill has never taken the view that the end of war in Europe was at hand, or that Hitler was about to collapse . . ."

The Manchester Guardian, referring to Mr. Churchill's remarks on fighting in Italy, admitted there is a drain on German strength in that theatre but added: "Yet it is with a sense of frustration one sees the Allies with control of the sea and air superiority battling now on two fronts against the Germans fighting bitterly in the Italian mountains."

The Glasgow Herald also took this approach. It said: "The real cause of the holdup at Anzio remains undisclosed. It is made clear however that there was some failure between intention and execution . . . Our Italian operations have been little more rewarding than our political moves."

The Yorkshire Post noted two encouraging remarks on the Italian campaign — the holding of 18 German divisions in combat and provision of bomber bases. "It is concrete evidence that the stubborn Italian campaign is already yielding some of the important dividends which the Allies mean to gain from it."

Count Few Japanese Planes at Rabaul

Allied Headquaters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 23—(AP)—American planes pounded the Japanese base at Rabaul on New Britain with 52 tons of bombs in a raid which enemy fliers did not challenge, Allied headquarters reported today.

Reconnaissance revealed an "unusually low" number of planes on airfields and ships in the harbor of this principal enemy strongpoint in the South Pacific, a headquarters spokesman said. Fewer than 100 aircraft were counted.

The spokesman gave no explanation of this thinning of shipping and aircraft, but daily raids by Solomons-based planes and a naval bombardment of Rabaul and its harbor last Friday have made the bastion a graveyard for the enemy's air and sea craft.

An Allied communique today said ground forces have captured Gabumi village and established a bridgehead on the Mot River in northeast New Guinea. Gabumi is 11 miles northwest of Saidor.

Three of Quadruplets Born at Decatur, Die

Decatur, Ala., Feb. 23 (AP)—Two more of the quadruplets born to a paratrooper's young wife died in Benevolent Hospital today—leaving only one, a girl, alive.

The boy, Edmund Hutto, Jr., died last night, and this morning two of his sisters, Sherianne and Yvonne succumbed. Diane, one of the four born yesterday a month prematurely, still clung to life fed by eye-dropper.

Mrs. Hutto, 23, was reported in satisfactory condition. Her husband, a farm worker before becoming a private in the paratroops at Fort Benning, Ga., was dazed by announcement of the births.

The Huttos reside at Hillsboro, Ala. The quadruplets were their first children.

Lonergan Trial Adjourned Day

New York, Feb. 23 — (AP) — Opening of the trial of Wayne Lonergan, charged with the bludgeon slaying of his heiress wife, Patricia, was adjourned today until tomorrow when his counsel failed to appear in court.

When an assistant defence counsel notified the court he had received a telegram from Edward V. Broderick that he was in Toronto completing an unfinished investigation, Judge John J. Freschi announced "I think his conduct constitutes contempt of court and I shall ask him to answer for it at the conclusion of this trial."

"I have never heard the equal of this in all my experience," he said.

There were 200 special jurors already in the courtroom when Broderick's associate, William Merritt, said the chief defence counsel was in Toronto and would like postponement of the trial until Feb. 28.

The Toronto-born defendant, an R.C.A.F. aircraftsman, was not present.

Sweden Claims Russian Lettering On Bombs Dropped

Stockholm, Feb. 23 — (AP)—The Swedish Telegraph Agency said today Russian lettering was found on bomb fragments at Straengnaes, 40 miles west of Stockholm, after a small number of foreign planes dropped explosives there and on the capital last night.

Signal lights, indicating they were trying to land, also were dropped by the planes, and it was believed possible that they were damaged craft which jettisoned their explosives before attempting emergency landings.

Russian bombers raided Turku, on the west coast of Finland 150 miles from Stockholm, earlier last night.

Several of the bombs which fell in Stockholm crashed directly into a summer open air theatre, in the only extensive open area in the southern section of the city. No casualties were reported, but hundreds of windows were said to have been shattered.

A Swedish communique identified the aircraft, which came from the east, only or "foreign planes." The number of planes involved was placed at three, but private reports said there were 10.

POST-WAR PROJECTS TO BE DISCUSSED

Post-war planning projects for the immediate Bay of Quinte district will come in for discussion at a special meeting of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce directors to be held in the Belleville Club following the annual banquet being held in the Hotel Quinte this evening. Reeves of the various municipalities and villages in the Bay of Quinte district, including Prince Edward county, have been invited to the meeting by Mr. Clare B. Morgan, President of the Chamber of Commerce, and directors, and it is expected post-war planning in its many phases will be thoroughly discussed.

STATEMENT IMPORTANT

London, Feb. 23—(CP)—London's morning papers called Prime Minister Churchill's speech in the House of Commons the most important statement of British Foreign Policy since the Teheran and Moscow conferences and declared it valuable in countering recent mutual suspicious among the Allies.

Plan Conferences With Church Leaders

Officials of the Department of Education will meet soon with the Interdenominational Religious Council of which Rev. E. R. McLean is general secretary to discuss the question.

LOCAL MOTORISTS ARE PLEASED

A sigh of intense relief escaped the lips of local motorists today following the announcement from Queen's Park Tuesday afternoon that the pleasure driving motorist would again during the 1944-45 season be permitted 120 gallons of gasoline. Motorists whose categories placed them in the predominant group of motorists entitled to only the AA gasoline ration book were particularly anxious as to the amount of gasoline which would be permitted when the new ration books were issued. Rumor had it that the number of units in the AA books would be drastically reduced with the number of gallons permitted in some cases being suggested as low as 60 gallons. Special gasoline categories will also remain basically the same as for the present year, according to the announcement by the Minister.

CITIZENS REQUESTED TO CLEAN SIDEWALKS

City Engineer Charles Mott urged citizens to clean the snow off sidewalks during the present mild spell. "It is easy to remove the snow now that it is melting. The removal of snow from city sidewalks is compulsory according to city by-law and there have been several complaints regarding the neglect in this matter received at the City Hall," stated Mr. Mott as he urged the cleaning of all sidewalks today.

CAPT G. W. DENNIS DIES OF WOUNDS

25 P. C. INCREASE IN BRIDGE SUBSIDY IS ANNOUNCED

New Rate Will Apply Where Not Less Than $1,000 Spent by County or $500 by Township

Toronto, Feb. 23 (CP)—Increase of 25 per cent in the provincial subsidy for construction of bridges, payment of provincial road subsidies to municipalities twice yearly and abolition of the machinery rental arrangement with municipalities were announced today by Highways Minister Doucett of Ontario.

Addressing the Ontario Good Roads Association's 50th annual convention, Mr. Doucett said that there are 5,453 bridges in Ontario with a span greater than 10 feet which do not come up to standard and 10,226 sub-standard bridges with less than a 10-foot span.

"As of Jan. 1, 1944, we are raising this subsidy (now 50 per cent) to 75 per cent of the amount spent in rebuilding and standardizing these sub-standard structures and in construction of new bridges," he said. "The new rate of subsidy will be applicable where not less than $1,000 is spent in a given year on a given structure by a county or $500 by a township. Where lesser amounts are spent the present standard subsidy...will still apply."

To assist municipal financing, road subsidies henceforth will be paid in two instalments, March 31 and Sept. 30, instead of once a year, said the minister, adding there will be "a reasonable hold-back on the Sept. 30 payment pending final accounting."

Dealing with the machinery rentals system of subsidies, the Minister recalled that when a municipality buys power machinery for use in road and maintenance, the practice has been to place a rental charge of so much a day on the municipal books, the province paying half the amount of the yearly rental.

This system is abolished as of last Jan. 1, he continued, and in its place the highways department henceforth will pay a straight subsidy of 50 per cent of the cost of the machinery.

"The new system is simple, avoids bookkeeping and cleans up each of these machinery purchases in one transaction rather than dragging thm over the years," he said.

B.C.I. Seniors Now Leading Interscholastic Hockey Loop Over St .Mikes and Albert

"Irish" Beaten Tuesday Afternoon at Arena by 2-1 Count

ICE QUITE HEAVY

Carrying the play in the early stages to score two goals in the initial brace of periods and then settle back to protect their lead, Harold Mott's Belleville Collegiate Interscholastic pucksters rang up theoir second consecutive win in the Bay of Quinte senior Interscholastic C.O.S.S.A. group with a well earned 2-1 win over the St. Michael's Academy students at the Hume Arena yesterday afternoon. The B.C.I. seniors now head the Quinte Interscholastic puck race with two wins and no defeats as against losses for Albert College and St. Mikes.

"Zeke" Philip put the "Collegians" one up early in the initial frame after taking Billie Holway's blue line pass through for a clean register for the only counter of the initial period as B.C.I. lead 1-0, 2-0 and finally 2-1.

Billie Holway raced down the left boards as Coach Doran's defence crumbled in the second period and Holway skirted behind to set up a picture play for Doug Coleman, who made little mistake by beating Fitzpatrick from close in on what proved to be the winning goal. The Meagher brothers, Bernard and Allan teamed together to score for the "Irish" in the third period as Allan saved St. Mikes from a shutout by setting up a perfect goal for brother Bernard. Rollins, in the winners' nets, turned in a strong goal keeping effort.

Although the game was cleanly contested "Stewie" Woods, ace defenceman for B.C.I. sustained a nasty forehead laceration in the middle period and had to retire to receive medical attention leaving Coach Mott short-handed in that department. Only four minor penalties were meted out despite the slow sticky ice in the last period.

Belleville Collegiate: Goal, Rollins; defence, Woods and Holway; centre, Coleman; wings, Bishop and Lyall; subs, Philp, Barkley, McCreary and Vollick.

St. Michael's: Goal, Fitzpatrick; defence, Green and Kelleher; centre, Moher; wings, Barrett and B. Meagher; subs, Whalen and Al. Meagher.

HAWKS FAVORED TO OUST BRUINS FROM PLAYOFFS

Stumble to 8-4 Victory Over Rangers to go Two Points Up

A WACKY GAME

By The Canadian Press

Chicago Black Hawks should be 2-1 favorites today to muscle out Boston Bruins for the National Hockey League's last play-off berth.

Those odds seem fair enough, despite the shoddy display Hawks gave last night in stumbling to an 8-4 victory over New York Rangers before 10,201 Madison Square Garden fans who watched one of the wackiest games of the season.

Hawks now hold fourth place by a two-point margin over Bruins, who have only nine to play against 11 on the Chicago schedule.

Both combatants were in charitable mood last night, Chicago contributing a gift goal when Earl Seibert whisked the puck into his own cage while pawing after a flying disc. Rangers reciprocated when Goalie Ken McAuley and Bob Dill bumped at the goal mouth, stumbled and carried the puck into the net.

Only Doug Bentley's sharpshooting kept Hawks alive in the early stages. The winger fired all three Chicago goals in the first period, then added a fourth after George Allan punched two past McAuley early in the third. Mush March and Cully Dahlstrom collected the other Chicago tallies.

Al Palazzari, Dutch Hiller, Ossie Aubuchon and Dill scored for Rangers, who haven't won in 11 straight games.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS

Toronto, Feb. 23 — (CP)—This will be a jolt to those who painfully followed the hockey hall of fame controversy a year ago featuring Kingston, Halifax, and Montreal claims. Kingston won, of course, and now, is apparently suffering a twinge of conscience.

Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll reports Dr. E. J. Austin of Kingston has suggested a golf hall of fame be established, advanced Kingston's claim and then stated flatly that Montreal has prior claim. Dink figures this is Kingston's peace offering.

Austin contends Canada was 15 years ahead of United States in introducing golf. First club on the continent was evidently the Royal Montreal Golf Club founded in 1873. Then came the Quebec Golf Club in 1875, the Toronto Golf Club in 1882 and (note carefully) the Kingston Golf Club in 1886.

In Austin's book the first Untied States club was the Tuxedo in New York in 1888.

First relic for the golf museum should be some of that blue air which we have heard surrounds so many golfers immediately after making a shot.

Incidentally:

Hockey relics for the Kingston museum are being offered from many sections of the Dominion. An unusual Japanese Cloisonne vase has been donated. The vase was presented to North Battleford Beavers when they toured Japan 15 years ago . . . Claude Robinson of Vancouver, one of the founders of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, plans to send minutes of the original C.A.H.A. meeting . . . many hockey sticks have been offered — one of them formerly used by Cyclone Taylor.

Hither and Yawn:

Ken Watson's defeat in British Console semi-finals after 19 straight wins in the Winnipeg bonspiel was only his second setback in curling competition for a year. His other loss was in a Winnipeg Strathcona Club game . . . Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara urges revival of the spectacular drop kick as part of Canadian football. He suggests it either be made a four-pointer or the placement value be dropped to two points . . . compound fracture of the arm suffered in a game at Saskatoon the other night may end the career of Syd Brown, 29, who, with Sid Abel and Marcel Tremblay, formed one of amateur hockey's greatest forward lines with Flin Flon Bombers before the war. Brown had been with Bombers 8 years.

New NHL Attendance Record Likely To Be Set This Year

(By The Canadian Press)

A new National Hockey League attendance record is possible this season, according to Bill Tobin, president of the Chicago Black Hawks who currently hold the edge on Boston Bruins in their duel for the last play-off spot in the N.H.L.

The Hawks have been drawing huge crowds at home lately and Tobin said last night that the total for 19 home games is 263,606 fans. That's an average of 13,874 a game.

"If we can keep that average through our remaining six home games", Tobin announced cheerfully, "the Hawks will have drawn 350,000 spectators—a new high in hockey history. The way it looks now, the total attendance in the league will be a new record".

Another record has actually been set—a total of 518 seasonal scoring points in United States Collegiate Basketball. The record-holder is Ernie Calverley of the Rhode Island State College Rams, who popped in 45 points last night when his team walloped the University of Maine 115-37. With at least one more game to go, Calverley has an average of 27.26 points a game. He has a medical discharge from the army.

Jimmy Orlando, former Detroit Red Wings defenceman, said at Montreal last night he is "trying to enlist in the Canadian Army". He has been living with his parents in Montreal pending an appeal from a four-year sentence at Detroit for violation of the United States Selective Service Act.

The biography of a race horse is just off the press in England. It's the story of Golden Miller, who failed in his early races, failed as a hunter, was "condemned" by a veterinarian, and then developed into a king of the turf. Golden Miller was perhaps the greatest steeplechaser of all time, with one victory in the Grand National and five in the Cheltenham Gold Cup.

New Orleans, Feb. 23. —(AP)— The Fair Grounds closed its 1943-44 racing season yesterday with twin features, the Washington's birthday and the Mardi Gras Handicap. The Brandywine Stable's Fleet Ecerget came from behind under a strong ride of Jockey Arnold Kirkland to take the $3,500-added Washington's Birthday event.

The Mardi Gras, carrying $3,000-added and the sixth race on the program, went to C. U. Yaeger's Corona Corona, favorite in the betting.

What's Doing in Sport

Jersey City, N. J., Feb. 23—(AP)—Michael Bozza of Newark, who fought 20 years ago as a lightweight under the name of Mickey Donley, died last night while refereeing a welterweight fight. Both contestants rushed to aid him but a police surgeon pronounced him dead. The fight was declared a draw.

Los Angeles, Feb. 23—(CP)—Pacific Coast League Baseball directors voted last night to approve a purchase offer by Scaramento interests for the franchise in that city, ending the hopes of groups in Vancouver, B. C., and Tacoma, Wash., who had been bidding for the franchise.

Cleveland, Feb. 23—(CP)—Manager Lou Boudreau of the Cleveland Indians has been reclassified 1-A by his draft board at Harvey, Ill., and is subject to call for induction "any time," according to the Cleveland plain dealer. The newspaper also said it had learned that outfielder Jeff Heath of Fort William, Ont., had been granted 2-B classification as a war worker.

OSHAWA'S LEAD SHAVED BY WIN OF ST. MICHAEL'S

Generals Still Ahead in Their Group but Only by Two Points

FALCONS WIN

By The Canadian Press

The lead enjoyed by the mighty Oshawa Generals in Group 1 of the O. H. A. Junior "A" was shaved to two points over Toronto St. Michael's last night, while in the other group St. Catharines Falcons were widening their lead over Galt to two full games.

While Oshawa were idle, St. Michael's were beating Marlboros 6-2 in an all-Toronto game. St. Catharines defeated Port Colborne 5-4 and Brantford jumped into third place in their group with a 9-5 victory over Stratford.

In the game at Toronto St. Michaels were on the wrong end of a 2-1 first period count, but from there on they had an easy time, scoring twice in the second and three times in the third. Lindsay had two goals for St. Mike's, the others going to Schnurr, Thompson, Dunlap and Sadler. Snipers for Marlboros were Darling and Laivior.

At Port Golborne the Falcons had to come from behind, scoring the last three goals in the last seven minutes of play. McMurdy and Delmonte each had two and Phillips got the other goal for St. Catharines. Gravelle scored twice for Port Colborne, Savicky and Pitts each once.

Buddy Basso of Copper Cliff made his debut with the Brantford Lions as they chalked up their 9-5 victory over Stratford. He earned two assists. Davis had three goals and Jeffreys and Evanshen two each, with Powell and Jolly getting the other Brantford scores. For Stratford, Sellisizzi had three and Kullman and Kapusta one each.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

SENIOR CAGERS OF B.C.I. WIN OVER ALBERT

C.O.S.S.A. Series Now Stand at One Game Each in the Best of Five

SCORE IS 31-24

Belleville Collegiate senior Interscholastic hoopsters evened matters with their Albert College rivals winning 31 to 24 on the home court yesterday afternoon. The city Interscholastic C.O.S.S.A. series now stands at one game each in the best in five.

Coach "Red" Townsend's "Collegians" raced through to a 25 to 8 advantage in the initial half before Skipper Pepper called upon his junior reserves to stem the tide and lo and behold if the Albert junior reserves didn't rise to the occasion and out-score the Collegiate seniors badly in the second half. However, the advantage was too great as Coach Townsend's quintette coasted in on their laurels.

Elongated Don Mason showed the B.C.I. squad the way home in scoring with 12 points, followed by Don Boyce, who notched six, with Gord Bankier and Clark James getting four each. For Albert it was pretty much all Pisano, a junior, who scored ten points, with Fulford, another junior, getting five and McDonald four. The Collegiate defence of Garrow and Wiggins stood up strongly against the Albert seniors, but would not take advantages over the junior sharpshooters in the last stanza.

The line-ups: Albert College — Orr 2, Jessup, Watson 1, Boyd, McLeod, Pisano 10, McDonald 4, Rankin, McIntosh 2 and Fulford 5. Belleville Collegiate — Bankier 4, James 4, Mason 12, Kellett 2, Garrow, Locke 1, Wiggins 2 and Boyce 6.

Referee: Roland Pryke, Belleville.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Feb. 23 —(CP)—Hard punching Tom Settee who regained his Canadian Army Welterweight title only last week, had previously led his regiment to the team boxing championship of a Canadian Army Division.

Rfmn. Settee, husky Prince Albert, Sask., Indian who has been overseas more than three years, took the divisional welter title handily and enabled Regina Rifles to beat the North Nova Scotia Highlanders 18 points to 12.

It was Tom's second straight success of the tourney and helped condition him for the army championships at which he outpointed Cpl. E. E. Ely of Gibbons, Alta, in the welter final.

Tom won the army Welterweight crown in 1942 but lost in a qualifying bout for the championship last year when an opponent's blow sent him writhing in agony. Ringsiders had considered him a certainty for the finals.

A home-town mate of Settee, Rfmn. M. D. Kilgour took the light heavyweight division in defeating L. Cpl. R. S. Collis of Truro, N. S., while Pte. R. R. McNutt of Springhill, N. S. disposed of Rfmn. C. Beauregard of Edmonton in a middleweight bout.

Featherweight Winner

With a seven-pound pull in the weights, Rfmn. R. K. Cross of Bardner, B. C., won a featherweight go from Pte. F. Dalling of Westville, N. S., and in the welterweight competition CSM. D. Yeo of Smeaton, Sask., edged Pte. L. M. Lawson of Halifax.

Maj. Gen. J. H. Roberts, Canadian Reinforcement Units Commander who led the Canadians at Dieppe, presented awards to winners and runners-up after the C. R. U. decided their team boxing championship.

One of the best fights on the 11-bout card came in the lightweight class when L. Bdr. Billy Brass, a member of the winning team, defeated Pte. F. A. Corbett of New Waterford, N. S., over three fast rounds.

Gnr. Joe Chew, an experienced ringman from Rocky Mountain House, Alta., beat Pte. C. D. Williams of Sydney, N. S., in a middleweight slugfest while the heavyweight division went to Pte. J. J. Fahey of Glace Bay, N. S. He decisioned L. Bdr. H. Elliott of New Waterford, N. S.

In ther bouts, Gnr. J. C. Billings of St. Marys, Ont., beat Pte. D. Matheson of Glace Bay, N. S., after a fast featherweight tilt, and Cpl. K. W. Knowland of Meducto, N. B., took the referee's nod from Gnr. Bob Boulanger of Sherbrooke, Que.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

It is said that one of our local clergy was attracted by some very strong and colorful language while walking down the street recently. Investigating, he discovered a man having some difficulty slipping the rim of his spare tire on the wheel of his car. Pointing out that vitriolic language was of no assistance, he suggested prayer as a substitute.

The man scratched his head and said: "Well, I've tried everything. I might as well give that a whirl." Whereupon he bowed his head in silence for a few seconds, then raised up and slid the rim smoothly and easily on the wheel.

The parson startled out of his usual composure, let out a low whistle and exclaimed: "Well, I'll be damned!"

Hockey round-up:

Bill Dennis' Belleville juveniles meet the winner of the Bowmanville-Whitby O.J.H.A. series commencing early next week . . . with the lengthy lay-off the juveniles have had they could just as well played a five-game series with Trenton and been just as far ahead . . . Coach Dennis is trying to arrange an exhibition game with Jerry Quinn's juniors before the local Juv. squad meets up with the Bowmanville-Whitby series . . . It was a rather odd set up along the lake shore . . . Trinity College eliminated Bowmanville once, but could not play any further road games, so the Rubber Town Juvenlles bounced back into the play... Why Belleville wasn't considered in the first place, when Bowmanville and Whitby are so close, is hard to conceive . . . After taking Trenton into camp 8-2 Monday night the Combines say they'll polish off Stan Jackson's crowd tomorrow night and make it two straight whether Floyd Hamilton is playing or not . . . It does seem rather strange that Hamilton, a Havelock lad, should play against Belleville and all of a sudden desert the Trenton line-up when they are playing the Combines . . . As for the district Air Force league, the big-wigs are meeting to arrange what play-off plans necessary, however, there is some good R.C.A.F. hockey yet to be played at the Hume Arena . . . It seems the No. 1 Command R.C.A.F. hockey playdowns, or at least a portion of them, will be played at the Hume Arena. This means outside Air Force teams from Oshawa and Toronto will likely appear at the Market St. ice igloo in the near future . . . The other day Coach Padre Malka, of the Trenton "Flyers" stated he expected Johnny McCreedy, former Toronto Maple Leaf forward, to be posted to Trenton . . . So did Mountain View about a month ago . . . Aside from hockey — Don Lee, girls' basketball maestro, phoned to say the girls raised $15.00 on Monday night to be applied to the Corvette 'Belleville' fund.

(Interscholastic news.)

Yesterday was a great day for Belleville Collegiate sports especially in the senior Interscholastic series. Not only did "Red" Townsend's senior hoopsters even matters with their Albert College cage rivals, but Harold Mott's senior pucksters downed St. Michael's "Irish" 2-1 to assume a full two game lead over both Albert and St. Mikes in the city Interscholastic hockey series.

In the basketball game, that saw the Church Street "Collegians" even matters with Albert, Don Mason and a strong defence proved too much for the juniors used by Coach Pepper from Albert, while at the arena those new jackets St. Mikes received Monday night must have taken their toll, as Harold Mott's B.C.I. senior pucksters were literally all over Jack Doran's lads. When goalie Morris Rollins wasn't booting 'em out for the Collegians, the Church Street lads were thwarting the "Irish" at every turn. With Holway setting them up for Philp and Coleman the B.C.I. lads took a two goal advantage into the third period and then set up a defence that was hard to penetrate although the Meagher brothers got through once. Now the B.C.I. lead the district Interscholastic race with two wins and no defeats.

(That's telling 'em.)

When a sport writer, ups and tosses a punch at some of his home town fans that is news. Ken Pritchard of the Cobourg Sentinel-Star has done exactly that in the following paragraph::: "Cobourg's record for hospitality, a precious thing built up over years of athletic competition, has been taking a beating this year, we are informed reliably. Teams playing juvenile hockey here have gone away muttering "Dirty Old Cobourg," a most uncomplimentary comment on the way they were treated. The main reason for the low opinion outside teams have picked up about Cobourg is the huge quantities of verbal abuse and other refuse which have been showered upon visiting players, coaches and fans by the younger, less controllabdle childhren of the town. It's a sad commentary on the manners of our younger generation when referees go home from games here with their coats covered with frozen spittle, expectorated from the mouths of balcony-dwelling juvenile fans. It's no disgrace for the home-town team to lose, much as we would like to see it otherwise, and the young fans should not forget that the visitors upon whom they are hurling their abuse are fellow-Canadians, from just as good or better homes than themselves; self-respecting people are giving their best for the game. If the abusive specimens among us have to hate someone, let them turn their attention to hating Hitler, Tojo and Company."

(Remember when)

Tommy Burns of Hanover, Ont., claimed the world's heavyweight championship 38 years ago tonight when he won a 20-round decision over Melvine Hart at San Francisco. He lost the title to Jack Johnson, Dec. 25th, 1908, in Sydney, Australia, after taking a terrific lacing for 14 rounds. His real name was Noah Brusseau.

(Congratulations.)

It's a softball player at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. (Jack) McVeigh, president of the Kiwanis Club and former softball executive. Both mother and daughter are doing splendid. "I've never lost a father yet," the doctor assured Jack, after viewing a worried look.

Playoffs Arranged.

Arrangements have been completed for the playoffs in the R. C. A. F. Service Hockey Loop. On Thursday evening the Mountain View Bombers and Six-Ardees' will play a sudden death game to meet Trenton Main Station for the group title, which will be played next Monday. The winners of this group will meet the winners of the Camp Borden and Toronto area in a two-game series goals to count, one of the games to be played in this city with the winners of this series to take part in the command playoffs to be held in Toronto on March 6th. Niagara and Western Ontario will also stage a playoff series.

LESSON NO. 310

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Hopalong Cassity, full of audacity, hops to a slam at the least provocation. He and his humankind seem to expect to find all unseen aces and kings on vacation.

Sound slam bids develop simply. Partners tell each other how many tricks they hold and what they like for trump. Then they learn how many aces and kings they have. And there they are.

You are south in this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠ None
♥ A K J 8 4
♦ A J 10 8 4
♣ A 5 4
NORTH
♠ A K 10 3 2
♥ Q 7 6 2
♦ K 7 6 2
♣ None

You and your partner have exchanged bids this far:

| SOUTH | NORTH |
|---|---|
| 1 H | 2 S |
| 3 D | 3 S |
| 4 D | 4 H |

So far, partner has told you he has six tricks, two sure tricks, a rebiddable suit, and a preference for hearts. With your own seven tricks, you can see enough tricks for a slam in hearts.

In that spot, you have two options. You may pass and let the bidding end there at a game contract. Or you can go on and enter the realm of slams.

You could, of course, pop into a slam without further ado. But you might bid a small slam and not have it. Or have a grand slam and not bid it. Or bid a grand slam and have only a small.

If you are slambitious, find out how many aces and kings are held by your partner. You can always go to a slam after that. And by that time you are in a better position to judge which.

There is now a universally used signal for asking a partner how many aces and kings he holds. That signal is simply a bid of four no-trump.

That four no-trump bid is merely a code expression known as a convention. No, no, Nanette. A bridge convention is not a whoopee party.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Panama Hattie"
(Gay Musical Comedy.)

Based on the Broadway hit show, "Panama Hattie" opens next at the Capitol Theatre. Starring Ann Sothern and Red Skelton, the musical features Rags Ragland, who played in the stage production, and Ben Blue, who, with Skelton, are the three sailors.

Utilizing ideas right out of the headlines, the film has Miss Sothern and the sailors busy rounding up spies in the Canal Zone. In addition to these many antics, the story revolves around the romance of Miss Sothern with Dan Dailey, Jr.

"Wagon Tracks West"

Wild Bill Elliott is one of the most colorful of present day cowboys. He will be seen in Republic's "Wagon Tracks West" which is the added hit opening next at the Capitol and his first cowboy role in pictures was that of Wild Bill Hickok. George "Gabby" Hayes also co-stars with Elliott.

A colored cartoon and the serial "Secret Service In Darkest Africa" are also shown.

AT THE BELLE

"Whistling in Brooklyn"

Red Skelton has never been funnier than he is in "Whistling in Brooklyn" the M-G-M feature comedy now closing at the Belle Theatre. It is another of the rib-tickling comedy series. Featured with Red Skelton are Ann Rutherford, "Rags" Ragland and Jean Rogers. The Canadian Belle Movietone News, a clever Pete Smith specialty "Practical Joker" and a timely and entertaining Carey Wilson M-G-M- miniature "Brothers in Blood", precede the feature offering.

"Henry Aldrich Haunts a House"

Skeletons, mummies, gorillas and goons are due to have their day when Paramount's newest Aldrich hit, "Henry Aldrich Haunts a House", opens next at the Belle Theatre.

Involved in all the aforementioned ghostly phenomena is that dependable crew of Aldrich standbys, Jimmy Lydon, who's Henry; Charles Smith as Pal Dizzy; Vaughan Glaser, the high school principal without whom the words "ten demerits" would have faded from the English language; John Litel and Olive Blakeney as Henry's parents. Joan Mortimer, Henry's present flame, is a newcomer to the cast, and a welcome and pretty newcomer, too.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Sea Wolf"

The Sea Wolf starring Edward G. Robinson, Ida Lupino and John Garfield is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre. The film version of the world-famous novel by Jack London was produced by Warner Bros., who have given us such hits as "Santa Fe Trail", "High Sierra" and "They Drive by Night".

The Sea Wolf is considered one of the first American "realistic" novels. Published in 1903, it was an immediate best-seller, and has continued to hold its popularity with successive generations of readers, long after many later best-sellers have been forgotten. It is the powerful story of Wolf Larsen, the epitome of all the fighting, killing, roistering and vicious men of the sea fleet. The men who sailed with him on "The Ghost" seldom lived to relate their experiences. His shanghaied crews learned what it meant to be completely under the mental and physical power of the inhuman captain. Onto this hell ship come a girl and a man, rescued from the wreck of a San Francisco ferry boat. She is a fugitive from justice, he is a sensitive young author. Once aboard, they find themselves prisoners. The man is put to work as cabin boy, the girl desperately ill is indifferently cared for by the ship's drunken doctor. She wins the sympathy of one of the young sailors and they plan to be married if they can ever escape from the ship.

The young author strikes up a sort of half-friendship with Larsen, learns the captain's carefully guarded secret—that he is subject to periodic attacks of blindness. Some of the sailors make an unsuccessful attempt to kill Larsen, and after this episode, tension grows worse on "The Ghost". The girl, her sailor, the author and another of the men on the crew decide to risk everything in an attempt to escape in a lifeboat. After drifting for days, their supplies exhausted, they sight "The Ghost" again. She is sinking. The young sailor goes aboard in a desperate effort to get some supplies. He is gone so long that the others follow him. The author goes to the Captain's cabin learns that he is in one of his semi-blind states. He finds out that the sailor has been locked up in the galley, but as he attempts to leave Larsen levels a gun on him. To reveal the dramatic outcome would deprive audiences of some of the thrill of its very unexpectedness.

Moonlight in Vermont.

Lending a timely aspect to a musical comedy film, the current back-to-the-farm movement on the part of America's youth is featured in Universal's Moonlight in Vermont, which is the second feature attraction at the McCarthy Theatre. Supporting Gloria Jean and Patsy O'Connor are Marilyn Day and Bobby Scheerer and the Jivin' Jacks and Jills youthful dancing group.

LOU BOUDREAU MAY BE DRAFTED INTO U. S. ARMY

Would Become First Major League Pilot to be Inducted

HEADS INDIANS

Cleveland, Feb. 23 — (AP)—Lou Boudreau, the Cleveland Indians' 26-year-old manager, may be the first major league team pilot to be drafted in the present war.

"I'm ready to go — just like the rest of 'em," Lou said at Chicago after his reclassification to 1-A by his Harvey, Ill., draft board.

He has no idea how soon he will be called. He is youngest of big league managers and one of the outstanding infielders.

Leo Durocher, Brooklyn Dodgers' manager, was rejected in the spring, and the next youngest major league boss is Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox who will be 38 in October.

Boudreau, who has led American League shortstops in fielding since 1940, his first full season in the majors, will be 27 in July. He is married and the father of two children.

Ray Mack's decision to remain on his war job, reported three weeks ago, and the possible drafting of Boudreau would break up what sports scribes have called the greatest double play combination in the major leagues. Last year, Boudreau set an American League record for participation in double plays.

HERSHEY BEARS DOWN HORNETS

By The Canadian Press

Although Hershey Bears are firmly entrenched in first place in the Eastern division of the American Hockey League, last night's 6-3 victory over Pittsburgh Hornets left them trailing eight points behind Cleveland Barons. Providence Reds and Indianapolis Capitals battled to a 3-3 draw in the circuit's only other game.

Pat Paterson, put Bears in the lead with the lone first period goal. Ross Knipfel deadlocked the count when he scored for Hornets at the start of the second. Peggy O'Neill, Hec Pozzo and Pat Paterson gave Bears a 4-1 lead in the second and they kept the lead after that.

In the final frame Fred Hergert scored a fifth before Art Giroux and Bob Gracie made Hornets' total three. Bulldog Drummond bagged the sixth for Bears just 35 seconds before the final whistle.

Tony Demers scored two counters in the third period to give Reds their tie with Caps. It was his last game with Providence, before going to New York Rangers. Harold Cooper got their first goal in the opening period.

SABATH HORSE MAY NOT RUN

Miami, Fla., Feb. 23 — (AP) — Whether Al Sabath's Alsab will run in the $25,000 Widener at Hialeah Park March 4 apparently rested today on the report of three veterinarians who ordered him out of a prep sprint yesterday, thereby starting a controversy.

Just before the race the veterinarians contended the Sabath horse was injured but Sabath, dissenting vigorously, invited the crowd over the loud speaker to stay and watch Alsab run anyway in a public demonstration of his fitness.

As the shadows fell across the deserted stands, a few hundred people saw the horse which had won $349,870 for the Sabaths, breeze the three quarters in a flat 1:16.

New York, Feb. 23. (AP)—George Trautman, Jack Zeller and Warren Giles, the professional committee to look into high school baseball in the United States, might do worse than take a good look at the Illinois State High School tournament next Spring. . . . Its entry of 88 teams isn't big for a State the size of Illinois, but reports from Peoria, where Coach Dick Baxter originated the event, say there's plenty of enthusiasm and the committee might spread it to other States. . . In fact, one of the big attractions for the kids is the presence of major league scouts at the finals. . . .The tournament was only started in 1940, but the finals, played at Oak Park, and Cicero the last two years, draw crowds of 5,000 or more.

CHAPTER 18

"Too clever! What did your wife do?"

"She couldn't think of anything to do except buy the record. She asked for a couple of days to get the money; he agreed, and she sold some of her securities and took the money down to him Monday morning."

"What shape was it in?"

"In hundred dollar bills."

"Where did she get them?"

"At her bank—the Guaranty."

"They probably made a note of the numbers, just in case," Tony remarked. "But she evidently did not give them to McKibben — he still had the record."

"Oh, yes, she did, and after he had counted the money, he told her the price of the record had gone up to fifty thousand."

"It's a wonder she didn't kill him right there."

"I think she would have killed him," said Bradford grimly, "but she didn't. She managed to get home somehow, and there she found a note from Metcalf with the result of the blood analysis and then she had a fainting spell. Her maid was fightened and called her doctor and then phoned me at the office, and by the time I got there she had come around and the first thing she did was to tell me the whole story."

"So everything was serene again."

"Not right away," said Bradford with a wry grimace. "I was pretty sore so the first thing I did was to take a few drinks. Pretty soon I wasn't in shape to think about anything clearly and so the more I mulled over what she had told me, the wilder I got, and finally I got out my riding crop—yes, the same one I brought down here — and went around to see Metcalf. I was going to beat the hide off him, for I was sure he and McKibben were working together. I still think so."

"I don't see how it could be any other way," Tony agreed, "but I can't make it click. For example, if they were working together, why don't Metcalf hold back that blood test report till McKibben had collected his second twenty-five thousand? He must have known he was queering McKibben's game, or else there was a slip-up somewhere."

"I thought of that afterwards," Bradford said. "At the moment I was too mad—and too tight — to think of anything."

"And so you got your riding crop and rushed around to Metcalf's? What time was it?"

"It must have been about noon. There was nobody in his office but his secretary. When I asked for him, she said he had been called out of town and wouldn't be back till next day. I told her I didn't believe her and made her let me look in the inside office. I guess I blew off a bit."

"Did you mention McKibben?"

"I'm afraid I did. I probably said I was going to catch him at Max's place and celebrate midnight by giving him a hiding in front of all his friends—at least that's what I planned to do."

"Had you ever been in the office before?"

"No."

"Ever seen the secretary before?"

"No. Quite an eyeful, isn't she? Some vixen, too, when she gets started. She practically threw me out."

Tony couldn't help smiling at the picture of the slender little secretary bouncing out the massive Bradford.

"It's strange," he said, "but Metcalf didn't mention your having been there. In fact, he didn't seem to know that your wife had told you the story. Did the secretary know who you were?"

"Sure. I told her."

Tony pondered this for a moment in silence. "Maybe she didn't tell the doctor," he said at last, "though that doesn't seem reasonable, either. What did you do after she threw you out?"

"I went to the club and spent the afternoon in the bar there. Got tighter, I guess. Then I lay down and went to sleep. It was nearly eleven when I woke, and changed to dinner clothes."

"At the club?"

"Yes. I always keep some clothes there. Then I had a few more drinks and started out to find McKibben."

"Did you have a gun?"

"No, but I had my riding crop in my overcoat pocket."

"And you found him at Max's place?"

"Yes. I started after him, but a couple of waiters rushed me out before I could do anything."

"I know. I saw them. What did you do after that?"

"One of those fellows gave my arm a twist that cooled me off considerably," Bradford confessed, "and as I walked down the street, I realized that I had come mighty near making a public fool of myself. I could afford to lose twenty-five thousand, but I couldn't afford to have a fight with a bounder like Jack McKibben. Everybody would think I had caught him with my wife. Suddenly, I felt that I wanted to see Josephine, so I stopped a taxi and went home and told her I had been an idiot and she said she had been one too. So we made it all up."

"Anybody see you come in?"

"Yes, the butler."

"I hope he hasn't forgotten it," Tony remarked, "because you are going to need a good alibi when Lieut. Duffy hears about this. There is every reason why you should have gone on to McKibben's place and waited for him there, and put a bullet through him. Only I think I can show Duffy that the crime details were too complicated."

"For my killer skill?" Bradford laughed. "I agree with you."

Tony Bigelow had plenty to think about as he dressed that evening, but in the end it simmered down to a single question: How deeply was Dr. Metcalf implicated in Jack McKibben's schemes and in his death?

Would a search of Metcalf's rooms turn up anything? Say a knotted rope or a rope-ladder? Of course not! But there might be a number six Underwood, with elite type and a damaged "g" . . .

So Tony dialed Homicide Squad headquarters and asked for Duffy. But the latter was out on a case.

"I wish you'd put a note on his desk saying that Tony Bigelow is very anxious to get in touch with him."

The columnist walked two blocks to the Lafayette and had dinner there. He wanted a quiet place where somebody wouldn't come barging up to his table every minute.

In the first place, Tony must find out something more about Metcalf. Where he had come from, how long he had been in New York, what his private life was like, whether he had ever been in trouble. Herschel Schneider could probably help, but he was on his way to Washington. Or was he? Perhaps he was taking a late train . . .

Tony went out to the telephone booth and dialed Schneider's apartment. There was no response, so he went back to his table and turned his attention to the guinea venetienne, piping hot in its casserole.

Then he remembered the striking brunette, Metcalf's secretary. No doubt she could tell him much if he could get her to talk. Also, it would be pleasant to see her again. But of course she wouldn't talk—unless she had some sort of grudge against Metcalf. Most unlikely, but it was a chance. All he knew was that her name was Miss Scott. Perhaps the house superintendent would know where she lived.

There was one thing he could do that evening and that was to secure some information about Metcalf's professional standing. So, as soon as he had finished dinner, he stopped in to see an old friend, Dr. Herman Lazarus, who had been consultant at Bellevue for many years. The doctor listened attentively while Tony described Metcalf's dictograph device.

"I'm an old fogey, I suppose," said Lazarus, when the columnist had finished, "but I don't believe in playing tricks on my patients. However, these young fellows have a different set of ethics, and I can see where a dictograph record might occasionally be useful. Just the same, I don't believe that many reputable psychiatrists use it."

"Do you consider Metcalf a reputable one?"

"Yes, I suppose so," Lazarus answered slowly. "I know that he is considered very clever. I have heard him criticized because his methods are pretty unorthodox sometimes, but that may have been due to professional jealousy. So far as I know he has never been in trouble of any sort."

That was all that Lazarus could tell him—or, at least, cared to tell him—so Tony thanked him, took a cab and an hour later, from "21," phoned Homicide Squad headquarters, but Duffy had not yet come in.

"I haven't heard a word from him," said the desk sergeant. "He must be on a hot trail somewhere."

"I'll be at Max's place for the next hour," said Tony. "Have Duffy call me there."

The columnist got a taxi and went on to Max's, but it was after eleven o'clock when the call came.

"I just called H.Q.," said Duffy, "and they said something was eating you."

"Eating my very vitals. When can I see you?"

"I had to come over to Night Court. Can you meet me here?"

"Right away," said Tony, and ten minutes later his taxi drew up in front of the dreary court building. Duffy was waiting for him in the clerk's private office. Tony noticed that he looked tired.

"Been on another case?" he asked.

"Yes—murder with femme angle," and the detective told the story briefly. "Thank heaven, it'll take the newspapers' attention off the McKibben case!" he added.

"I think you're going to get a break in the McKibben case," said Tony and outlined his interviews with Metcalf and with Bradford. "It looks very much as though Metcalf and McKibben were in the blackmail racket together."

"But I don't see why the doctor should kill McKibben," Duffy objected.

"My guess is that McKibben was trying to double-cross him," said Tony. "Remember, McKibben was in a desperate plight, right at the door of the penitentiary. He got twenty-five grand from Mrs. Bradford on Monday and suddenly decided to try for another twenty-five. Metcalf knew nothing about this, so he sent the blood-test report on to Mrs. Bradford, and that night, perhaps, went down to McKibben's place to get his share of the spoils. They had a quarrel and he shot McKibben and took all of it. The money was in hundred dollar bills and you'll recall that none of it was found on McKibben."

Duffy was silent for a moment.

"I think you're wrong," he said at last. "McKibben probably used the money to ease up some of his debts. My guess is that the doctor didn't get any of it."

"Either way you like, there's a motive for murder."

"It's not good enough, Tony. Anyway, it will be easy enough to find out tomorrow if McKibben used the money. If he didn't, we'd better wait till Metcalf tries to pass some of it."

"But suppose the bank didn't take the numbers of the bills?" Tony objected.

"Of course it did—banks always do that—and if Metcalf tried to use some of that money we'd have some real evidence against him. As it is, all we have is just a lot of surmise."

"I have a hunch we would turn up something if we searched his place."

"I can't do that just on a hunch," Duffy pointed out.

"We could go around and quiz Metcalf," Tony persisted. "You can press him harder than I could, and he can't slip away from you, as he did with me. I want to make him explain how McKibben got that record. I want to make him tell who he thinks murdered McKibben. I want him to point out what the clue was that young Terry gave me."

"You want to go tonight?" Duffy asked and glanced at his watch. "It's after eleven o'clock."

"I know, but I think we ought to try it."

"All right," Duffy agreed. "We'll go right away."

It was about 11.30 when they stepped out of the police car in front of the apartment house. The doorman greeted them.

"Do you know whether Dr. Metcalf is in?" Duffy asked.

"I haven't seen him go out," the doorman answered. "Shall I ring up and ask?"

"No, don't bother. We'll go up," and he and Tony went on to the elevator. "Take us to the eighth floor," he added to the boy. "He isn't likely to be in his office at this hour, so we'll go right on up to his living quarters."

Duffy rang at the door of apartment 810 repeatedly. Finally the door was opened by a good-looking young Jap, who had hastily pulled his trousers on over his pajamas.

"We want to see Dr. Metcalf," said Duffy.

"So sorry, sir," answered the Jap with a polite smile, "Dr. Metcalf not here."

"Where is he?"

"I not know, sir. So sorry," and he started to shut the door.

"Wait a minute," commanded Duffy, and put his foot in the door and showed his badge. "Open the door. We'll come in and wait for him."

The boy reluctantly opened the door, closed it after them, switched on the lights, and led the way into what was evidently the library. It was beautifully furnished, and Tony's respect for Metcalf went up several pegs as he glanced around at the books with which the room was lined. A pile of afternoon papers lay on the floor beside an easy chair which Duffy at once dropped into.

"Now, then," he said to the boy, who was looking at him sullenly, "what's your name?"

"Noguchi Kato. Doctor call me Joe."

"You sleep here?"

"Yes, sir."

"Was Dr. Metcalf here tonight?"

"Yes, sir. He have dinner here."

"What time was that?"

"Eight o'clock, sir."

"He was alone?"

"Yes, sir."

"Go ahead," said Duffy, impatiently. "What did he do after dinner? Tell me everything that happened."

Kiwanis Club Told of Canada's Opportunities

"Canada is facing her greatest problems and at the same time has her greatest opportunities", said Marshall Close, of Toronto, on Tuesday in speaking to the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club at the Quinte Hotel. There was a large attendance of the members out with President Jack McVeigh in the chair, Bob Pringle as sergeant-at-arms, and Harold Carruthers as song leader, Leo B. Riggs presiding at the piano. A short business session was held with Doug Marshall asking for volunteers to assist in the Red Cross drive starting next week and Herb Reed telling the members to keep in mind April 11, and 12, when the club will stage a carnival at the armouries. President Jack congratulated "Ollie" Duff on being elected to the Associated Trade Board as a director and the students, who took part in the musical festival in Toronto and carried of some of the honors. Cliff Baragar reported on the meeting in Cobourg, where Jack Trudeau was the principal speaker.

Mr. Close was introduced by Doug Marshall and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Eddie Shapiro. The speaker was a veteran in the last war and travelled extensively in Europe after the conflict and since that time and from his remarks he has not lost his faith in Canada, he stating it was one of the best countries in the world. He believed this war to be a social and economic revolution and how far it goes depends on us. Mr. Close stated we had much to be thankful for in Canada because our country had escaped physical destruction and certainly the horrors of a world conflict. "Sure we have a certain amount of rationing but nothing to compare with those in the countries that have been ravaged by war", said the speaker. "We have freedom of speech and freedom of religion and we certainly owe the Christ a debt never to be repaid because He has been on our side".

Much to be Proud of

The speaker stated that Canada had much to be proud of because the country is highly regarded outside its own boundaries. He stated we should forget about the black market and loose gas coupons and live according to the laws because these laws have been made for our benefit. He stated Canada had oversubscribed all her loans and other drives and in the matter of a war record stood second to no country. "At the beginning of the war we had 15 ships and 600 men in the Canadian Navy and today there are 600 ships and 74,000, in the army. There are 450,000 men and in the R.C.A.F. 200,000 the cream of the youth of this great Dominion but with all these I take my hat off to the men of the merchant marine, who slug it out with the Atlantic ocean to carry the stuff to kill them, that want to kill us", said the speaker. "Besides all this we have 37,000 women in the armed forces all doing a wonderful job. We are the third trading nation of the world and we should be proud of our ancestry because the British Empire nursed us but never coerced us."

Mr. Close thought that Canada was a too modest country and more of our accomplishments should be told. He expressed the belief that democracy can be made to work and that our greatest asset was youth and to youth must be thrown the challenge. The speaker believed there were no delinquent youths but there were delinquent parents and he advised all the fathers present to pay more attenion to their offspring and give them more of their time and teach them about Canada.

MOHAWK RESERVE

Memorial Service In Christ Church For Pte. R. Loft

Mohawk Reserve — A large congregation attended the memorial service in Christ Church Sunday afternoon for the late Pte. Russell Loft, a former resident of the Reserve, who over a year ago joined the United States Army, and who was killed in action in Italy. Russell had many friends here, and much sympathy is extended to his relatives, especially to his young wife who resides in Willis, Mich. The service was attended by the Canadian Legion, Deseronto branch, the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Legion, and the Kan-yen-geh League. Mauve and white flowers were on the altar, and the Legion sent a beautiful spray of daffodils and tulips. A large surpliced choir led in the singing of the hymns, "O God Our Help in Ages Past," "On the Resurrection Morning," "O Valiant Hearts," and "God Save the King." Russell attended public school on the Reserve and high school in Deseronto and was employed in Kingston before he went to the United States.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 23 —(CP)— Moderate declines were boarded by all four groups in the early session and trading was quiet around midday. Volume was off to 306,000 shares for the first three hours.

Steep Rock, up 8 cents to 2.20, was the only strong issue in the Base Metal group. Smelters, Nickel and Waite-Amulet weakened moderately.

The soft tone in the Gold group affected Wright-Hargreaves, Preston, Sladen, Astoria, Powell-Rouyn and Quemont. Canadian Brewers, Distillers-Seagrams, Loblaw A, Bell Telephone and Ford A were moderately weak issues in the Industrial section and in the Western Oils prices were down narrowly for British-Dominion, Mid-Continent and Okalta.

WALL STREET

New York, Feb. 23 (AP)—Aircrafts and rails again moved forward in today's stock market as the general run of industrial leaders drifted within a narrow range. Volume was moderate.

War shares, apart from the aircrafts and carriers, showed little response to Prime Minister Churchill's cautious handling of the question as to how much longer the war would last, but his general appraisal of the situation in his report to the House of Commons made a good impression in the financial sector.

Stocks in better territory included Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Atlantic Coast Line, Douglas, Consolidated, Vultee, Boeing, United Aircraft, Goodyear, Cerro De Pasco and Phelps Dodge. Lone Star Cement fell about 4 points on a dividend reduction.

Canadian stocks were quiet with Canadian Pacific unchanged and Hiram Walker up a fraction.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Feb. 23. (CP) — One Toronto purse-snatcher has developed a new technique. It contained $1 in cash, her registration certificate and a wedding ring set with three diamonds.

Fruit Production In Ontario in '43 At $11,018,100

Toronto, Feb. 23 (CP)—Production of apples, raspberries and strawberries in Ontario during 1943 showed increases over the previous year, while grapes and all tender tree fruits decreased, it was revealed in statistics issued by the Department of Agriculture.

Higher prices received by growers for all fruit crops tended to compensate for the lower volume, however, with total value of 1943 fruit production set at $11,018,100, or 12.3 per cent more than in 1942.

Ontario's apple crop last year was estimated at 790,500 barrels, compared with 616,950 barrels in 1942, with production up in both the eastern and western sections of the province.

Total 1943 production of raspberries was 4,997,800 quarts, against 4,375,000 quarts in 1942. The strawberry crop aggregate 5,972,400 quarts, compared with 5,447,000 the previous year, while the output of canteloupes increased by 53,340 bushels to 195,700.

The report noted large reductions in yield for all tender tree fruits and grapes; bulk of which are grown in the Niagara peninsula, with the peach crop downed by 75 per cent.

For most vegetable crops production was slightly smaller than in 1942, but prices received were considerably better.

Airmen Rescued Uninjured From Isolated Island

Point Traverse, Feb. 23 (Special)—Two R.A.F. airmen, Sgt.-Pilot Spiken and L.A.C. Walton, attached to No. 31 Bombing and Gunnery School at Picton were rescued uninjured from the isolated and uninhabited False Duck Islands three miles of Point Traverse mainland Tuesday afternoon by local fishermen and R.A.F. officials following the crashing of their Lysander aircraft.

Fuel shortage is said to have been responsible for the accident, the plane having been on duty over No. 3 bombing range when it crashed. The men were rescued by two small row boats manned by eight men who made the hazardous three-mile crossing over ice and caked waters to give aid to the marooned men. Upon arrival at the island the airmen were found uninjured. They had taken shelter from a blinding snow storm in the lighthouse tender's residence which is vacant during the winter months. Work of salvaging the damaged plane would not be feasible at the present time, it was claimed.

False Duck Island lies some 15 air miles southeast of Picton in Lake Ontario, Prince Edward County.

U.S. BOMBERS POUND FACTORIES IN GERMANY

Offensive Against Aircraft Plants Now in 5th Day

Ballbearing Works At Schweinfurt and Fighter Works in Gotha Hit

LONDON ATTACKED

London, Feb. 24 (AP)—American heavy bombers battered aircraft factories at Gotha and the ballbearing works at Schweinfurt today in their fifth consecutive day of smashing at the very roots of German air power, deep in the Reich.

The four-engined craft renewed the war's greatest aerial offensive as swarms of British Typhoons and American Marauders were striking across the channel.

Gotha is in Central Germany 150 miles southwest of Berlin. Schweinfurt, where the American air forces suffered loss of 60 heavy bombers last Oct. 14, is 220 miles southwest of Berlin.

Swarms of fighters—R.A.F., Dominions, American and others—supported the attack, described in a communique as part of the "record-breaking air offensive against the German fighter aircraft industry and related plants."

Fighter Plane Support.

Fighter planes from the R.A.F., Dominions, American air force and other Allies supported the attacking forces, a communique said. It referred to the attack as part of the "record-breaking air offensive against the German fighter aircraft industry and related plants."

Dutch airfields were also targets selected for the daylight pounding by American medium bombers under a cover of Allied fighters while R.A.F. fighter-bombers went after military objectives in northern France.

The renewed assault came on the heels of a U.S. strategic air force headquarters announcement which said concentrated air attacks on German aircraft factories have so reduced Nazi fighter production that every enemy plane shot down in combat now is a vital contribution toward knocking Germany's air force out of action.

Official statements here and from Allied headquarters, Naples, said a total of 343 German planes have been shot down in the last four days by American airmen in attacks on Germany.

Smoke Blankets London.

London, Feb. 24 (CP)—Smoke from fires set by German night raiders Wednesday night hung over London today as Nazi reconnaissance planes flew boldly over the city and touched off the first genuine day alert the capital has experienced in many months.

Appearance of the German scouts, apparently checking damage done in the fourth sharp raid on London in six nights, underscored an R.A.F. commentator's warning that the German air force has shifted strong bomber formations to France and presumably is ready to continue the current series of streamlined attacks.

Anti-aircraft guns roared into action as two enemy planes were spotted streaking over the capital at high altitude shortly after the breakfast hour. It was the first real daylight alert since last July 9, although a friendly plane set off a false alarm last January 2.

Thousands of incendiaries and many high explosive bombs showered down for an hour before midnight, causing dozens of deaths and widespread damage. At least four of the raiders, most of which attacked from a great height, were reported downed.

Many fires were set in homes, apartment buildings and business blocks, but all were reported under control in the space of a few hours.

The raiders, flying with the wind, streaked across the capital at a high altitude, first lighting up the blacked-out sky with brilliant flares and then dropping thousands of incendiaries. The anti-aircraft barrage roared to its full peak within a matter of a minute or so.

The Budapest radio, commenting on the fact that the attacks on Britain were being made at a high altitude, said stratosphere bombers were being used and the Germans had developed a new high explosive bomb filled with a substance called "K" and nicknamed "Fat Emma".

No Blockbusters.

While British authorities said there was no reason to believe the Germans were using any new or unusual type of plane, an R.A.F. commentator said the Nazis were employing more powerful bombs than in their big raids two years ago.

The commentator added, however, that the bombs were not comparable to the R.A.F.'s 4,000-pound blockbusters.

One of the worst incidents of the German raid last night was a direct hit on a large block of working-class flats. Many people were buried in the wreckage and this morning rescue squads were still digging them out—the majority alive—from beneath burning debris.

Antiques and art treasures were lost in another district.

All the stained glass windows of a chapel near an historic structure were smashed and its clock blown to bits. The exterior was gouged but there was only slight damage to the richly-ornamented interior.

Another bomb missed another of London's most famous buildings and smashed a six-storey apartment house next door.

Two Nazi airmen who parachuted into the suburbs were reported captured without resistance.

100 M.P.H. Forecast On Highways 30 Years Hence

Toronto, Feb. 24. (CP)—J. D. Miller, Ontario Deputy Minister of Highways, today predicted highway speeds of 100 miles an hour by 1974 in an address at the 50th anniversary of the Ontario Good Roads Association.

By that year there should be 2,000,000 automobiles in Ontario, he said, or one to every four persons. Registration of motor vehicles has increased from 16,000 in 1914, or one for every 150 of the population, to 730,000, or one for every five of the population in 1944, Mr. Millar said.

Japs Deride But Fear America, Will Never Surrender Says Student

Written for The Associated Press
By YIN TSO

Chungking, Feb. 24 — (AP) — When Japan attacked the United States in 1941, homefront propaganda experts built up a new conception of the average American. They portrayed him as a rascal, a bully, a man of weak character spoiled by easy living. Unlike the Japanese, he was afraid of death.

President Roosevelt was portrayed as the arch-villain of the Democracies, with Winston Churchill as a misguided lieutenant, led by the nose.

Seventy per cent of all Japanese propaganda today is directed against the United States. It takes strange forms.

Last September large American flags were painted at main Tokyo intersections so the American colors would be trampled under foot by all who passed.

When children buy toy guns some shops give them wooden statues of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and General Chiang Kai-Shek for target practice.

There is little war-humor in Japan. Jokes about the Emperor, or even about Premier Hideki Tojo, are unthinkable. War is war, a grim business of fighting and dying gloriously for the Emperor, and the Japanese soldier is too exalted a subject for wit.

Even if Japanese soldiers are known to be alive and well in prison camps, they are automatically listed as dead and their families notified of their "death in action."

Although the Japanese deride the Americans, they fear their growing might.

Japan's blow at Pearl Harbor convinced the Japanese people, who were told that the U. S. Pacific fleet was annihilated, that Japan proper was immune to enemy air attack. The "Shangri-la" raid of April 18, 1942, was a bitter disillusionment.

Now the Japanese people are being told if Japan is defeated the United States will totally disarm them, destroy all their heavy industry and punish their leaders as war criminals.

Somehow I cannot imagine the war ending by Japanese unconditional surrender. Personally, I think if Allied troops land on Japan proper the Japanese will fight to the very end.

MARIANA ISLANDS BOMBED BY LARGE U.S. TASK FORCE

Hundreds of Planes Loosed From Carriers Deal Japanese Naval Base Heavy Blow

FEW DETAILS GIVEN

By CHARLES McMURTRY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Pearl Harbor, Feb. 24, (AP) — The war's first blow against the Mariana Islands, deep within Japan's defence ring, was dealt powerfully Tuesday by hundreds of planes from Allied aircraft carriers.

The bombing of the Marianas, 700 miles northwest of Truk and 1,300 miles south of Tokyo, took place the same day invasion forces completed a six-day conquest of Eniwetok Atoll, Western Marshalls air base within land-based bombing range of Truk.

The Mariana and Eniwetok developments were disclosed yesterday by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

Rear Admiral Marc A. Mitscher, who captained the Carrier Hornet from which bombers took off for Tokyo in 1942, presumably led into the daring Mariana operation elements of the same task force used last Wednesday and Thursday against Truk, demonstrating the sustained striking power of the fleet.

Radio silence to protect his ships' movements precluded details as to whether the Mariana raiders sank any warships in Tanpag Harbor at Saipan Island. Tinian, a naval air base, also was a target Tuesday. It and Saipan are near the bottom of the Mariana ladder of islands ranging north directly toward Japan.

The attacked bases are approximately 3,300 statute miles southwest of Pearl Harbor.

Capture of Eniwetok, second atoll in the Marshalls to fall to Americans this month, was completed by a 12-hour marine drive on Parry Island. It was invaded last Thursday after air and ship preparatory assaults.

Admiral Nimitz also reported Ponape and Kusai in the Carolines were pounded by heavy bombers Monday, apparently to neutralize them against interfering with the impending Mariana stroke.

Japanese resistance is believed almost over on Nissan Island in the Green group.

The islands, occupied by New Zealand and American forces last week, lie between Bougainville and New Britain.

Wipe Out Resistance.

At headquarters in the Southwest Pacific an Allied communique said American soldiers and marines have wiped out all enemy resistance in Western New Britain.

Conclusion of a campaign which started Dec. 15 with the landing at Arawe, and which took the lives of 7,000 Japanese, meant the Allies have a 200-mile-wide opening in the enemy's defence arc from Java to Rabaul, New Britain, through which to drive north.

Distance from the Allied position to Rabaul, battered enemy base at the northeastern tip of New Britain, is about 260 airlines miles. Because of the terrain, it seems doubtful that an overland march to Rabaul will be attempted.

War Correspondents Miss Slit Trenches

London, Feb. 24 (CP)—War correspondents returned from the battlefronts have concluded, after undergoing the stepped-up German raids on the British capital, that it definitely isn't safe around here.

They miss their slit trenches

Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent who was at Dieppe, in North Africa, Sicily and then Italy, summed up for his companions:—

"These buildings aren't safe. I'm going to dig a slit trench in the park in front of my house."

REDS DENY REPORT

London, Feb. 24—(CP)—A Soviet communique denied last night that Russian planes had dropped bombs in the Stockholm area last night. The Russians said their planes had made a "mass raid" Tuesday night at Turku (ABC), a Finnish port city 90 miles northwest of Helsinki, but dropped no bombs in the Stockholm vicinity.

Midget British Sub of Type That Fought Tirpitz

Butter Ration Will Be Cut 'Temporarily' in Mid-March

Ottawa, Feb. 24 (CP)—The Prices Board anounced today a "temporary" reduction will be made in Canada's butter ration in March by postponing the dates upon which two butter ration coupons become valid.

Board officials said the reduction per person for March will amount to eight ounces, effected by postponing the dates of coupons 54 and 55, which normally would become valid March 16, to March 23 and March 30, respectively. Thereafter, until further notice, coupons will become valid at intervals of one week. At present, coupons are valid in pairs every two weeks.

Each coupon is good for eight ounces of butter.

The announcement said the reduction in the ration, resulting from decreased production in November, December and January, will mean a saving of 5,000,000 pounds, equivalent to one week's normal ration allowance.

Production during November, December and January was about 5,400,000 pounds below that of the corresponding period a year ago. The Board said an important factor in the decline was the 1943-44 winter subsidy payments which diverted milk from butter production to cheese production.

Butter quotas to hotels, restaurants and other eating places will be reduced along with the household ration.

SENATORS NAME ALBEN BARKLEY SENATE LEADER

Colleagues Back Him in Break With Roosevelt Over Tax Bill

WILL OVERRIDE VETO

Washington, Feb. 24 — (AP) — Democratic senators roared out their confidence in Kentucky's Alben W. Barkley today, unanimously re-electing him senate majority leader in a move which underscored his prestige as a front-rank figure in the party.

Barkley's colleagues backed him to the man in his open break with President Roosevelt over the tax bill veto.

Earlier, Barkley had emerged grim-faced from the conference chamber, announcing to a crowd of reporters:—

"I have resigned."

He added that he had asked Senator Kenneth McKellar (Dem.-Tenn.) to preside over the conference.

Emerging from the guarded doors of the conference room, the Democratic senators reported that by a unanimous vote they had accepted his resignation, then re-elected him unanimously.

Barkley's insistence on resigning the post he has held for seven years — nearly twice as long as any other occupant — was taken as an indication of the gravity of his break with President Roosevelt over the president's tax bill veto.

Barkley told the Senate yesterday he was quitting to save his "self respect."

High Nazi Officers Who Failed in East Die by Hitler's Order

Stockholm, Feb. 24 — (AP) — Estonian refugees arriving in Sweden have reported rumors that Hitler visited Pskov in Russia and Narva and Reval in Estonia at the end of January and ordered the execution of some high German officers because of their poor showing against the Red army on the northern front.

At least one officer was shot and another committed suicide, according to these rumors. Another was supposed to have been dismissed.

Railway Traffic Delayed Two Days

London, Feb. 24 — (AP)—Traffic on the main Trieste-Ljubljana railway was paralyzed for two days after Yugoslav Partisans derailed a train near Rakek, a communique from the headquarters of Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) announced today. Trieste is an important German-held Italian port on the Adriatic Sea 50 miles southwest of Ljubljana, industrial and rail centre in western Slovenia.

Meanwhile, early announcement of Yugoslav war unity with Tito established as the dominant military figure under a regime headed by King Peter was predicted in London today.

Numerous conservatives in the present Yugoslav government in exile were believed ready to acknowledge Tito's command of all forces fighting Hitler if Peter remains titular monarch of a government not too closely Allied with Russia in political theory.

ARTILLERY BLASTS CONCENTRATIONS OF FOE AT ANZIO

German Efforts To Infiltrate Allied Lines Southwest of Aprilia Repulsed

MUCH PATROL ACTION

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
(AP War Correspondent.)

Naples, Feb. 24. (AP)—Fighting flared again yesterday on the Allied 5th Army's Anzio front, with artillery gunners breaking up German groups preparing to attack west of Cisterna and Allied troops repulsing Nazi attempts to infiltrate their lines southwest of Carroceto, (Aprilia) Allied headquarters announced today.

While four-engined bombers were ranging into Austria and attacking an important German aircraft assembly plant at Steyr, the tactical air force swung over the coast of Italy and Yugoslavia, showering bombs on enemy shipping from which the enemy has been feeding supplies into the Italian battle areas.

The Air Command announced six heavy bombers were lost in the Steyr attack. The bomber crews shot down 32 enemy fighters and escorting fighters accounted for another.

Patrol actions and sharp exchanges of artillery fire continued on the main 5th Army front in the Cassino area. Allied shells apparently hit German munitions or gasoline dumps in the mountains northwest of Cassino. Explosions were observed in three places.

Although sharp fighting took place at some points on the beachhead and enemy movements suggested Nazi Field Marshal Kesselring was regrouping his forces for a third try at driving the Allied into the sea, the German High Command did not commit any sizeable forces to action yesterday and no ground changed hands.

German planes continued to bomb and strafe beachhead troops until rain late in the day kept them on the ground. Heavy cannonading resounded from both lines throughout the day.

Units of the British 8th Army beat off a small-scale German attack in the region of Guardiagrele, about 20 miles inland from the Adriatic on a highway southwest of Ortona. Other patrols inflicted casualties on the Germans near Arielli. Canadian patrols reported brief exchanges of machine-gun fire.

In sweeps across the Adriatic, planes of the tactical air force move a close-knit pattern of bombs along the length of the Yugoslav coast, covering Zara Harbor, the harbor near Marina, a landing field near Knin, a motor convoy north of Split and shipping in the Drvenick Channel. Spitfires attacked Corfu of the Greek coast.

At some points hedgehopping Spitfires saw Yugoslav Partisan forces waving as they roared to their targets.

On the northwest coast of Italy medium bombers blasted enemy shipping in Castiglioncello Harbor, near Leghorn.

Altogether seven Allied planes were lost from this theatre yesterday and 36 German planes were shot down.

The Germans used every trick in the bag, attacking with rocket-firing Junkers-88s and Messerschmitt 210s and 110s. One fight over Steyr lasted half an hour until fighter pilots drove off the attacking fighters.

$500,000 FIRE

Detroit, Feb. 24 (AP)—One fireman was injured when flung to the ground by an explosion and several were overcome by smoke as a five-alarm blaze swept the interior of the Fisher Wall Paper Company building today.

Reds Make 10-Mile Advance on Rail Junction in a Day

6,000 Nazis Killed And Large Amount Booty Taken Near Krivoi Rog

64 MILES FROM PSKOV

London, Feb. 24 — (CP) — The Russian northern attack rolled on today with fighting in the streets of the rail junction of Dno, 64 miles east of Pskov — immediate objective of the drive. Other Soviet forces were 44 miles northeast of Pskov and 25 miles northwest of that communication centre and gateway to the Baltics.

Announcing the capture of 180 localities and killing of 2,500 in this northern fighting, Moscow also told of 6,000 Nazis killed and considerable booty captured near Krivoi Rog, Ukraine ore centre taken by the Russians Tuesday. Since then Gen. Rodionay Malinovsky's conquering troops captured several communities west and northwest of the Dnieper Bend town.

The force fighting in the streets of Dno reached there in a 10-mile advance in 24 hours after a six-day drive that pushed it forward 50 miles. One formation reached the city after clearing a portion of the Leningrad-Vitebsk railway northeast of Dno and other units to the southeast reached Semenovshchina, 34 miles from Dno.

The force reported 25 miles from Pskov was fighting in difficult marsh and forest country where Moscow reported no gains in recent days.

Far to the south the big Black Sea ports of Nikolaev and Kherson were brought under pressure by the Red Army after the recapture of Krivoi Rog, last defence junction between the Dnieper Bend and those two southern ports. The Russians now are in a position to use Krivoi Rog as a base for launching attacks to clear out the whole southern Ukraine.

Polish Government Rejects Proposal Of Britain and U.S.

Washington, Feb. 24—(AP)—The Polish government in London is understood to have rejected a proposal made several days ago by Great Britain and the United States for settlement of Russo-Polish difficulties, but it was believed London and Washington will persist in efforts for a solution.

While terms of the proposal were not made known here, they were believed to provide in general for acceptance by Poland of Russian possession of the eastern areas of pre-war Poland and for compensating acquisition of German territories to the north and east, such as East Prussia.

British Army's New 'Bailey Bridge' Speeded Advances in Africa, Italy

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Feb. 24 (CP)—On the outskirts of the dirty, bomb-bashed little Arab-French town of Souk-El-Kemis, a strange new army bridge was thrown over the Medjerdah river last winter by the Royal engineers.

It was built quickly and it looked like something done with a huge meccano set. We were told confidentally that this was the British army's new "Bailey bridge" the latest bridging deveopment being used in North Africa for the first time on operations.

Throughout the campaign, it was on the secret list. There were Bailey bridges at Medjez-El-Bab and down by Le Kef and Tebessa but still nothing could be said of this bridge, which was brought up to the front in steel sections, loaded on trucks.

In Sicily, the Germans blew up scores of bridges and the Bailey replaced them, speeding the advance. The Canadian 1st division engineers erected a dozen Bailey's during the campaign. But the bridge was still secret.

The Bailey went with the troops to Italy and there again it was the best army bridge on the front.

Now the secret is out. The mysterious "Bailey" who invented the bridge is Donald Coleman Bailey, 42-year-old civil engineer who lives at Southborne on England's south coast.

This man has done one of the great jobs of the war. Last year he received the Order of the British Empire in recognition of his work.

Bailey described his invention as "just part of my job." For 12 years he's been designing bridges for the army and this new one, which now tops the list, was accepted 18 months ago.

L. Lloyd in county police court here today.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., moved that the accused be escorted to Kingston for medical examination upon the expiration of his sentence. Korzyniswcki was apprehended by city police Wednesday upon the suggestions of the National Selective Service Board, civilian branch. The police authorities allege the accused man obtained military deferment at Niagara Falls as a conscientious objector, but did not report to the Chalk River camp. The nominal holding charge of vagrancy was preferred while E. E. Later milk tickets were reported to have been stolen, but Wednesday crowned the milk bottle pilferings in Belleville when City Engineer Charles Mott complained to police that milk left by the deliveryman had actually been stolen and during the busy noon hour period. This is not the first occasion when filled milk bottles have been stolen from the Mott residence doorstep.

POLICE COURT

Youths Held Liquor Permits

The illegal possession of liquor permits by two minors proved rather costly when they were arraigned in County Police Court before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd today. Elgin Pope, 18, of R.R. No. 5, Belleville, admitted he had procured a liquor permit while under the age of 21 years and was fined $13.00, including costs.

However, when 19-year-old Elgin McGowan, Belleville, appeared on a similar charge Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., informed the bench that McGowan was not only in possession of a liquor permit, but also wine and beer permits. His Worship imposed a fine of $20 and costs in this case.

McGowan also pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding in a restricted area and paid $7.50, including costs. It was when Traffic Officer Milton apprehended the accused speeding near the Trenton Air Station that he discovered these young men in possession of liquor permits, explained Mr. Donnan.

Joseph White, R.R. No. 7, Belleville, paid $6.50, including costs, upon being convicted on a charge of driving a motor vehicle with improper lights, while a charge of common assault, preferred against Bruce Brant of Tyendinaga Township, was enlarged for one week when the accused failed to put in an appearance. "He'd better be here next week or we will issue a bench warrant for his arrest," warned Mr. Donnan. A domestic case concluded the morning's proceedings.

Fire Destroys Bescoby Truck Near Bayside

A Bescoby's transport was completely demolished by fire and the driver, Jack Birch of Toronto, seriously burned near Bayside on Highway No. 2 late Wednesday afternoon.

Birch was driving a loaded Bescoby transport, when the right wheels became engaged in the heavy slushy snow along the curb. In trying to right the truck the vehicle skidded further into the heavy snow and crashed into a culvert where the entire undercarriage of the transport was sheared off, including the gasoline tank. The spilled gasoline ignited and the transport was soon a raging inferno.

Birch was trapped in the driver's cab as the fire crept closer to him. Passing motorists came to his rescue, however, but not before the driver had sustained burns about the hands and face. Birch's feet were wedged in the burning cab and only the fact he was wearing rubber boots and could slip his feet out saved him from more serious burns.

The transport was loaded with meats and fowl most of which was singed and spoiled as the result of the fire. The transport was completely demolished as the undercarriage was sheared off and even the tires burned during the subsequent fire. Provincial Constable H. Caldwell, J. J. Hatch and Robt. O'Brien, investigated and stood guard after Birch was removed to the Belleville General Hospital, where Dr. R. S. Gibson attended Birch

The War Today—

Tojo Bluntly Warns Japanese Of Jap Disaster at Truk

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

This column has found nothing good to say about Gen. Hideki Tojo, Japan's militaristic premier, but we must give him grudging credit for the great horse-sense he has displayed in taking his people into confidence at once in the matter of Nippon's disaster at Truk.

Naturally Tojo didn't tell the exact truth; he isn't capable of it. However, he wasn't so far off the beam, and he served the people hot mustard.

He told them Japan had suffered "losses greater than the enemy's," and bluntly announced loss of 18 ships. (An Allied communique reported 19.) He said "The war situation is truly grave," events "by no means permit optimism," and "The Empire is literally standing at the crossroads of a rise or fall."

Of course, Japan's head gangster is wholly selfish in thus exposing the facts. But he needs the support of all Japan, for he knows that armies and navies are helpless unless the public is back of them. Winning wars means complete partnership.

There are times when it's necessary for authorities to suppress news temporarily as a matter of security. However, there have been numerous instances when officials have delayed issuing news for long periods and later found it impossible to justify the action.

Telling Public the Situation

There's a disposition in some official quarters — and this is true on both sides of the Atlantic — to view their publics as lacking understanding.

There's a widespread feeling that the Allied publics have served their apprenticeship as junior partners and are due for full partnership. This question is of special importance now as we draw near to the crucial operation of the European war — the invasion of France —when an all-out effort on the home front is vital.

Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt, Marshal Stalin and other great figures have been emphasizing the magnitude and its dangers. In a general way the public understands the position, but many people are telling me that they lack the "feel" of the thing, and most of them say they think they've been "shielded too much from distressing news. They ask for full partnership.

Two Passengers And Bus Driver Hurt in Crash

Bancroft, Feb. 24 —(Special)— Two passengers and the driver of the Belleville-Bancroft bus received minor injuries Wednesday evening when the vehicle suddenly went out of control and plowed into the ditch three miles north of Millbridge. The injured persons were later attended by Dr. S. S. Lumb of Bancroft and allowed to go to their homes.

Miss Emily Hennessey, Hybla, sustained a cut in the back of her head, while Pte. F. Armstrong of West Huntingdon was bruised about the right side. The driver, Mr. Edgar Stapley, sustained a bruised right shoulder.

Owner and operator of the bus, Mr. Stapley claimed that something had let go in the operating mechanism of the bus with the result that the controls were rendered useless. The bus continued along the highway for a short distance and then came to an abrupt stop over a four-foot embankment. Damage to the bus was not great, it was claimed.

SENATORS NAME

Political weather vanes swung in all directions today as Congressional and other leaders strove to assay the political effects of Barkley's break with the White House on President Roosevelt's fourth term prospects.

Some anti-fourth-termers and lukewarm administration followers believed Barkley's resignation and expected vote of confidence to remain as senate majority leader would slow up or actually "jeopardize" the president's recommendation.

But others of Barkley's Democratic colleagues expect his bitter denunciation of Mr. Roosevelt's tax bill veto to result in improved relations between the White House and Congress by "clearing the atmosphere" and to have little or no effect on the president's renomination chances or the election.

"Who else have we got?" was the way they sized up the convention picture in the light of the Kentucky senator's unprecedented action.

The answer, in some quarters, was that Barkley himself was a possible candidate behind whom anti-Roosevelt factions of the party could rally.

With Allied capitals around the world looking on, a domestic drama of far-reaching implications rose to crescendo pitch as Democrats took sides in the most serious challenge thus far to Mr. Roosevelt's leadership.

Vote of Confidence

Barkley's senatorial colleagues virtually guaranteed him a smashing vote of confidence to reject his resignation as majority leader—a post in which he had served as the president's legislative lieutenant for seven years.

Mr. Roosevelt, moving swiftly to head off a revolt that promised, in the eyes of some observers, to elevate Barkley to the foremost ranks of presidential possibilities this year, expressed hope the Kentuckian's resignation would not be accepted. He urged Barkley, in a telegram addressed "Dear Alben," not to resign.

Party dissension flamed high in the House of Representatives too, as that body convened to vote on the question of overriding the president's veto of a $2,300,000,000 new tax bill, the issue which led Barkley to announce, in an impassioned speech on the senate floor yesterday, that he was through carrying "the flag of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Dem., N.C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee, another erstwhile Roosevelt stalwart, declared the veto message marked the point "where I part company with the President of the United States."

Contended Bill Inadequate

The President had contended the tax bill was inadequate for wartime needs.

Barkley declared the President was guilty of misstatements and of making a "deliberate and calculated assault upon the honesty and integrity" of Congress.

He urged Congress to override the veto.

President Roosevelt said he regretted "You thought I had in my message attacked the integrity of yourself and other members of the Congress. . . . Such you must know was not my intention."

While the political repercussions may bear more profoundly on the coming campaign, the immediate effect of the uprising, so far as the average citizen is concerned, is that the new revenue bill undoubtedly will become law.

Canada Must Compete on Open Market in Post-War Period To Maintain Full Employment

J. T. Crowder Addresses Annual Chamber of Commerce Banquet

CO-OPERATION NEEDED

Stating that Canada must compete on the open market in the post-war period in order to maintain an industrial stability, Mr. Joseph T. Crowder, Secretary-manager of the National Industrial Federation, Toronto, addressing the Annual Banquet of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce held in the main dining room of the Hotel Quinte Wednesday night, pointed out a number of factors which must have the consideration and the thoughtful planning of all industrialists and businessmen alike. The subject of his talk was "Maximum Industrial Employment."

Mr. Crowder explained that the National Industrial Federation was only a little over a year old, composed of a group of businessmen who hope to accomplish a post-war situation which would ensure the maximum employment of present day workers and absorb those who will return to civilian occupation from the services after the war. It means, said Mr. Crowder, jobs for everyone, including the returned men and women who apparently insist on going on working when the war is over. A survey was made, said Mr. Crowder, which showed that women intended to go on working in the factories and industries where they are now employed, or in some such work either there or elsewhere. In addition to these women of our own, our returned men, and the placement of those who will be out of work due to the closing down of war-production plants, there will be immigrants who will come to Canada when the war is over and the turmoil in Europe has ceased.

Need Export Markets

An advocate of the theory that labor saving machinery was and would be the cause of unemployment released arguments which do not stand. The return to the pick and shovel method of doing a job is not a solution. This speaker pointed out that if we are to be headed in the right direction we must create more employment, but creating more employment cannot mean merely putting thousands of men to work with tools and implements that will do the job but not do it as well as it could be done with more highly developed machinery, for when the job was finished there would be unemployment of a worse and more serious nature. It is therefore necessary for us to develop export markets which will take our surplus materials of manufacture and produce. Labor-saving machinery should be created and used by this country to create more work for the people to do.

When Canada faces the post-war problems of labor, continued Mr. Crowder, a great housing plan must be taken into consideration, a housing plan which will take into consideration the earning capacity of certain families. The Government cannot furnish a suitable housing plan that will come within the ability to pay without some subsidy or support. In the United States where salaries are a little higher than they are in Canada, approximately 50 per cent of the families were unable to own their own homes without government subsidy, as was shown in a recent survey of industrial conditions in that country. 15 to 20 per cent were able to house themselves with no assistance required, 20 to 25 per cent have to be assisted but do not require subsidy, 50 to 60 per cent will have support to bring their houses into their reach.

Must Avoid Business Slumps.

Mr. Crowder went on to say that we must choose whether we are going to have social security or not and see the end of individual effort. We must see that there can be no slump in the business of the post-war trade world which might lead to conditions where it would be necessary for the government to take over and handle the affairs of private enterprise. You, here in the city of Belleville would not trust private business to be run by some control centre. Business men of this city can run the businesses of Belleville better than any man anywhere else can do. The National Industrial Federation, said Mr. Crowder, has a two-years' program which will be followed by a survey of man-hours which will be submitted to the government. We know that private industry can employ 800,000 men in immediate post-war industrial expansion, and if they are going to release more than this number we must have more projects to take care of the increase.

Expand Aircraft Industry.

The aeronautical industry must be expanded and the future of the industry depends mainly upon the capability of the foresightedness of the industrialists of the country. Canada will be the air-lane of trans-global travel in the post-war world if we wish it to be; it is the logical route for the globe-spanning airlines to use, a route which can be developed and made possible for the Dominion providing sufficient preparations are made in the form of successive airports across the country, and there are several reasons why the post-war aeronautical industry should be made our principal one; there is the fact that more money has been spent in training fliers that are actually skilled technicians and we should give them all the support needed to carry on in this field.

Mr. Crowder said that the plan under consideration to dispose of the excessive equipment owned by the government was being developed by the Federation whereby it would be returned to the trade that produced it for redistribution; textiles to the textile business, machinery to the machinery manufacturers, etc. He said that there had been such considerable overproduction in the tool-making industry, for instance, that the tool manufacturers will not be able to hire a man for at least ten years if all the tools owned by the government at present are put back on the market, and some manner of disposal of this equipment must be developed so that these skilled workers, tool and die-makers will remain in Canada and not go elsewhere for employment.

Must Make Survey.

There must be a survey made, said Mr. Crowder, to know what a plant of the future will need to make it efficient from basement to roof. "We must export at least 30 per cent of our consumer goods," he said, "but how can we do it unless we have the highest efficiency; all other countries will be in the export market, and we will be found asleep unless we put our factories into A-1 condition now. We must not run the danger of a recurrence of what we allowed to happen to the ship-building industry in the past."

"We must have a plan whereby we know how we are going to know what amount of aircraft will be needed; we have the jobs and the men, and we are going to make aircraft in Canada and are going to plan our production, and we are going to build aircraft in Canada even if it is necessary for us to subsidize the industry in order to stay in the field in competition to other countries. This may not be necessary, but if it is, we must do it. If we do not plan our production and know our markets, we are not going to be shipping anything out of the country, or making anything to be shipped. We are in it sink or swim together."

Mr. Crowder urged the business men and industrialists present at the meeting to work in close contact with their Chamber of Commerce, to obtain information from that body as to the progress made in other businesses and to study their own problems in relation to those of the others. He said that constructive planning in Canada would make it possible to compete against the labor markets of Europe and the East, but only if we were willing to enter into trade with the intention to hold on. He said that it was a fact that we must live in the world with all other races and that we must be ahead of the rest. This, he said, can only be done by an evident willingness to co-operate, to plan and to organize the maximum of productive employment.

Pres. Morgan Extends Welcome.

Mr. C. B. Morgan, president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce made his address to the meeting in abrieviated form, saying: "I want to extend a very hearty welcome to everyone here. A crowd [illegible] proportions shows a keen interest in our work. It is the wish of your Directors to keep in perfect tune with the affairs and changes of the day and we must not miss a trick in the promotion of best ideas and thoughts for the welfare not only of the City of Belleville, but the entire community. I want to invite at this time and throughout my year as President, constructive thoughts and ideas which might be of value to the community, we may be able to use them."

Mr. B. C. Sisler, manager of the Dominion Bank, made the address of welcome to the newly-accepted members of the Chamber of Commerce as he extended the welcome to Messrs. J. C. Allen, Canadian Pacific Rly. Co., J. E. Evans, Quinte Feed Supply Co., Fred J. Fisher, manager, Christians Electric and Hardware Co., P. W. Geen, druggist, Charles L. Hyde, Plumbing, J. S. Madill, Auto Bodies Shop, Sam Pappas, Billiards, W. R. Rashotte, White Lumber Co., Leonard F. Reid, Reid's Dairy, Douglas Rendall, Belmont Restaurant, Herbert W. Robeson, Foot Specialist, and Tucker and Coombs, Electricians who were moved for acceptance by N. Edwards and seconded by Dave Martin. Mr. Sisler said that it was the duty of every business and professional man to become a member of the Chamber of Commerce. An organization of this kind, said Mr. Sisler is essential to the well-being of the community, but it must have the support of the whole community if it is going to succeed. Every member must put something into it and must lend their full support to the Board elected.

Criticism has been ladled onto the Chamber of Commerce, said Mr. Sisler, destructive criticism that has no basis. "Before we can criticize," he said, "we must ourselves be workers and make the organization one of boosters and offer ideas to the directors instead of just wishing they would do something. I think we should all do our bit," said Mr. Sisler, as he welcomed the new members and introduced a number of distinguished guests and visitors among whom were: Mayor Harry Rollins and the entire city council, the Board of Education, W. S. Turner, principal of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, the directors of the Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Cleo Colling, chairman of the city parks board, and Mr. Bob Pringle, chairman of the city industrial commission.

Introduction by J. B. Boyce.

Speaking in his usual nonchalant manner, spiced with witticisms and many references of a warm and hearty nature, the guest speaker of the evening was introduced by Mr. J. B. Boyce. Mr. Boyce referred to several remarks made by the president of the Chamber of Commerce, relative to the work of the Chamber, and what Mr. Sisler had said about the criticisms of the Chamber. He said there was reason for that because the Chamber of Commerce has not been one to try to sell our wares to the people at large, that they do not publicise their works to a great extent, but that under the leadership of a great man of good will and a man of utmost integrity, Mr. J. Owen Herity, the Chamber of Commerce has done a good job. Mr. Boyce said that the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce have become an institution in the city, that no one is brought there to be entertained but to think, from which something will come for the good of the whole community and district. Mr. Boyce introduced the speaker, Mr. Crowder by outlining a brief summary of his career and his present position with the National Industrial Federation.

Success Does Not Count Hours.

"Why do we face the future with fear of mass unemployment", Mr. Boyce said was the subject of a talk given a short time ago at a meeting in the city of Toronto. He said that he did not think that most people had a fear of mass unemployment and that such matters should not be foisted onto the reading public. He said that he believed a man should not be restricted as to the number of hours a day he will work, but that he should be allowed to work as long as he wants. "I never knew of any man who ever got anywhere working just eight hours a day", said Mr. Boyce. . . . "The Kings, the Churchills and the Drews of the world for example. For all we know, our guest speaker may be the "Moses" who will lead the land out of the wilderness and into the land of milk and honey".

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson fittingly expressed the grateful appreciation of the audience to Mr. Crowder for his masterly, significant and timely address. With his own inimitable drollery, Mr. Robertson commented upon the salient features of the principal address which had gotten away from the impractical and the visionary and had reached a high plane of suggestiveness.

Mr. Arthur Vandervoort, in his last number "The Major" won renewed appreciation from the audience for his vivid interpretation of this humorous classic. For an encore, he responded with that world-wide favorite, "Caroline".

Mr. Sandy Burrows voiced the enthusiasm of the audience by a brief expression of gratitude to his friend of many years standing, Mr. Vandervoort.

It fell to the lot of His Worship, Mayor Harry Rollins to propose the toast to "Our Guests," and in a happy mood he performed his task. He spoke of the practical importance of these annual get-together events which brought into harmonious relationship, not only the business and professional leaders of Belleville, but served as a means of creating good-will with our neighboring towns and municipalities.

Mr. George H. Stokes, M.P., for South Hastings, who had come from Ottawa to attend the banquet, made a happy response. He referred to the debt owed by the City of Belleville to the Township of Huntingdon because of the significant fact that both the Mayor of the city and the manager of the Chamber of Commerce had come from that famous municipality. Mr. Stokes also enlarged upon the harmonious relations promoted by these annual renewals of friendship between city and country.

Mr. George A. Stokes, General Superintendent of the Canadian National Railways for Southern Ontario, in the course of a brief response, referred to the valued friendships he had formed during his happy sojourn at Belleville where for several years he had held the office of Divisional Superintendent. He was always glad of the opportunity to return.

Mr. C. W. Wells, general freight agent of the Canadian National Railways for Southern Ontario, also told of the pleasure it gave him to renew acquaintances at Belleville.

Share in Benefits

Mr. S. J. Raymond, who now holds the important post of Industrial Commissioner for the Canadian National Railways for the Province of Ontario, spoke of the kindly regard he had for Belleville and its people. He had deferred an important business tour to the United States that he might be able to attend this banquet. He spoke of after-war industrial opportunities and hoped that Belleville might share in the benefits of the great movements in manufacturing in post-war developments.

Also seated at the Speaker's table were Mayor Harry Cory of Trenton, Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon of Picton, Reeve George West of Madoc village, Reeve Edgar Jones of Tweed, Reeve George Montgomery of Frankford, Councillor Earl Bailey, Stirling, and Mr. F. G. Gould, associate general freight agent of the Canadian National Railways.

The banquet was brought to a close following the toasts offered by these various business and professional men of the city and visitors to the city, and a large number of the audience remained in the main dining room where a motion picture was shown depicting how the United States Industrial Commission hoped to convince every manufacturer in the United States how and when he could put into effect a suitable and efficient post-war program.

Astride Tail Of Spinning Plane Lands Safely

Toronto, Feb. 24 — (CP) — How P/O Jimmy Abbotts' Spitfire landed safely as he clung to its tail and rudder after being caught in his parachute harness when he bailed out was described today by Flt. Lt. Donald Morrison of Toronto as "just one of those things."

Abbotts, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Abbotts of Owen Sound, is safe in a German prison camp. He suffered only minor injuries when, as a member of the famed R.C.A.F. Wolf squadron on a sweep over France, his Spitfire went into a spin and he was forced to jump.

His parachute became entangled inside the cockpit and when his head cleared he found himself flapping alongside the tail of the still spinning aircraft. Somehow the Spitfire levelled out and landed safely, with Abbotts astride the tail.

In revealing the story today, Morrison, holder of the D. F. C. and D. F. M., didn't think Abbotts' weight on the rear of the aircraft was responsible for the landing.

"It can't be explained," he said.

Shortly after the incident Abbotts turned up in a prison camp where Morrison was held. Morrison was later repatriated to Canada.

U.S. HOUSE PASSES REVENUE BILL OVER F.D.R. VETO

Senate is Expected to Duplicate House Action on Friday

Washington, Feb. 24 —(AP)— In strident rebellion against President Roosevelt's tax views, the House of Representatives today voted 299 to 95 to pass the $2,300,000,000 new revenue bill over his veto.

The Senate is expected to duplicate the House action tomorrow, putting the tax bill on the statute books, "the President' objections notwithstanding."

A rebellion in Democratic ranks that reeled political Washington back on its heels preceded the House action. Involved were Senate Democratic Leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky, and Chairman Robert Doughton (Dem.-N.C.) of the Huose Ways and Means Committee, both of whom called for action over-riding the President.

Patrol Ships' Crews Get Opportunity To Relax in Northern Ireland Base

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

A Port in Northern Ireland, Feb. 24 (CP)—This port is a convoy escort and anti-submarine base in northern Ireland to be sure, but to walk along the docks here is like being home in a Canadian port.

The place is crowded with seagoing Canucks who are veterans of the North Atlantic for this harbor is one of the overseas ports of call for the Canadian navy's corvettes, frigates and destroyers which ply the ocean to protect the merchant ships and tankers.

Along the jetties for a mile or more are moored ships that bring the convoys safely to the British Isles. Sometimes they are three and four abreast and there are frequently a dozen or more Canadian vessels tied up waiting for new orders to put to sea on another gruelling voyage.

To the escort crews this port which can't be named is their Plymouth, Portsmouth and Chatham, it is the big town for the "little ships."

Fighting ships move slowly in and out of the harbor, which is one of the busiest naval bases on this side of the ocean. Everything is highly operational.

Irish soldiers, United States marines and British and Canadian tars with fixed bayonets are on guard at the berths, repair shops and drydocks.

There's always something new here and it all comes in from the gray Atlantic.

Some ships come back after actions with their damage and their casualties and some bring prisoners, Germans picked up from submarines that have been sunk. There are heroic stories, sad stories, gallant stories and gruesome ones and some ships have no story at all. They've just plowed the Atlantic for months on end, doing their job but getting no fighting.

The submarine warfare is the obsession of these men. Officers in the wardroom and ratings in the mess deck "talk shop" even more than doctors or newspapermen—and that's quite a record.

Even with the bronco conduct of corvettes and frigates when there is any kind of a sea running, these Canadians enjoy this life. They get a few days in Newfoundland when they're in or a few days in an east coast Canadian port and then in a few weeks they're back here for another couple of days.

This town doesn't offer much opportunity for shore-going relaxation for a sailor but sometimes they have time to get down to Eire for steaks and stout and bright lights and eggs in Dublin or some country town.

Support Red Cross

Preparations are under way in the city for the launching of the annual national appeal by the Canadian Red Cross in the Dominion-wide appeal for $10,000,000 which opens February 28th., with Belleville and district's share set at $25,000. The citizens of Belleville are urged to support to their utmost this drive for money so that the work of the society may be continued with the same force as they have shown they were able to do in the past years.

This is the crucial year in the world conflict and there is a great possibility that Canada will be called upon to make sacrifices in the face of the enemy. There will be casualties and wounded who will need bandages, dressings, hospital comforts and blood serum. This is the work your Red Cross must do on your behalf. For this work the Society requires and must have $3,000,000 this year.

Then, too, there will be many of our men ,possibly some of our own who were born and raised right here in Belleville, and are known to many people who are reading these words, who will fall into the hands of the enemy and come under the guardianship of the Red Cross which will provide them with life-sustaining weekly food parcels, comforts and educational and cultural services. For the relatives of men reported "missing in action," the Society, through the International Red Cross at Geneva, will lend its aid in securing definite news. To provide the weekly food parcels for war prisoners calls for $5,500,000.

The raising of such a huge sum of money will require the wholehearted support of all Canadians, but there is confidence in the knowledge that Canada will be equal to the task of financing this great humanitarian work, and confidence that Belleville will give more than the amount asked for this vital war work. A gift to the Red Cross is next to being able to walk right onto the battlefield and give a helping hand to one of our own boys, to pass the barred gates of an enemy prison camp and place the comforts and necessities of life into the hands of one who waits . . . and waits. Their sacrifice has already been great and they ask only that you remember them.

In the City's Service

To have filled the office of city clerk of Belleville for thirty years is the honor which Mr. J. Wilfred Holmes is observing at this time. Actually Mr. Holmes' appointment as a city official goes back to a date earlier than 1914 when he was appointed city clerk for he had previously held the position of city tax collector for some time.

Mr. Holmes' appointment as city clerk was made by the city council on the night of February 23rd., 1914.

A generation and more in the service of the Corporation of the City of Belleville in the important offices which have been his, is something of which Mr. Holmes can be proud. He has always enjoyed the esteem and confidence of the citizens of Belleville and of the councils in that time. As a citizen and official he has seen Belleville develop consistently, the population growing in numbers, the city becoming more and more important industrially and as a place of homes and as the county seat of a great agricultural area, the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Holmes is a fine official, faithful and studious in the duties of his office and courteous in his relations with all. Citizens salute him as he enters on another year of service.,

Stalin Confident

Two great speeches have been delivered this week by Allied leaders, that by British Prime Minister Churchill in the House of Commons on Tuesday and that by Premier Marshal Stalin of Russia on Wednesday on the twenty-sixth anniversary of the Russian army. How different their words are from those of Hitler's speech at the Nazi anniversary recently, everyone who read the speeches knows. The United Nations' heads are confident of victory and they do not fail to point out that Hitler has "failed to introduce disharmony into the camp of the anti-Hitlerite coalition."

Joseph Stalin touched a note which must be one of which Hitler is thinking, namely the time, according to Premier Stalin, "when the main forces of our Allies go into action and the powerful and growing offensive of the Allied states is launched against Hitlerite Germany."

Stalin has the supreme satisfaction of having shown what the power of Russian arms and Russian spirit can accomplish in smashing Germany "to the edge of catastrophe." He sees the Hitlerites advancing toward catastrophe inevitably and then warns that the solemn "hour of final reckoning for the Hitlerite crimes against Russia and in the occupied countries is approaching."

The Russian leader has a great fact to point out to the Russian people, that the Russians have advanced westward as much as one thousand miles in places and that three-quarters of the territory which had been in German hands in Russia has been taken back from the Germans by the Russians.

With the same stress as that Mr. Churchill used, the Russian Premier warned that it was necessary that "we must be vigilant and not allow overconfidence in our ranks or complacency." He told the Russian people that the enemy does not jump into the abyss of his own free will, and that the Allies will have to force Hitler "to the edge of the abyss and push him in."

He gave the assurance that all subterfuges of the enemy to try to separate the United Nations "are doomed to failure."

Winter's Changes

The bear is holding the reputation for truth in forecasting winter weather he has had according to the old adage, however much the weather may have so far failed to become bitter and intensely cold. Since the second day of this month there have been quite a few falls of snow and the aggregate so far is of some proportion but the inability of the weatherman to maintain a prolonged cold spell has caused the disappearance of a great deal of the snow. The latest storm of Tuesday night, which left heavy snow and slush is more in keeping with the trend of the present winter to be mild .

On Going to Church

(New York Times)

It would appear axiomatic that the right kind of Sunday includes church attendance, but, unfortunately, some people, satisfied with a life not quite complete, allow themselves to miss this pleasure.

The trip to church should be made on foot, if feasible. The head is up, with the sense of well-doing, and the lungs are full of brisk, fresh air. The soul is at peace with the world and the demeanor is cheerful. The churchgoer who is in the appropriate frame of mind lets his thoughts dwell on others, wishes them as well off as he, and holds in his purse a generous contribution, which will doubly bless the giver and the receiver. It need not greatly matter whether the sermon is of good or indifferent quality; the main thing is to be in church, and to depart uplifted.

Song Before Spring

(Frances M. Miller in N. Y. Herald--Tribune)

Beneath the snow, the farmlands lie
Waiting the touch of spring,
And winter woods against the sky
Their leafless branches fling.
The groundhog takes a perky stand,
The squirrels flick back their tails
And valentines walk hand in hand
On February trails.

Don't Let It Worry You

("The Hub," Boston)

If your efforts are criticized you must have done something worthwhile.

If someone calls you a fool, go into silence and meditation. He might be right.

If the world laughs at you, laugh right back. It's as funny as you are.

If you have tried to do something and failed, you are vastly better off than if you had tried nothing and succeeded.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1944, Edgar A. Guest)

SELF-PITY

These things I ponder when alone:
Had I been needed
And asked to charge a battle zone
Would I have heeded?

When little irritations irk,
As, when 'tis raining
Or I am called for extra work,
I start complaining.

Or when my own desires must wait,
Or luck deserts me,
Or there's no butter for my plate,
Or new shoe hurts me,

I spread my dismal tale of woe
Throughout the city,
As one who thinks all should bestow
On him their pity.

And this I wonder, under fire,
Where cannons rumble,
Could I stand ankle deep in mire
And never grumble?

Settlers who went down the years sipping with real gusto the flavoursome experiences of the post, liked to recall how clever they were with the trees on their backwoods land. They remembered all the things they could do with the white birch, most versatile of forest friends. With its bark they could light a fire when nothing else would catch. They could make straw hats with it. They found it waterproof and so went about covering canoes and other articles with it. They tanned leather with it. They used it for snowshoe bows, for furniture, for firing, for letter-writing. And they praised it too, as a tree to thrive on almost nothing; it will grow in poor soil when practically nothing else will

Another favourite recollection of old-timers concerned the necessity of "hiring out" for the first year or two of pioneer-ing, even though they had land of their own. This was because the farms did not then yield enough to support their families. 150 years ago, an active able labourer could earn from $8. to $11 a month. With this money he could purcase sufficient food and clothing to enable his dependents to keep the home fires burning until his return.

Persons lucky enough to own a team could earn easy money by skidding logs in winter and by taking the effects of incoming settlers to their destinations. They also did well in transporting military supplies for local garrisons.

Cigars Break Down Lord Mayor's Fortress

BY VERNON M. KIPP

(Special to Ottawa Journal and The Ontario Intelligencer.)

London, Feb. 10, 1944

You just don't drop in casually on the Lord Mayor of London as you do on the Mayor of Ottawa to talk over the political situation or the tax rate. You convince his secretary that your business is important, make an appointment well ahead, and do the thing with decent formality.

The time schedule of a party of visiting newspapermen makes appointments difficult to manage and so two of us called informally at Mansion House the middle of the morning, without any preparation. The big door was locked; was opened at our knock by a uniformed butler. He let us into a fine, high-ceilinged reception room, a fireplace burning cosily at one side. We said we should like to see the Lord Mayor's secretary. He went away, came back and took us to an elevator which carried us up one floor.

There, in another gorgeous room with life-size statuary set in niches in the wall, we came upon the secretary to the secretary. We gave our names and he went inside. He came back to say the secretary was with the Lord Mayor, and we had no appointment. We admitted the allegation, but said in our defence that we had letters of introduction to both the Lord Mayor and the secretary from the Mayor of Ottawa —also a box of cigars from the Mayor. "That", said the secretary to the secretary, "makes it different. Please wait and I will inquire".

He disappeared again with the letters and the cigars, and came back to say the Lord Mayor would receive us. So we came to the secretary and to his chief.

The Lord Mayor received us in his office, another great magnificent room. He is Sir Frank Newson-Smith, a tall, distinguished, courtly gentleman. "This is a lovely old building, Mr. Lord Mayor", I remarked. "Oh, not so old", he replied, "1747". He did not argue the point of its charm and beauty, and he expressed gratification that it had been so little damaged in the blitz.

The Lord Mayor spoke with feeling of the help Canadians had given through the Queen's Canadian Fund and the Toronto Telegram's fund, to relieve acute distress caused in London and the United Kingdom by air attack. He said he would like us to tell our people that their help had been of very great importance, both in its practical scope and extent and in its revelation of the kindness and sympathy of the Canadian people.

The Lord Mayor went on to tell us that these funds are administered with an absolute minimum of red tape and formality, the idea being that what is needed; money or cothing or whatever it may be is available immediately to a distressed family or individual. Education too has a big place in the beneficent work of these funds. Often it hapens that the only survivor of a blitzed family is a minor, perhaps all family assets wiped out. Through this Canadian money such a person is to be educated top take the place in society he might have expected to occupy if the war had not interfered. The Lord Mayor gave as an example a girl who was attending university when every member of her family was killed in a raid. With the aid of these funds she is completing her university course.

These notes sometimes may seem disjointed, but are not really so, because everything that goes on in Britain today is part of the picture of Britain at war.

The Queen's Canadian Fund covers one phase of war; the seagoing landing craft we saw another day as guests of the Royal Canadian Navy have quite another mission but not unrelated.

These are ships, and each is a separate command—sturdy, powerful little vessels able to make fair speed—and the one we visited was commanded by a pleasant youth of 23 from Calgary. Each ship has two officers and 19 men, and there is room below decks for 200 troops, a bunk for each man, room for the equipment and arms a soldier carries on his person. When it reaches its destination the little ship runs up on the beach; put out the two long gangways which rest beside the bridge, and the troops disembark on dry land. We were told the ship could be emptied in two to four minutes—and time, in such circumstances, may be the essence of safety. Then the ship's engines are reversed, she pulls away and goes somewhere else at top speed. That is the theory—in battle many things might interfere.

Every thing in the ship is on a tiny scale. Passages are narrow, stairways steep, and when half a dozen of us crowded into the hospitable little wardroom for the best coffee tasted in this country there was literally not room to turn around. Later in the day there was a sharp contrast in ships when we were permitted to visit an old British battleship with its vast area of open deck space, its formidable guns, its powerful turrets, its general air of strength and spaciousness. But in this war more than any other the little ships have their place, and a vital one.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Relaxation to.. Prevent.. Nervous Breakdowns

"The number of breaks (nervous breakdowns) in dynamic business men today is serious. Large and small organizations abound with instances of men in their forties and fifties, vigorous and energetic, suddenly stricken from within and rendered of little further use. Investigation points to the overwhelming role of high nerve and muscle tension in producing these losses in business manpower".

I am quoting Dr. Edmund Jacobson, Chicago, in the Archives of Physical Therapy.

What is meant by high nerve and muscle tension? I have written about this several times, more particularly when trying to help the Noise Abatement Society. Noise, which keeps mind and body alert, keeping mind steadily and completely on one's work or plans, forgetting to mix or mingle with others, taking no time out for play or for relaxation that really relaxes instead of further tensing such as being serious in a golf game, all tighten both nerves and muscles and bring on fatigue of brain and body.

Unfortunately, in addition to this continuous tenseness some of these individuals have infections of teeth, tonsils, gums, sinuses, or gall bladder which further tire mind and body.

How can the signs and symptoms of nervous breakdown be recognized?

"Every organ in the body can be affected. Since every organ is supplied by nerves which report its action to headquarters (the brain) and control its actions as well, high tension in the nerves controlling the organ is bound to bring with it high tension in the organ".

What are the organs particularly affected by this nervous tension?

The digestive organs are particularly affected by tension or highly nervous states as seen in the spasm of the oesophagus (tube carrying food to the stomach) which makes the patient feel that an obstruction is present. The irritable stomach and irritable lower bowel (colitis) are caused in most cases by nervous tension. Ulcer of the stomach and of the small intestine (peptic ulcer) are most often found in high tension individuals.

Attacks similar to angina pectoris—vise like pain under the breast bone—are frequently caused by tension.

What does Dr. Jacobson suggest in the treatment of these cases? Instead of suggesting a vacation, the patient is advised to keep relaxed while at his daily work or play.

2 AIRMEN FORCED DOWN, RESCUED N. W. OF HALIFAX

No News Heard of Another Plane Missing From Debert, N.S.

Halifax, Feb. 24 — (CP) — Two airmen forced down two nights ago in snow-covered bush country about 20 miles northwest of Halifax were rescued early today, Eastern Air Command headquarters here announced.

Meanwhile, there was no word of progress of the search for five survivors of the crash of a Liberator bomber in an isolated East coast area. The four-engin plane crashed last Friday and later was spotted from the air by searching planes, which could not land near it.

F/O David Griffin of Toronto, R.C.A.F. Public Relations officer, was killed in this crash.

A third plane — a twin-engine bomber from Debert, N.S. — remained missing. It disappeared last Sunday on a routine night exercise flight in the Nova Scotia-New Brunswick area. No trace of its whereabouts has been obtained.

Eastern Air Command had no details on the rescue of the two airmen in Halifax county beyond the fact they were suffering slightly from exposure after two nights in the open. They were flying a small Lysander plane when they were forced down on a frozen lake Tuesday night.

ROBED MEN OF JUSTICE

The members of the Supreme Court are the only civilian officials in the United States who wear robes or special costumes.

The Chief Justice and the eight Associate Justices, all wear black gowns or judicial robes while sitting on the bench.

Before the present Supreme Court Building was built and when the Supreme Court sat in the "old senate chamber" in the Capitol, tourists who happened to be visiting the Capitol at the time were impressed by the sight of the nine robed men of justice filing across the main corridor from the robing room to the court room.

This custom of wearing judicial robes dates back to the beginning of our government and was copied after the practice of the British judges.

In Britain the practice dates back to the days when all clergymen, lawyers, statesmen and other professional men wore distinctive gowns as badges of their position and office.

When the federal government was organized the judges in all the state courts wore such robes. The custom was believed to make the proceedings more solemn and dignified.

The first Supreme Court of the United States was composed of Chief Justice John Jay and five associate justices. When they held their first session in 1790 in the Exchange Building in New York City they all had on judicial robes in conformity with prevailing custom.

These first robes are supposed to have been black and red in color. A senator of the time referred to the "six venerable judges in particolored robes." Chief Justice Jay's robe was described by a contemporary as being black silk with salmon-colored facings.

Attorneys appearing before the Supreme Court are required to conform to certain general dress etiquette, but they are not required to wear robes or special gowns.

All other judges in the United States have discontinued the practice of wearing judicial robes.

But there are still people who feel that judges should be required to wear such paraphernalia.

In 1937 the Bar Association of Alexandria, Virginia, adopted the following resolution:

"That this association now respectfully requests the judge of the Corporation Court of the City of Alexandria and the judge of the Sixteenth Judicial Circuit Court of Virginia, while they are presiding during the session of court in this city, to wear the generally accepted judicial robe or gown."

6-POUNDER ANTI-TANK GUN

Indicative of the versatility of the infantry, and the manner in which they adapt weapons from almost every branch of the service to their own advantage, is their use of the deadly, six-pounder anti-tank gun. Mobile to the extreme, the weapon is generally towed behind a light truck. In difficult terrain, it is light enough to be man-handled into position by its five-man crew. With a long, effective range, the gun can be set up in a matter of seconds, and pours its deadly armor-piercing shells into the vitals of the enemy's lumbering mobile units. The projectile, weighing but six pounds, punches a small round hole in the enemy armor and richochets inside with a devastating effect. If gas supplies are hit, the tank will go up in flames. The number of rounds that can be fired by a trained gun crew in a minute reaches almost rapid-fire speed.

OWNERS OF COMMERCIAL VEHICLES!

Apply NOW for your new Gasoline Ration Books

On and after April 1, no graded gasoline will be sold except upon the presentation of a 1944-45 ration coupon book.

To assure themselves sufficient gasoline to carry on normal business activities after March 31, operators of commercial vehicles are urged to complete at once and in detail the required application for each of their vehicles. By co-operating in this way, they will help to reduce to a minimum any delay in issuing new gasoline licenses and ration coupon books.

The operation of the 1944-45 gasoline rationing plan is basically the same as that now in effect. After investigation, an allowance will be fixed for each commercial vehicle. This allowance will be measured to the essential wartime needs of the vehicle.

On and after April 1, service station attendants will not accept gasoline ration coupons unless the license plate number of the motor vehicle for which they were issued is written in ink on each coupon. With the 1944-45 gasoline license, a new windshield sticker, bearing the letter "T", will be issued. Until this sticker is affixed, no gasoline may be purchased for the vehicle.

PROCEDURE TO BE FOLLOWED BY APPLICANT FOR "COMMERCIAL" CATEGORY

Every commercial vehicle operator must obtain a separate gasoline license and ration coupon book for each commercial vehicle in operation, and must file a separate application for each such vehicle. Here is how he obtains his gasoline license and ration coupon book or books:

1 He secures his 1944 vehicle license plate and/or permit.
2 He secures an application form from his nearest Post Office.
3 He fills out this form, answering every question completely and accurately.
4 He has this form properly endorsed.
5 He sends by mail to the nearest Regional Oil Control Office his application; his motor vehicle registration permit and a $1 registration fee. (The fee of $1 must accompany each application).
6 He will receive, after a week or more during which his application is carefully investigated; his gasoline license and ration coupon book or books, and his motor vehicle registration permit will be returned.

Victory Recipes

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief, Consumer Section Dominion Department of Agriculture

Nutritionists constantly stress the value of whole grain cereals for the health-protective vitamins and minerals they contain. There is another excellent reason for using them in many types of recipes . . . they taste good!

In recent weeks the test kitchen in the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has been a busy place. There the home economists have been at work testing all sorts of recipes using whole grain cereals. Here are some of the results of their experiments — recipes you will be glad to add to your collection.

Rolled Oat Batter Pudding

Mix and sift flour, baking powder, cinnamon and salt, add rolled oats. Add dry ingredients alternately with the milk to the creamed mixture. Pour batter over apples and bake in a moderate over, 350 degrees, for 40 minutes. Six servings. Note: Other sweetened, fresh or drained canned fruit may be used instead of apples.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Graceful Introduction a Social Asset

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm keeping my eyes and ears open to learn all I can about introductions, for I certainly agree with you that the ability to make a graceful introduction is a most valuable social asset. A little while ago I didn't pay much attention to the way people made introductions, or even to the way I myself made them. But now I watch every word used and the way it's used. Of course I've discovered my shortcomings about making introductions, but at least now I can see them, hear them and try to correct them. And, as you've said so often in your column, it's a wonderful satisfaction to know that you can make an introduction properly, that the right words automatically come to your lips.

Now I have a question that I have never noticed discussed in your column. One of my girl friends who is a very lovely and well-bred girl, very often uses a person's full name when she is making an introduction. For example, sometimes she says, "Mary Robinson, this is Dorothy Thomas." And the other day, at her home, I heard her make this introduction, "Mother, may I present Lieut. Philip Rhodes?" Is this form, or rather these forms of introduction correct? If so, on what occasions?

Jeannie

I'm delighted with your good news of your increasing awareness about introduction forms. Our personality and our manners are so revealing "on parade" when we make an introduction that it is fortifying to know that all is well with what we're saying and how we're saying it.

Yes, each of the forms of introduction your friend uses has a special charm. The very informal use of the full names, "Mary Robinson, this is Dorothy Thomas" is delightfully appropriate when you are introducing two very close friends of yours. The fact that you are choosing to use the informal names may also, under many circumstances, mean that both of these close friends of yours have heard much about the other, and the way you say names can suggest that you now have the happiness of making these two dear friends of yours known to each other.

As to the other form of introduction, "Lieut. Philip Rhodes." Although in this form of introduction, the first name is rarely mentioned, I heartily approve of mentioning it, and I often wonder why people don't do this often. Somehow mentioning the full name with the title (not only a military title, but the civilian Mr. or Mrs. or Miss) gives a distinction to the name, to the person being introduced and to the introduction. And if you notice carefully this mentioning of the full name of the person being introduced is a distinct aid in our chances of catching the name correctly, and therefore in being able to use it in our acknowledgment of the introduction and in the conversation following the introduction.

Choice of Right Powder Important for Blondes

By HELEN FOLLETT

BLONDIES are usually blessed with complexions of delicate texture and what the beauticians call "thinness" and appearance of transparency. They are less likely to be bothered with coarse pores and blackheads than are the brunettes. But they wrinkle early because of the more fragile tissue structure. Brunette skins are like damask, blonde ones like fine satin.

Blondes are inclined to have colorful cheeks because the transparent skin permits the rosiness of the blood streams to be revealed. The epidermal coat of the brunette, somewhat more substantial, puts up a strong resistance against wind and strong sunlight. All complexions must be petted with creams, but blondes call for extra faithful attention.

The true blonde, with blue eyes and glided locks, will find a combination of flesh and rachelle powder desirable. Nearly always her skin has a slight golden cast, therefore flesh shades alone are not a happy choice.

As blonde tresses vary in tones and shades, so do complexion. The selection of the powder is important. If it is lighter than the skin it will be too revealing; it should be slightly darker, creamier, richer.

Apply Rouge Sparingly

All blondes and red heads should watch their rouge; that's where many of them trip up. The delicate, flowery effect must be attained, especially now when make-up is being soft pedaled, put on with restraint and discretion.

If the light headed girl uses rouge—of course she uses a lipstick; everybody does—she is not entitled to play with eye shadows. If shadows are necessary for her she should apply them sparingly.

Victory Recipes Tested, Approved By Dominion Experimental Kitchen

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief, Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

If your pies are definitely not the kind that "Mother used to make" don't despair; get out the rolling pin and try again, giving heed to these hints from the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and following one of the recipes given below.

First of all, know your flours. Excellent pastry may be made from all-purpose flour, but, if you are using all-purpose in a recipe which specifies pastry flour use 2 tablespoons less of the all-purpose for each cup of pastry flour called for.

The lard or other mild-flavoured fat should be cut into the flour until it is the size of small peas. Use two knives with a scissor-like motion or a pastry blender to do the job.

Except when using the hot water method, all ingredients should be cold.

When possible make pastry the day before, wrap it in waxed paper and chill it thoroughly. This 'aging' of the dough makes it easier to handle in the rolling and gives a better texture and flavour. Pastry will keep for several days in the ice box.

Much otherwise good pastry meets its Waterloo in the rolling. Be stingy with the flour used for flouring the board and pin, using just enough to keep the dough from sticking. Handle the rolling pin with a light touch and roll from the centre towards the edge, turning the dough around but not ever.

Don't stretch the dough but rather ease it into the pie plate. Dough that is stretched will shrink and toughen in the baking.

Upper crusts need ventilation to allow steam to escape and prevent them from becoming soggy on the inside. Those slits aren't just a decoration, so don't forget them.

Roll the upper crust before putting the filling in the pie. Otherwise the lower crust may become soaked while waiting.

For a pastry shell, fit the dough loosely over the outside of a pie plate, prick well and bake upside-down. A second pie plate may be placed over the shell. Turn over for the last five minutes of baking and remove the upper pan, so that the inside of the shell will brown nicely.

To keep tart shells from bulging and losing their shape during cooking, a single layer of clean dried beans or peas may be sprinkled on the bottom, after pricking the dough. They should be removed for the last 5 minutes baking. Kept in a covered glass jar the beans or peas may be used repeatedly.

Always put pastry into a hot oven, 425-450°F. This causes the quick expansion of the air that is enclosed in the dough and makes a light pastry. With filled pies or tarts, the heat is reduced after 10 or 15 minutes to 324-350°F to allow the filling to cook without burning the crust.

Plain Pastry

3 cups sifted all-purpose flour or
3 1-3 cups pastry flour
1½ teaspoons salt
6 tablespoons cold water
¾ cup lard or mild-flavoured fat

Mix flour and salt. Remove ½ cup of the flour and blend the water into it, making a smooth paste. Cut the fat into the remaining flour until the pieces are the size of small peas. Mix in the flour paste, combine until the dough clings together. Chill before rolling. Makes enough pastry for 3 nine-inch pie shells; or 1 double crust and one nine-inch shell; or 3 dozen two-inch tart shells.

Hot Water Pastry

¾ cup lard or mild-flavoured fat
⅓ cup boiling water
1½ teaspoons salt
3 cups sifted all-purpose flour or
3 1-3 cups pastry flour

Cream the fat and stir in the boiling water, a little at a time; cool slightly. Add salt and flour, mixing with a quick, cutting motion; do not stir. Chill before rolling. Makes same amount as plain pastry recipe.

Whole Wheat Pastry

1¾ cups sifted all-purpose flour or
2 cups pastry flour
1½ cups whole wheat flour
1½ teaspoons salt
¾ cup lard or mild-flavoured fat
⅓ cup cold water (approx.)

Mix flours and salt. Cut in fat until pieces are the size of small peas. Gradually add cold water and combine until the dough clings together. Chill before rolling. Makes same amount as plain pastry recipe.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ont.

Q. Will it be necessary for me this year, as last, to count the number of my jelly jars and estimate my requirements of canning sugar?

A. No, all such mathematical calculations are out this year. Every consumer will be allowed ten pounds of canning sugar by use of the first 10 spare F coupons becoming valid on dates to be announced.

Q. As a "war bride" newly arrived in Canada, how should I go about getting a ration book?

A. Please apply to your Local Ration Board which will deal with your request.

Q. I was asked to pay $3.50 a quarter-cord for mixed deadwood with a further 50c for delivery a short distance. Is that price according to the ceiling?

A. No, your supplier is trying to overcharge you for this wood, the price being definitely above the ceiling fixed for your area. Moreover, delivery is included in the maximum selling-price authorized under the Fuel-Wood Order.

Q. How can I tell if imported fresh fruits and vegetables are being sold at retail under ceiling prices?

A. These prices are obtainable at your office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and retailers are, moreover, required to display the size or weight and price of the article sold.

Q. Do I still need to turn in a used metal tube when I buy tooth paste?

A. No, that order has been rescinded on account of the small amount of tin now being incorporated in new tubes. Consumers are asked, however, to continue to turn in their old tubes wherever possible so that their tin content may be recovered.

Q. When there seems to be such a surplus of meat in this country, why is its rationing continued?

A. Such rationing is continued for the reason that it was originally imposed—to make any surplus available for consumption in the United Kingdom. At the moment, there is a temporary transportation difficulty which is leading to some congestion here. Should it happen that any type or grade of meat cannot be taken by the United Kingdom, consideration will be given to ensure that any surplus in such types or grades shall be made available for domestic consumption.

Q. Are any meat coupons good for the purchase of canned salmon?

A. No, only those which have validity at the time of purchase.

Q. Can I throw away my No. 3 ration book when the No. 4 book is issued?

A. Not if you wish to become eligible for canning sugar next summer, as the first 10 spare F coupons in the No. 3 book are to be used for that purpose.

Treatment of Colds

Many surveys made in the larger industries have shown that almost one-third of the total time lost from work due to sickness is the result of colds. In these times, then, when the loss of time from work is serious, everything possible should be done to keep colds from occuring, and to clear them up as quickly as possible when they do occur.

Doctor Irene Dixon of England says that three things are necessary from these standpoints:

First, as soon as a cold starts, it should be immediately treated to relieve the patient of discomfort, to lessen the chances of complications, and to keep the infection from spreading to other workers. Then, measures to increase the resistance to colds should be employed and, lastly, attempts should be made to use such measures as will help, perhaps, to keep the colds from spreading through the community.

Among the methods suggested for increasing the resistance to colds are ultra-violet light and various vitamins. There is some evidence that these two things may have beneficial results. Vitamins A and D may be given by mouth in the proper dosage under the directions of the physician. The general use of these measures, however, apparently is not to be recommended. They work only in certain cases, particularly in those persons who are especially susceptible to colds.

Vaccines of various types have also been employed for building up the resistance to colds. Perhaps in a certain few cases, these vaccines are beneficial. In other instances, they seem to do little good.

To keep colds from spreading, the wearing of face masks has been suggested. However, many persons will not wear these masks because they are uncomfortable and inconvenient. Gargles and nasal sprays used daily also have been found to have little merit. Recent studies with the sulfa drugs also seem to show that these drugs do not do a great deal of good, nor is it though even, that they do much to prevent complications. However, many physicians employ sulfa drugs, especially if the cold has not been present for more than a day or two. Doctor Dixon thinks that the use of the sulfa drugs in these early cases may ward off the colds and help especially to prevent complications, such as infections of the ears and lungs.

Sprays of various chemical substances have been used in places where large groups of people gather. These sprays, it is thought, get rid of many of the germs in the air and thus cut down on the number of colds which persons may contract. A powder made up of a mixture of sulfathiazole and magnesium carbonate has been recommended for treatment of colds in the early stages. The powder is used by sniffing it into the nose about six times a day. It is a safe and simple form of treatment. No reactions to the drugs have been observed. Persons who are particularly liable to catch cold should consult with the physician concerning the preventing measures which may be found most effective in each individual case.

Fashion Flashes

THE BEST EVER is the verdict on our new American fashions for Spring. Grand for daytime wear is a long-sleeved softly cut shirt-waist frock of navy blue striped white jersey. Softly tied neckline, pearl studs and a wide red leather belt.

SET OUT for a late afternoon-into night stretch wearing a trim ankle strap sandal, nice in patent or suede, with open-toe vamp composed of criss-cross straps. Favorite shoe for the slim ankle only.

TOUCH UP such popular colors as gray or camel-hair beige with white. Both colors are important because of the dye situation. White pique revers or bandings, white gloves and a white felt beret will give new interest to a plain gray suit or coat or a beige camel coat.

NOT ONE SIDE or the other but perfectly straight and balanced on the head is the proper angle for many of the new hats. A flat-top of black or navy belting with double brim of the fabric accordion-pleated, makes a nice flat-top to wear with a tailored suit.

A NEW TIE UP betwixt frock and accessories is always interesting. Thus a frock of tissue thin navy blue woolen has lower part of bodice and upper part of skirt draped to the side and held by an enormous bow of navy silk crepe with a woven design of tiny pink and white rosebuds. Same material is used for gloves and for a tiny tricorne.

MEMO for those who make their own frocks. If you're making a print frock or suit, save sufficient fabric to line an accompanying bag, say one of the big bags of straw or straw braid that will be featured for late spring and all through the summer.

CANADIENS SEEK TO SHATTER OLD LEAGUE RECORD

Now Have 63 Points and 11 Games to Make More Than 77 Points

MEET THE LEAFS

By The Canadian Press

Montreal Canadiens, having already passed their own club record of 60 points, seek in their remaining 11 games to shatter the National Hockey League mark of 77 points in a single season established by Boston Bruins in 1929-30.

Canadiens now have 63 points and can exceed the Bruin standard by achieving seven victories, or the equivalent. Boston established its mark in a 44-game schedule, however, while Canadiens will have played 50 when the season ends March 19.

Now 18 points ahead of the 2nd-place Detroit Red Wings, Canadiens face a tough schedule with three games in the next four days. They will be at home tonight to Toronto Maple Leafs and to Boston Saturday, with an out-of-town date against Detroit scheduled for Sunday.

Another capacity house is expected for the Montreal-Toronto clash. The only other contest tonight sends Detroit to New York for a game with the tailend Rangers.

6 Canadian Airmen Reported Dead in Crash On Portuguese Border

Lisbon, Feb. 24 — (AP) — Six Canadian airmen were reported today to have been killed when an R.A.F. bomber crashed a few miles off Montalegre, on the Portuguese-Spanish border.

The body of the plane fell on Portuguese soil, the wings and one motor dropping on the Spanish side. A series of explosions, believed to have been caused by the plane's bombs, were heard after the crash.

Poor visibility was believed to have caused the crash.

CANADIAN SAILOR ON LEAVE REPORTED BOMB VICTIM

London, Feb. 24 — (CP Cable)—A Canadian sailor on leave in London was reported to have been killed when an unexploded anti-aircraft shell penetrated a Y. M. C. A. hostel roof during Tuesday night's air raid. The shell crashed into a dormitory where the youth, whose identity was not learned, was sleeping with a number of other Canadians.

BELLEVILLE GIRL ON THIS TEAM

Undefeated in women's service basketball at Ottawa, the Wrens of H.M.C.S. "Bytown" are naturally proud of their record. On the roster of the club is June Whiting, 60A West Bridge St., Belleville, and former employee of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission here. Miss Whiting first played basketball at the Belleville Collegiate and today is one of the chief scoring threat with the Ottawa Wrens. The girls organized their team early in January and practice after duty hours and play most of their games on Saturday. Lieut. Commander J. H. Rooney is their commanding officer.

From all parts of Canada, the team members shown in this picture are from left to right: standing, Christine Brown from Timmins, Ont.; Mary Emmett, Toronto; Volda McLeod, Toronto; Mary Webster, Vancouver; Dixie Elhatton, Winnipeg; Hazel Dickinson, Toronto; June Whiting, Belleville; Sub. Lieut. Les Monk, coach and manager from Regina, Sask.; A. C. Ley from Vancouver, and Helen Rathwell from Medicine Hat, Alta. Missing from the picture is Zeke Caudwell from Toronto.

OSHAWA SWAMPS YOUNG RANGERS

By The Canadian Press

The Generals played for keeps last night at Oshawa when they swamped Toronto Young Rangers 15-2, thereby regaining the lead in group 1 of the junior "A" series of the O.H.A., with St. Michaels two points behind for second place. Meanwhile, at Hamilton the Whizzers retained third spot in the group standing by tossing a 12-5 reverse at Toronto Marlboros, Hamilton next will play at Stratford Friday night in a fixture worth 4 points to the winner but the Whizzers cannot overtake the Toronto students.

Ken Smith and Bob Love helped appreciably in the compiling of Oshawa's adding-machine total with a quartette of goals each while Curry and Taggart added two apiece, Batten, Porter, Chenier and Shewchuk dividing the balance. The two scorers for Young Rangers were Rutledge, who copped the first counter fo the one-sided match, and Dewsbury, who was responsible for the final goal of the contest.

Scoring stars for the Whizzers in the tilt at Hamilton were Murray Comfort and Tomiuk, each with 4, while Mirco Narduzzi bagged three for his share. Jackin getting a single. For the Dukes, Leachman and Lawson accounted for a pair each and James added the fifth counter.

Toronto, Feb. 24 (CP)—Now that hockey, lacrosse and golf are giving the Hall of Fame idea its full measure of publicity, we think the time is ripe to start a Poker Hall of Fame....To lead off we'd like to contribute the pair of dice that regularly appear with devastating effect to end the Friday evening sessions of the Brookdale Peanuts and Poker Society....And as a relic of no intrinsic value we'll throw in the blue chip we bit in two while repressing a scream after drawing a pat straight flush the other night ....We understand a fellow in Plum Coulee, Man., once made a pair of deuces beat a full straight. Those deuces should be accorded a place of honor....On other Hall of Fame fronts, activities continue. Fred (Montreal Gazette) Kerner reports talk around his city is for establishment of a lacrosse Hall of Fame in Lachine, Que., where the game long has flourished....Kerner says, incidentally, that Mann Cup play-offs seem assured again this year with plans for a national semi-final matching British Columbia and Ontario champions in Toronto, the winner to meet the Quebec champions in Montreal in the final.

Grid Greans:

Flt. Lt. Lew Hayman, the football fellow, is in the west again, still talking about his favorite game. Bob (Calgary Herald) Mamini couldn't get Lew to express preference for the old western code which permitted blocking up to 10 yards ahead of scrimmage but Hayman did say this: "In any game where you have three downs to gain 10 yards, blocking won't give it to you unless there's a fourth down." With three downs lone long gain is needed and that can be made only by lateral passing, says Lew. "When the backfield can't block, the players are used on laterals where the risk is greater but so is the gain." ....A couple of Hayman's old stars of Toronto championship days, Bill Stukus, and Art Evans, used to claim Lew was a Simon Legree in training season. Now they're both with the R.C.A.F. overseas and Bill writes: "Lew is a sissy compared to the commando course Art and I are taking now."

Chitchat:

Hamilton Wildcats are being dined by the city tonight to celebrate their Dominion football title ....That scoreless tie Leafs played at Chicago Sunday was the first no-goal game this season and only the second in the last three years.. In the next six weeks, Winnipeg hockey drew only 10,000.

OWNER IS HIGH ON PSYCHIC BID

Miami, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP)—H. E. Jacoby, a Chicago business executive, thinks he made a sound investment when he acquired a racing stable last year and became the owner of the three-year-old chestnut colt, Good Bid.

Under Jacoby's brand-new colors, the flying son of Psychic Bid has never finished worse than second in four outings at Hialeah Park, in his last eight races he has been in the money six times and is installed as one of the favorites for the $15,000 Flamingo Saturday.

Don's overlook him in that mile-and-an-eighth test of possible Kentucky Derby contenders, counsels Jacoby.

Not Him

"Why you wretch," screamed the woman, "I'll teach you a lesson you'll never forget. I'll knock you silly, that's what I'll do."

And she administered a sound cuff.

"Oh, you will, will you?" roared the man as he landed a nice right to the jaw. "And what will I be doing while you're knocking me silly? Take that. And that. And that."

A policeman hurried up.

"What's on here?" he demanded.

The woman regarded the intruder angrily.

"You keep out of this," she advised. "This man is my husband. We've been married ten years."

"Well, then," declared the policeman, "why don't you do your fighting at home, instead of in public?"

The husband glared.

"What?" he shouted. "And break all the furniture?"

(Two blows, that's all)

You've often heard the expression —"there were only two blows struck, I hit him and he hit the ground."

Here's one that nearly equals that old saying. Two blows were struck and a boxing bout ended in 24 seconds of elapsed time. That was the mark made by Billie Arnold in his fight with Henry Jordan at Philadelphia recently.

The kayo was the sixteenth straight for Arnold, all scored in two rounds or less. The shortest fight on record was at Corpus Christi, Tex., May 12, 1940, when Willard Dean knocked out Claude Allen in 11 seconds.

(On sound footing)

Baseball in Oshawa looks to be back on a sound footing according to George Campbell who tells about the party held this week by the Oshawa Minor Baseball Association as follows: "The wind-up party staged by the officers of the Oshawa Minor Baseball Association, last evening at Masonic Temple, was a very successful affair. One of the highlights of the evening, of course, aside from the enjoyable dancing session which concluded the program, was the refreshment intermission, in which league members of the six minor teams, all batted at least .700 the "hot-dogs," sandwiches, cakes, coffee and Coca-Cola taking a terrific licking. President Frank McCallum was busy at a council meeting, so for the first part of the evening, Vice-Pres. Matt. Johnston carried on. The "champs" received their crests and windbreakers, gift from their sponsor, as well as the "Lynbrook Trophy" while the "runner-up" also received crests from the Association. The baseball picture was very interesting, and taken all round, it was a fitting climax to the very successful move to bring baseball back to Oshawa. Officials of the Oshawa Minor Baseball Association, i.e. all officers, executive members, coaches, managers, sponsors, umpires and others who "gave a hand" can feel justly proud of their 1943 work. It looks as if baseball is back on solid ground here in Oshawa. After some of the remarks made last night, we might be able to get more than one lone "hardball diamond here in Oshawa this next summer. The Mayor and a couple of his aldermen were listening."

(Command play-offs.)

In the event the ice is too soft for tonight's R.C.A.F. play-off between Mountain View and No. 6 Depot the game will be played Friday night. This is the first game of the district Air Force finals to select a winner to enter the Command playdowns. In their first meeting the Depot lads won 7 to 3, but in the return tussle Dan Cowley and Pat McReavy's outfit handed the Repair lads a 3 to 1 reverse, the only defeat suffered by the No. 6 sextette all season. As tonight's game, ice permitting, is of the sudden death nature everything is at stake and the Airmen will be going all out and shooting the works. Tonight's winner next meets the Trenton "Flyers" and the winner of this game advances to the Command play-offs, that sees the Camp Borden Airmen open this series at the Hume Arena sometime next week.

For additional hockey consumption the local juveniles open the second round O.J.H.A. versus the winner of the Bowmanville-Whitby series next week.

(Play-off postponed.)

The Combines at Trenton junior play-off game had to be postposed last night owing to the mild weather. However, if it turns colder later in the week the game will be played Friday night. Incidentally there seems to be some dispute between the clubs regarding referees following the 8-2 shellacking the Combines gave Trenton in Stirling with Stan Jackson's crowd on the beefing end. Unless the clubs settle their differences before tomorrow the O.H.A. may step in and name two neutral officials, presumably "Toots" Holway and "Speedy" St. Louis.

(Remember when)

It was just 21 years ago tonight that President Frank Calder, of the National Hockey League, introduced the two-referee system into major hockey circles. Employed for the balance of the 1923 season, the plan lasted until the end of the 1937-'38 campaign when the system of one referee, assisted by a linesman, was inaugurated. Since then the major league has even tried a referee and two linesmen, but this plan was abandoned for the linesman-referee system.

HERSHEY BEARS DOWN HORNETS

(By The Canadian Press.)

Hershey Bears have handed Pittsburgh Hornets two 6-3 defeats in as many nights.

Last night the Hornets were beaten 6-3 by Bears on home ice, after they took a 6-3 thrashing at Hershey Tuesday night.

The two defeats removed Hornets from a possible spot in the post-season American Hockey League play-offs.

Lloyd Roubell, Pittsburgh centre, scored his 100th goal in nine years of league play, but the 2-1 first period lead he helped get for his teammates faded in the second session before a three goal attack by Bears. Tony Hemmerling and Art Giroux scored the other two Hornets counters.

Hec Pozzo led the Bears' offensively by scoring two counters. Bulldog Drummond, Peggy O'Neill, Ross Knowles, Henry Lauzon, and Bob Daley were the other Hershey goal-getters.

New York, (AP)—After 20 years in Yankee stadium as player and coach with the New York Americans, Earl Bryan Combs yesterday was granted a year's leave of absence by President Ed G. Barrow so that he may devote full time to his Kentucky Farm. Combs had participated in 11 World Series.

Miami, (AP)—Manager Leo (Lippy) Durocher of the Dodgers expressed surprise yesterday at the suggestion of President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Club that he should return to the player line-up by holding down the shortstop position once more. Durocher suggested Rickey must have been thinking of "the Durocher of 20 years ago or thereabouts".

Chicago, (AP)—Clifford (Fido) Purpur, bouncing forward with Chicago Blackhawks, will be lost to hockey for the balance of the season, it was revealed yesterday, because of injuries received in competition. He is suffering from a ruptured kidney, with signs of infection also developing.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 311

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

All popular games have their thrillers. In baseball, a home run with the bases loaded. In football, a runback of the kickoff to a touchdown. In golf, a blast out of a bunker that dribbles into the cup. In bridge, bidding and making a grand slam.

Slams are now reached in a scientific manner. A player learns of 12 tricks, what's trump, and has two aces and a king or better. That influences him to bid four no-trump.

That four no-trump bid is the convention for asking partner how many aces and kings he holds. Partner is forced to respond with a convention answer.

When using The Kibitzer's convention answers, five clubs shows no aces; five diamonds, an ace and no kings; five hearts, an ace and one king; five spades, an ace and two kings; five no-trump, an ace and three kings.

You are south in this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠ None
♥ A K J 3 4
♦ A J 10 8 4
♣ A 5 4

NORTH
♠ A K 10 3 2
♥ Q 7 6 2
♦ K 7 6 2
♣ None

After exchanging several bids with partner, you learn that the trumps will be hearts and that your pair holds at least 12 tricks. With better than two aces and a king, you bid four no-trump.

Partner responds with five spades; the convention for showing an ace and two kings. So, you see the all four aces and three kings; the opponents must have no aces and one king.

Partner must have the spade ace. That and one of his kings will take care of your club suit. But even if his other king is diamonds, you may lose a diamond trick unless he also has the queen.

In this manner, you have scientifically reached what should be a safe decision to bid a small slam in hearts. Of course, you might take a chance and bid seven hearts.

To bid grand slams and make them requires a lot of pluck. But don't forget it also takes a modicum of luck.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Sea Wolf"

Today's picture at the McCarthy Theatre is "The Sea Wolf," Warner Bros. version of the famous novel by Jack London, starring Edward G. Robinson, Ida Lupino and John Garfield, with a supporting cast headed by Gene Lockhart, Barry Fitzgerald, Alexander Knox, Stanley Ridges and Francis McDonald.

"The Sea Wolf" is a powerful story of life aboard the hell-ship "Ghost," where Wolf Larsen ruled the lives and often the deaths of the men in his shanghaied crews. Into this milieu comes a frightened young girl who is fleeing from prison and a sensitive young author picked up from the wreck of a San Francisco ferry. The impact of this pair upon the oddly assorted crew of "The Ghost," makes a dramatic and memorable story, which finds its perfect medium in film.

A tender and highly unusual love story is woven through the powerful action, with Ida Lupino and John Garfield as the sweethearts. Robinson, of course, portrays Larsen. Alexander Knox, a very promising screen newcomer, plays the role of the young author, and Barry Fitzgerald, one of the screen's most brilliant character actors, plays "Cookie," a sniveling, slimy coward who fawningly reports to Larsen everything that goes on among the other members of the crew.

Second feature attraction now playing at the McCarthy is "Moonlight in Vermont," with Gloria Jean, Ray Malone and the Jivin' Jacks and Jills.

AT THE BELLE

"Henry Aldrich Haunts a House"

Paramount gave its answer to those people who doubt whether hilarious comedy can be combined with clammy chills when the newest of the Aldrich series, "Henry Aldrich Haunts a House" opens today at the Belle Theatre. This writer can report that the audience will eat it up.

In this laugh-filed chiller-diller, Henry Aldrich, played by the ingratiating Jimmy Lydon, goes to the mat with an assortment of ghosts, ghouls and goblins, and though the issue is in doubt for upwards of seventy minutes, Henry finally emerges the victor.

But not until young Aldrich is accused of murdering his principal, Mr. Bradley (Vaughan Glaser), not until Henry revisits the scene of the crime, is the mystery cleared up and honor and dignity restored to our hero.

Henry plunges into hot water almost in the opening sequences when he decides to become a pseudo-scientist the better to impress his new girl, Elise Towers, (Joan Mortimer). Henry shuns street brawls even though justified which brings utter disgust and indignation into the life of his erstwhile chum, Dizzy (Charles Smith).

The story begins to move at a fast clip when Henry, in Elise's company, downs a test tube full of a mysterious fluid designed to increase a man's strength threefold. He gets deathly sick on his way home and stumbles into a haunted house. To add to Henry's burdens, the house is filled with prehistoric monsters and valuable art objects whose safe keeping has been entrusted to Mr. Bradley.

What happens when the goons and munnies start chasing Henry around the house makes for an hour of lively entertainment.

"Uncensored", Gripping Drama

Romance, mystery and adventure blend in the second feature "Uncensored", an action-filled drama featuring Eric Portman Phyllis Calvert and Griffith Jones. A new Community Sing film will be presented on the same program.

The engagement ends on Friday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Panama Hattie"
(Musical Comedy)

Taking full advantage of the versatility of its cast, "Panama Hattie", starring Ann Sothern and Red Skelton, and coming tonight to the Capitol Theatre, is heralded as having all the varied elements of screen entertainment.

The new Metro-Godwyn-Mayer musical, based on the New York production, revolves around three romances, Uncle Sam's defence activities in the Canal Zone, numerous spies and is liberally sprinkled with song, dance and laughter. Lavishly decorated seats form the background for the song and dance numbers, including Cole Porter songs from the New York show and five new numbers written especially for the picture.

AT THE CAPITOL — Ann Sothern, Dan Dailey, Jr., and Jackie Horner are teamed with Red Skelton in M-G-M's filmization of the stage success "Panama Hattie," now at the Capitol with the added western "Wagon Tracks West."

"Wagon Tracks West"

Republic's "Wagon Tracks West" opens tonight at the Capitol theatre, and this thrilling story of the west stars Wild Bill Elliott, one of the most colorful cowboy stars ever put under contract by the studio.

He was brought up on his grandfather's ranch in Missouri and his earliest childhood memories are those of the old muskets hanging over every doorway in readiness for any emergency. One of the early pioneers in his section, his grandfather kept to the traditions of the old west right up to the time of his death.

George "Gabby" Hayes gives valuable support to Elliott in "Wagon Tracks West" which was directed by Howard Bretherton.

HONUS WAGNER STARTS 12TH YEAR AS PIRATES' COACH

Former Famous Shortstop Celebrates 70th Birthday and Still Going

PLAYED WITH PIRATES

Pittsburgh, Feb. 24 — (AP) — Honus Wagner, oldest active man in a major league baseball uniform, observes his 70th birthday today — but with only 33 candles on his cake.

"This is my 33rd year in National League uniform," smiles the bandy-legged "Flying Dutchman" of baseball's rough-and-ready era. "Besides I don't feel 70 anyway. I feel more like 33."

The league's former hitting and baserunning champ is starting his 12th year as a coach for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Honus doesn't look — or act — his age. Septegenarian or no, he says he'll be out on the field as usual this season during pre-game drills, passing on his wealth of baseball lore to rookies and veterans and showing them, with his 70-year-old arm, exactly how to field that ball.

Unless he's lost some of his 1943 shyness, and he'd be the first to deny that, he'll still be first on his feet this year when there's a "beef" with the umpire and he'll still "jockey" opposing pitchers with the best of them.

Honus' playing days ended in 1917, but as he goes about his winter duties as deputy sheriff in Carnegie he is stopped constantly — for chats about baseball past and present.

Nazi War on French Guerillas in Savoie Proves Failure

Barcelona, Spain, Feb. 24 — (AP) —Only negligible results were achieved in a three-weeks campaign against French guerillas in the Savoie department of France by a mixed force of 1,500 German SS and regular army troops and some 20,000 ostensibly pro-German French gendarmes, mobile guards and volunteers, border reports said.

The Germans who lost possibly a quarter of their force claimed guerilla snipers accounted for only a few more German casualties than were picked off from the rear by supposedly pro-German Vichyite troops of villagers.

Tigers and Phillies Each Have 33 Players in Armed Forces

By The Canadian Press

According to pre-season data issued by the American League, Detroit Tigers and Philadelphia Phillies have the longest honor roll of players serving in the war with each having 33 in the armed forces. The team rosters range from 39 on the list of both Washington Senators and Chicago White Sox to the 26 claimed by Detroit. Chicago will have five players who have been lured out of retirement because of the manpower shortage as well as five youngsters fresh from amateur ranks. Washington has also come up with five ex-amateurs. Altogether there are 16 rookies for the loop who boast no previous pro diamond experience.

The youngest of the American League newcomers will be Carl Scheib, with Philadelphia, who observed his 17th birthday Jan. 1, a few months younger than Emery Hresko, a high school student who is turning out with Detroit Tigers. The oldest active players to sign 1944 contracts are Joe Heving of Cleveland and Jim Turner of New York, both of whom admit 39 years.

Fritzie Zivic, one-time world welterweight boxing champion, asserted at Pittsburgh last night he would like to have one more ring appearance before joining the U. S. Navy March 13 and suggested a return bout with Ralph Zenelli of Providence. The latter secured the decision against Zivic at Boston last December.

Champion Phil Terranova of the Featherweight scrappers will defend his title in a 15-round bout with Sal Bartolo of east Boston at Boston Garden March 10, the Goodwin A. C. announced at Boston yesterday.

By raising $52,000 in 48 hours, the baseball fans of Sacramento, Calif., yesterday prevented the transfer of their Pacific Coast League franchise to Tacoma, Wash., although President Sam Breadon of the St. Louis Cardinals had announced the sale of the franchise to the Washington city.

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 24 — (CP) — The demobilization sweepstakes goes galloping merrily on in Britain with the latest entry from the Liberal party, whose program would return to civilian life immediately after the European war a far greater number of men than anything yet proposed.

Even on the eve of second-front battles, demobilization problems are receiving the most intensive study. The government has put forward through Labor Minister Bevin a "first in, firt out" plan and the Conservatives a "points" scheme, on which men would receive points for length of service, prospects of employment, marital status and so on.

The gravamen of the Liberal program is the recruiting of a professional army, as far as possible on a voluntary basis, to continue the war against Japan and remain in being after all hostilities cease. To attract volunteers, army pay and conditions of service would be greatly improved.

There are other recommendations in the Liberals' report, made by a committee of nine headed by Sir John Stewart-Milne, but the report is unlikely to be adopted if for no other reason than its conception of a limited army effort against Japan. While there is no question but that part of the huge forces gathered to crush Nazism will be demobilized after that is accomplished, the government has made it clear compulsory national service is to continue until the Japanese are defeated.

Bevin's program probably will be the one finally adopted, perhaps with concessions to the objections raised by such groups as the trades unions. The unions' insistence that key men must receive priority may be met, especially in the building trade which will have the vast job of "lifting" the face of the country.

The minister's program has the cabinet's support which means, because of the cabinet's coalition character, the support of Conservative, Labor and Liberal party leaders. And, probably just as important, the principle of "first in, first out" is the one most likely to sound the fairest to the greatest number of people.

Fresh reports have been cropping up about cabinet changes with Sir John Simon, Lord Chancellor who has been in office continuously since 1931, Agriculture Minister Hudson and War Secretary Sir James Grigg most prominently mentioned as due for changes.

S. Ldr. Hoodspith Of Belleville Given Important Post

With the RCAF Bomber Group Overseas, Feb. 24 — With over 1,000 flying hours to his credit on fighters, bombers, and flying boats, Squadron Leader R.R.B. Hoodspith of Belleville, Ontario, brings plenty of experience to his new job as chief signals officer of the R.C.A.F. Beaver base. Previous to enlisting in the R.C.A.F. in August, 1935, the new base signals officer spent nearly five years at sea as a radio operator and now acts in an advisory capacity to the commander of the base from which operate such well-known Canadian Lancaster units as the Goose, Thunderbird and Leaside squadrons.

Hoodspith is one of the most senior squadron leaders in the Canadian Bomber Group. He enlisted as a wireless electrical mechanic and has specialized in signals ever since. When aircrew category in the permanent air force was opened to other trades than aero-engine and airframe mechanics, "Bud" became the first sergeant pilot to remuster from the wireless trade.

At the outbreak of war he was posted to Western Air Command and flew Blackburn Shark torpedo bombers on coastal patrol as a sergeant pilot.

He was commissioned and posted to Ottawa in February 1940 as a signals officer with the school of army co-operation. Other postings took him to the East Coast, Newfoundland, and then overseas in December, 1942. In Britain he carried on with flying and signals work until joining the Canadian Bomber Group.

SPEAKER URGES NEW MUNICIPAL TAXATION SYSTEM

Ontario Legislature Will Hear Leaders in Debate on Throne Speech

LIBERALS NAME WHIP

Toronto, Feb. 24 — (CP)—Today is "Leaders' Day" in the Ontario Legislature and the newly-convened House will hear C.C.F. opposition Leader E. B. Jolliffe make his first full-dress speech and one which may well set the political tone in the closely-divided chamber.

Mr. Jolliffe, elected in York South at the provincial election last August along with 33 other C.C.F. members, will be speaking in the Throne Speech debate. His address is expected to be lengthy, perhaps taking up most of the afternoon, but there is a possibility Premier Drew may also be heard making a reply for his Progressive Conservative minority government.

The opposition leader indicated his intention of speaking by adjourning the speech debate yesterday. His motion came after Dr. Hobbs Taylor (HC—Huron) had been heard moving the address in reply to the Throne Speech and J. L. McDonald (PC—Stormont) had been heard as seconder.

In seconding the address in reply to the speech yesterday, Mr. McDonald, farmer native of the Cornwall district, brought loud applause from the C.C.F. benches with a declaration that Canada is "still in the economics of scarcity of distribution."

Wants New System

He called for a new municipal taxation system, said the state owes everyone opportunities for a full and happy life and warned that democracy might not survive if there were a return to the hard days of 1928-30 when farmers were getting 82 cents per 100 pounds for milk and five cents per pound for hogs.

The Stormont member's greatest applause followed his remarks that peacetime "overproduction" was in reality "underconsumption."

He said the system of distribution in charge "of the so-called economic experts has lagged." Economic conditions in Germany could be held partly responsible for Hitler's rise to power there and if Canada could solve the problem of distribution, then the standard of living could be set through production.

Warning Given

Dr. Taylor warned that this war could be lost through a belief that it would soon be over. He said Canada "was in for a shock" when the able-bodied soldiers start pouring out and the wounded start pouring in.

Dealing extensively with health the Huron doctor-member declared publication of the percentages of armed services rejections of medical unfits had shown "just how bad the national health had been allowed to drift..."

He believed however that no Canadian health scheme would be good enough unless it served all of the people and had medical services of the highest plane.

Right after adjournment of yesterday's session the 15 Liberals under former Premier Harry C. Nixon (L-Brant), held a caucus and elected J. Frank Kelly (L—Muskoka-Ontario) as party whip in the House. The caucus also decided to leave in the hands of the Haldimand-Norfolk Liberal Association the question of whether to contest the March 20 by-election in that riding. The by-election was made necessary through the death of Progressive Conservative member-elect W. W. Walsh. The C.C.F. and Progressive Conservatives have already indicated their intention of contesting the riding.

FINLAND IS SEEN IN CRITICAL STAGE

Question Seems to be Whether Govt. Can Save Country From Being a Battleground

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Feb. 24 —(AP)— Finland has apparently entered its most critical period of the year with the departure from Stockholm yesterday of Dr. Juno K. Paasikivi, peace envoy.

The immediate issue confronting the Helsinki government, assuming peace terms have been arranged with Russia, is whether it can save the country from the fate of Italy —prevent its becoming a battleground for German and Allied armies.

On the other hand, if peace negotiations at Stockholm failed, the issue is how long Finland can stave off Red army attacks expected to follow up the recent Helsinki air raids.

If the negotiations at Stockholm were conclusive, it is believed here the next few days should see the tale told—either in Finnish reports to rid the country of Germans or in new Russian blows at Finland.

A break in Germany's northern flank caused by withdrawal of Finland which would be similar to the break in the south caused by withdrawal of Italy.

Estimates of German strength presently in Finland vary greatly, but it seems certain they could make a stand against any Finnish defection—at least one that would do enormous damage to Finland—if they wanted to. But they would stand to lose their total force involved. The Nazis in Finland are jeopardized by progressive weakening of supply lines to Germany.

252,336 Tons Of R.A.F. Bombs Dropped on Germany

London, Feb. 24 (AP)—The R.A.F. alone up to mid-February has dropped 252,336 tons of bombs upon Germany, including 26,880 poured upon Berlin in the last three months, Home Secretary Herbert Morrison said.

The total of more than a quarter million tons during the war also included 56,000 tons of explosives striking Germany's industrial Ruhr.

Police said that at the time of the theft the youth had escaped from Bowmanville and while seeking food in his hometown broke into Fink's home and stole the money from an unused house and when brought from Bowmanville a few days ago led police to the money—still intact.

GERMAN AIR RAID DEFENCES BECOME MORE INGENIOUS

Reich Defenders, However, So Far, Have Not Found An Answer to Heavy Britain-Launched Bomber Assaults

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 24 —(CP)— The Germans are wracking their brains to find the answer to Britain's heavy bomber assault on the great Reich centres of munitions and supply. So far, it can be said, they haven't discovered the answer but they've been ingenious beyond imagination.

Months ago men who specialize in writing of the air war suggested that sooner or later the Germans would come up with the answer, that Bomber Command's work should be well done with all possible dispatch while the Germans still groped about for the antidote.

Meantime, of course, Bomber Command has just gone ahead as rapidly as possible blasting first one centre and then another.

One of the Bomber Command's high authorities, asked recently whether he thought the Germans might find the answer to the heavy bomber assault, replied that it was conceivable the Germans might do just that. Then he added: "By that time we'll probably have something new for them to work on."

That's how it is with Bomber Command—tactics are always changing.

And at the same time, that's how it is with the German defences which have been transferred almost entirely to the west to meet the aerial assault from Britain with the greatest possible number of night fighters. One authority recently suggested the German night fighter strength may have been reduced on the Russian and Italian fronts to little more than a handful of planes in order to give increased resistance in the west.

Defence Methods Varied.

The variety of the enemy's methods at defence was well illustrated during two recent raids on Brunswick. And at the same time, the enemy, by calling into use every kind of high explosive, projectile, bomb and rocket has acknowledged numerical inferiority in the air.

Our bombers must now fly through a barrage of rockets, trailed bombs, aerial smoke-screens, fighter-dropped flare paths, webs of wire, chaser bombs and much increased anti-aircraft fire.

As yet there isn't sufficient known about rockets to estimate their worth fully. Reports from combat speak of rockets being fired from many aircraft simultaneously to give the effect of a navy broadside.

Back from the Brunswick raid, FO. B. G. (Bert) Hughes of (210-29th St.) Calgary flying with an R.C.A.F. squadron in Bomber Command, told of the Germans using numerous comet-like bright white rockets which darted all over the target area in a crazy-quilt pattern.

"They were certainly fast," he said. "We were hustling along at about 180 miles an hour at 20,000 feet and those things were still darting past me on either side of the aircraft."

Other crewmen, among them Wireless Operator Sgt. D. Brewer of New Westminster, B.C., described the rockets as a ball or blob of fire with a long tail which shot across the sky at a terrific speed, finally exploding in a flash with sparks and debris falling in all directions.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. in Britain, Feb. 24 —(CP)— By now PO. G. L. Craig's good name has been cleared, but his face was red for a long, long time.

When the Fitzroy Harbor, Ont., instructor received a large parcel from his mother the usual crowd gathered round to see what delicacies it contained. Instead of the treasured fruit juices and food he expected, the found baby's garments—and he is a bachelor. He looked again at the label. Yes, it was for him and the sender was his mother.

Craig fled to a quiet corner to think. He had received a cable some time before from his mother in which she said, in effect: "Am very surprised. Why not told before?" He cast his mind back further and recalled—as he assigns most of his pay back home—that he had cabled for £15 to go on leave, and had received the puzzling reply.

It wasn't until he received a letter from his mother that he realized what had happened. His cable, instead of reading: "Going on leave. Please send £15," had said: "Have baby girl. Please send £15." Somewhere along the way the cable code number for such messages had been changed.

A couple of Kelowna, B.C., kids who have seen just about as much of the world as any airmen are Flt.-Lt. William Embrey and FO. Geoff Rennie, who constituted the crew of a Mosquito bomber until they were assigned to new duties.

They met accidentally at an operational training unit and have been together since. They've flown the Atlantic, been over Germany, and on lengthy trips through Gibraltar to Malta and other Middle East points. They went through Malta's heaviest blitz and at one stage in their career found themselves posted to Singapore, but they never got that far because things fell apart too fast thereabouts and they were diverted to Cairo.

Now they're ferrying aircraft to the Middle East and Rennie says it "makes quite a break, in England one day, and North Africa and sunshine and oranges the next."

Four Canadian members of a Halifax crew had a shaky introduction to operational flying. Their Lion Squadron bomber, piloted by Flt.-Sgt. A. J. King of (2 Hickson St.) Toronto, on his fourth 'op,' burst a tire seconds after a take-off for Frankfurt. The target was bombed successfully but on the way home the starboard inner engine cut and King had a ticklish job bringing down the big aircraft on three engines and one tire.

"He did a swell job, and we're all very grateful," said PO. W. A. Wilson of (3529 Clark Drive) Vancouver, the navigator. The other Canadians were Sgt. N. W. Baily of Arthur, Ont., bomb aimer; S. K. Vallieres of Nitro, Que., mid-upper gunner, and D. N. Cotton of Winnipeg, rear gunner.

A magnificent Bison head presented by the Canadian National Railways adorns the walls of the officers' mess of the Bison Squadron, commanded by Wing Cmdr. J. D. (Pat) Pattison, D.F.C., of Toronto.

Somewhere in Italy, Feb. 24—(CP)—Flt.-Lt. Joseph P. O'Driscoll, 43, of St. John's, Nfld., has had an ambition since the beginning of the war to be an air gunner in the bomber piloted by his son, Don, of the R.C.A.F.

Don, now a Flying Officer, has finished two tours, was wounded three times and is serving in Canada. The fact that Don is off operational flying at the moment hasn't stopped his dad from wanting to fly. O'Driscoll Senior has passed one stiff air crew medical test and has only one more hurdle before he starts his training.

"Don thinks I'm crazy as h . . . but he's not going to have all the fun in this war," said O'Driscoll, who likes to be called Joss for Joseph. The Newfoundlander had hoped to make the first father and son bomber crew team in the air force. He is a big blond man who gives the impression of physical hardness.

O'Driscoll came overseas in 1942 with his own Newfoundland coastal artillery battery with the rank of major. When he found they wouldn't let him go any farther overseas because of his age, he transferred to the R.A.F. with the idea of joining his son, then on his second tour with the R.C.A.F. piloting Halifaxes. As a pilot officer the father went to the Newfoundland Beaufighter squadron as Intelligence Officer.

There was a delay in lining up the air gunners' courses, so when there came a chance to go to North Africa, O'Driscoll took it, landing in the Mediterranean area last February. He went through the Tunisian campaign with a fighter group, skipped the Sicilian show and came on to Italy.

Veteran of First Great War.

Joss knows his way around wars pretty well. He went to the last one as an infantryman at the age of 15 and was a veteran, wounded, with two years of active service behind him at the age of 18. He served with a Newfoundland regiment.

He received his wound at Arras in 1918 when a shell came through the muscles of his right arm. His son, Don, received an almost identical wound when bringing his bomber home from the Ruhr one night in 1941. Don finished his second tour when he was hurt in a Halifax crash in the Middle East. He now has A-1 category once more. On his way back to Canada, he stopped in Johannesburg and met a Canadian girl who was nursing there. He married her, but Joss can't remember her name off-hand. Don is 23. There is another son, Francis, who is 12 and a small daughter, Wynnan, eight.

"Yes, I'm pretty fit," said O'Driscoll, when asked about the medical test. "They gave me a pretty stiff test because they said I should stay and be an intelligence officer."

He wears the badge of his Newfoundland battery on his air force battledress.

Washington, Feb. 24 — (AP) — Senator Alben W. He shouted his anger at the President's veto message and at one time termed Mr. Roosevelt's own tax goals as "fantastic."

As the Kentuckian gave up the leadership he has held since 1937 he turned to his colleagues and shouted:

The Red Carnation

CHAPTER 19

"He come in here to read papers, sir," and the boy motioned to the pile beside the chair. "Then telephone rings. I go to it, and the lady she say—"

"What lady?"

"Sorry. I do not know that, sir."

"Well what did the lady say?"

"She say to tell doctor she want to speak to him."

"Didn't you ask her name?"

"Yes, sir, but she say tell doctor a patient wish to speak to him. So I tell him and he go to telephone."

"Did you hear what he said?"

"No, sir. I go back to finish cleaning up kitchen. Then I put on street clothes and come in here and ask Dr. Metcalf if anything else wanted. He say no, and I tell him I go to movie. He say all right."

"What time was that?"

"It was nine o'clock when I got to movie."

"Which movie?"

"Do you often go to the movies?"

"No, sir. But tonight they have picture of war in China and I want to see."

"All right," said Duffy. "What was Metcalf doing when you got back?"

"Him no here, sir. Place all dark."

"He hadn't gone to bed?"

"No, sir. I look to see."

"Why did you do that?"

"So I know whether to put bolt on outside door."

"And when you found he wasn't in bed, you left the bolt off. Is that it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then what did you do?"

"I undress and just going to bed when you ring."

Duffy nodded and glanced at Tony.

"He seems all right," said Tony. "Metcalf probably went to see the patient who phoned him. By the way, Joe," he added, "do you know where the doctor's secretary lives? Miss Scott, I think her name is."

"So sorry, sir," answered Joe, his eyes on the floor. "I not know."

Tony, looking at him, wondered if he was telling the truth.

"May I ask question please?" inquired the boy.

"Go ahead."

"Has there been accident to Dr. Metcalf?"

"Not that I know of."

"Thank you, sir," and the boy's face cleared a little.

Duffy glanced at his watch. "It's twelve o'clock," he said. "He ought to be back pretty soon."

"Perhaps he's in his office," Tony suggested "Maybe it was there he saw this patient. At least we might have a look down there while we're waiting."

Duffy looked at him uncertainly. "You know very well, Tony," he said, "that I haven't got any right to search a place without a warrant."

"But what harm would there be in going down to see if Metcalf is there?"

"All right, all right," the detective agreed. "But don't think I don't see through you."

"Metcalf told me this was a duplex," Tony added, carefully avoiding any argument. "Where are the stairs, Joe?"

The stairs led downward from a little hall next to the library, and the boy switched on the light and stood watching them as they started down. At the bottom was a door that led directly into Metcalf's office.

The lights were turned on and Metcalf himself was sitting at his desk.

There was an acrid smell of cordite in the air . . .

Duffy strode forward.

Dr. Metcalf was lying back in his chair, his eyes closed. There was a little hole in his right temple from which blood had oozed and clotted. The right hand hung down over the arm of the chair small automatic with a carved and beneath it on the floor lay a ivory stock. Near the pistol was an empty shell.

Duffy took one glance at all this, caught up the desk phone by one end, dialed Headquarters and barked in an order. Then he put the phone carefully back in its cradle and looked around.

The door opening into the outer office was half open and he could see that the room was dark. He slipped past the door without touching it, switched on the lights and examined the outer door. It was locked by the autmatic catch. He threw off the catch, opened the door, tied his handkerchief carefully over the knob, and came back into the inner office.

Tony was standing there by the desk, gazing down at something. "This is interesting," he said, and motioned Duffy to look.

Beside the dead man, secured to a folding shelf of the desk, was a typewriter, a number six Underwood. In the carriage was a sheet of paper evidently torn from a pad on the desk, and on the paper was written with a black ribbon in elite type:

> Jack McKibben deserved all he got, but the police, I suppose, would call it murder, and I have decided that this is the easiest way out.

Silently Tony pointed to the "g" in "got." It had a nick across the tail.

"I guess that settles it," said the detective.

Duffy's call to Headquarters had set the police wheels whirring. Within a minute the alarm was on the radio and the two cars nearest the scene were speeding toward Central Park West.

"I guess that settles it," the detective had said, and almost before the words were out of his mouth the radio men were there. Then came the precinct captain and two policemen, then two detectives from the homicide squad together with a stenographer, then the photographer and the fingerprint man together, then the medical examiner—the routine set-up for a homicide case.

"Died instantly," said the examiner, after a look at the body. "Been dead between two and three hours. Shot with a small-calibre pistol—a .25 probably—held almost against the right temple. Bullet still in the head somewhere. Send the body over to the mortuary and I'll get it out for you."

The fingerprint man was soon ready to announce his discoveries. Metcalf's prints were on the ivory stock of the automatic, on the keys of the typewriter, on the sheet of paper in the carriage, on the drawer of the desk, the telephone and the knob of the door leading up to his living rooms. His prints were also on the door into the outer office and the one into the hall, as well as those of another person, probably a woman.

"His secretary," suggested Tony. Her prints were also on the desk and the typewriter in the outer room. There was a medley of prints on the arms of the chair in front of the doctor's desk where his patients usually sat and Tony reflected that his own were no doubt among them.

"Let's see what is back here," said Duffy, and opened a door in the wall at the rear of the desk. The room beyond was in darkness and he switched on the light.

It was a large chamber and the light which illumined it from some concealed source was an eerie blue which threw queer shadows across their faces. It was bare of furniture except for one chair, a cabinet of polished wood at one side of the door, a small night table and a low couch in the middle of the floor—an extraordinary couch, at least eight feet square, without headboard or footboard. The single chair stood at its head, and the table at its side.

Along the wall opposite the door stretched a steel cabinet with four heavy doors. Duffy tried one of them and found it locked. There was a door in the other wall opening into a closet in which half a dozen surgeon's white gowns were hanging. On a shelf was a pile of sheets.

"See what you can find," said Duffy, and the fingerprint man went to work. "Look at that couch. And these blue lights."

"They're supposed to be soothing," said Tony. "I wonder what these other switches are for?"

There were six switches on the wall beside the door, and Tony turned them on, one after another. There were green, red, yellow and purple lights. Duffy stood and watched him.

"It isn't altogether a fake," Tony remarked. "Color does have a very definite effect on the nerves—and an arrangement like this also impresses the patient. He thinks he's getting his money's worth."

"'He'?" snapped the detective. "No 'he' ever came into this den of iniquity."

"We know one who did: Professor Terry."

"It may be all right," Duffy growled, "but I can tell you one thing—I'd never let any woman of mine come into this place. I'd be afraid she'd get altogether too relaxed. What is it, Schultz?"

"No prints here except Metcalf's and the same dame's we found outside," the fingerprint man reported.

"Okay," Duffy nodded. "I want you to be here tomorrow morning when his secretary blows in and get her prints—say eight-thirty. I'll be here, too. That's all for tonight."

"Wait a minute," said Tony. "Have you got your paraffin outfit along, Schultz?"

"Sure."

"Why not let him make a nitrate test, Jim?" Tony suggested.

Duffy gave him a queer look. "Always suspicious, aren't we?" he asked. "But I'm not objecting if it will make you any happier. Go ahead, Schultz. The right hand will be enough."

While Schultz was getting his paraffin melted over a little electric heater which he plugged into an outlet near the door, Duffy went carefully through the dead man's pockets, the precinct captain listing the various articles as the detective drew them forth and laid them on the desk. There was a billfold with sixty dollars in five and ten-dollar bills, a dollar or two in loose change, a fountain pen, a pencil, a bunch of keys, a penknife, a handkerchief. In one of the vest pockets was a single small Yale lock key, and in another a thin gold watch.

"I'll keep the keys," said Duffy, and dropped them into his pocket. The other articles were sealed up in a heavy manila envelope, docketed and initialed by the detective, and turned over to the captain.

Schultz, meanwhile, had been proceeding with the nitrate test, and Tony watched him closely. In a minute or so Schultz picked up the paraffin mold, held it under the light and looked into it. "There you are, chief," he said, and pointed to a sprinkling of dark blue specks on the inside of the mold. "There's your nitrate. He fired the pistol all right."

"I was sure of it," said Duffy. "I hope that sets your mind at rest, Tony."

The columnist took the mold for a minute and looked at it. His mind was by no means at rest, but there could be no mistaking those dark blue specks.

"That seems to settle it," he agreed.

Duffy turned to the precinct captain. "I guess we're through with the body, Jerry," he directed. "You can send it over to the mortuary. I wish you would leave a man on the door here and keep two down in the lobby till I send for them. I'll come around to the station as soon as I've looked things over here."

"All right, Jim, I'll wait for you," said the captain and called the stretcher-bearers in from the outer room. In a moment the body was covered with a sheet and borne away.

"You're not looking very happy," Duffy remarked.

"I can't understand why he should kill himself."

"We'll find out why. I'm going to see the hotel people first. Then we can take our time in here."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was reading his paper, saying to ma, By gollies some of those top gents over in Europe seem to be quite willing to see the remnants of civilization pushed over the cliff as long as they can save their own skins or feather their own nests, he said, and ma said, It isn't even necessary to go so far abroad. I could tell you of a tipical incident this very afternoon in this very house, she said.

The Gils had a meeting here today, didn't they? pop said.

The Gils being short for Give Lifts to Servicemen, and ma said, They did, and my dear the meeting had hardly been called to order when Mary Deeter flashed open her autograph book claimed the right to wear a gardenia on her uniform for 2 days for having given a lift to a general. I think I told you that according to the buy-laws of the organization we're entitled to wear a carnation for a day if we pick up any officer up to the rank of captain, and a rose for a day for a major or a kernel, and a gardenia for 2 days for a general. Well, Mary Deeter had his signature all right, General Malcom B. Moss, the deceitful thing, ma said.

Do you mean there is no such general? pop said, and ma said, Oh yes, and the signature was perfectly genuine, but under cross questioning Mary Deeter was forced to admit that General Moss is a friend of her husband's and he was at their house for dinner and they took him to the station afterwards in a taxicab. Well my dear, we voted her down in round numbers, but she insisted brazenly that the principal was the same as if she had picked him up on the street, especially since her husband paid the cab fare, and in the end, to keep peace in the organization, we agreed to let her wear a cluster of violets as a special compromize. Dont you think it was broad minded of 'is, under the circumstances, William? ma said.

Pop saying he thought it was, saying it from in back of the sporting page.

O-O-O-H! MY CHAPPED HANDS ARE SO SORE

HERE'S SOOTHING RELIEF —FASTER HEALING

• If your hands get so chapped, so red and rough that they actually feel sore—take a tip from nurses! Get a jar of the Medicated Skin Cream, Noxzema, and apply it frequently during the day and at night. Notice how soothing and cooling it feels. The next day, see if your hands don't already look better!

Noxzema is so effective because it's not just a soothing cream. It's a medicated formula that not only relieves the burning, stinging soreness, but helps heal the tiny skin cuts—helps soften the dry, rough skin and restore normal soft smoothness. Actual tests with chapped hands show that Noxzema helps heal faster...definite improvement often being shown overnight!

Recent surveys reveal that many professional people including scores of nurses (who have trouble with their hands from frequent washings) use Noxzema themselves and recommend it to their patients. # Three Buildings Destroyed by Fire

Montreal, Feb. 24 (CP)—A three-alarm fire today destroyed three buildings on downtown St. Peter Street following a series of explosions in a rope manufacturing plant. There was no immediate estimate of damage but it was believed to run into thousands of dollars.

The fire broke out on the main floor of the Gourock Rope and Canvas Company and spread through the building. Three explosions from stores of chemicals used in treating rope, wrecked the building and sent the flames into the adjoining buildings, a Canadian Industries Limited salt division warehouse, and the building of the Mudge Wilson Company.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 24 (CP)—Industrial and mining groups were slightly higher in the early Toronto session today and the western oils remained steady in the average. Turnover was comparatively small at 277,000 shares for the first three hours.

The gold stocks weakened a bit after mid-day to show losses for McLeod-Cockshutt, Beattie, Aunor, Madsen, Macassa and Pickle Crow. Base metal issues were mainly steady. Waite-Amulet firmed 5 cents to 4.55.

Higher prices ruled in the industrial section for the utilities and steels. Bell Telephone gained a point, the Canadian Steamship lines issues, Laura Secord and Dominion Tar added fractions.

Home Oil gained a few cents and prices were down a bit for British-Dominion, Mid-Continent and East Crest.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Feb. 24. (AP)—Selected climbers were present in today's stock market but profit taking in the recently bounding rails tended to stem the rally which got under way late Wednesday.

Volume tapered after a fairly active start with early dealings marked by sizeable blocks of low-priced issues running to 25,000 shares for Commonwealth and Southern which was unchanged at 5-8.

Speculative and investment contingents still were buoyed by the rebellion of Congress over the tax Bill Veto but buyers turned cautious as it was realized further political complications might have market repercussions. Revival of long-war talk persisted as a prop for armament-rated securities such as the aircrafts.

Canadian issues were mixed, with Lake Shore up a fraction, Dome Mines off a fraction and Canadian Pacific unchanged.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Feb. 24 —(CP)— Cattle trade was slow at about steady prices on the livestock market here up to mid-session today. A few weighty steers brought $11-$12, butcher steers and heifers $10-$11.75, butcher cows $7.50-$9 and fed yearlings $12-$13.25.

The few calves offered were steady at $13-$17.

Hogs were firm at $17.15 with a few at $17.25 dressedweight.

No sheep or lambs were offered.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 80, calves 50, hogs 300, unsold from yesterday were 400 head of cattle.

HOGS

Jolliffe Says Defeat of a Govt. Measure Will Not Constitute Want of Confidence Unless So Defined Before the Division

Toronto, Feb. 24 —(CP)— E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, said today so far as his party is concerned defeat of a government measure in the Ontario legislature would not constitute want of confidence in the Progressive Conservative administration unless the C.C.F. so defined it before the division.

Making his maiden speech in the legislature in the Throne Speech debate, the Opposition leader withheld judgment on legislation forecast in the Speech from the Throne until "we see the legislation itself." But he promised that "to the extent forthcoming legislation does represent progress and reform, we shall support it, we shall welcome it."

He warned Premier Drew that his 37-member government was in the minority in the 90-seat House and "while we do not ask the government to accept direction or dictation from any group; we do suggest it would be common-sense democracy to pay some attention to the views of the Opposition and to pay more respect to the legislative processes and importance of the House.

The C.C.F. position on divisions in the legislature he defined in these words:—

Authorized by Members

" . . . I am authorized to state on behalf of all C. C. F. members, that if, on any division in this House this session, the government fails to receive a majority, that result will not, so far as we are concerned, constitute a vote of no confidence in the administration, unless it is stated in our behalf prior to such division, that so far as we are concerned, the question is one of confidence or no confidence.

"And I hereby invite the Prime Minister, when he speaks in this debate, as I trust he will, to state on behalf of his government what circumstances would be interpreted by him as giving rise to a question of confidence or no confidence."

But if the premier "refuses or neglects to make such a statement, if he insists on reserving to himself the right to interpret the conduct of this House after the event rather than before . . . . then we shall be obliged to conclude that he is not so much interested in stable government in this province as he is in pulling an electoral rabbit out of the hat."

The premier, continued Mr. Jolliffe, "has it in his power to put an end to the rumors which have circulated ever since last summer that his government plans a snap election at the earliest opportunity." The C. C. F. was prepared to fight elections whenever they were called but "this is no time for fast plays and smart political manoeuvres and the public knows it."

Support Progressive Laws

The C.C.F. never agreed to the view that the provinical legislature "could be almost forgotten" during the war. While the conduct of the war rested with the Federal government and while lasting solution for post-war problems could only be reached on a national scale, "constructive provincial measures" could help in winning the war. "And we do not believe that any real solution will be found for postwar problems unless this province adopts, and actually implements, the same bold and progressive policies as are required at Ottawa".

Some of the measures included in Premier Drew's 22-point election program last year and on which legislation was forecast in the speech from the Throne "were in the C.C.F. election platform of 1937" and "it is only natural that we should support progressive legislation. . . . because we have been advocating such measures since the inception of our movement".

However, said Mr. Jolliffe, legislative reform would not "put an end to the fundamental evils in our society".

Previous reforms were "utterly inadequate" to meet the crisis of the depression and he described as a "pipe-dream" any thought that "the next crisis can be met by another instalment of social legislation".

Must Implement Program.

Unless the government moved to implement its 22-point election program, "certain consequences will inevitably follow." Some could have been implemented by executive action without waiting until the legislature met.

"It is not my intention to dwell at any length upon the government's election promises, but the government must very clearly understand that if matters of this kind continue to drift for month after month, the people of Ontario will hear about it, and hear about it every day until they next go to the polls."

Widespread political regimentation existed throughout Ontario and the "administration itself is still indulging in a paraicularly obnoxious form of regimentation which is undemocratic from first to last" by failing to abolish patronage. He quoted from a London Free Press report of a speech in London by Dr. Hobbs Taylor (PC-Huron) which said: "We must have a certain change of jobs in repayment of workers for their long hours of work. In Huron we asked for nine and we already had eight. The ninth was something new and that hasn't been decided yet."

The government, he said, should repudiate Dr. Taylor's statement.

Praised Appointment.

He praised the appointment by the government of the Agricultural Commission of Inquiry to study agricultural conditions in the province. Five fundamental points for agricultural policy were: A floor under prices; refinancing of farm mortgages at low rates of interest; a National Marketing Act; international agreements for the distribution of foodstuffs; more tangible encouragement of co-operative organizations among both producers and consumers.

He spoke at length of labor problems and asserted that the immediate problem of labor was organization and charged that "free enterprisers have placed every possible obstacle in the way of free trade union organization in this country."

There was a long gap between the original promise of compulsory collective bargaining and Ontario's collective bargaining law which became effective last June. He said he would withhold comment on the government's proposal to make the new Dominion labor code effective for all Ontario industry "until we know more about it."

He asked Premier Drew to explain more fully the proposed functions for Ontario House in London, to explain what he said in his "off the record" speech to the British House of Commons, and what proposals the government plans to make in connection with Dominion-Provincial relations at the forthcoming conference between Provincial and Dominion governments.
